80,000 Forced Into C. I. O., Says Rival Leader

Progressive Mine Workers' President Blames 'Pressure' On Labor Board

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

Discrimination against the Progressive Mine Workers of America, A. F. of L. union involved in a bitter struggle with the C. I. O., was laid at the door of the National Labor Relations Board yesterday by Joe Ozanic, president of the A. F. of L. affiliate.

The dynamic 44-year-old witness described the Labor Board's policy in determining the appropriate bargaining unit for coal mines as—in at least one case—"a way out" in behalf of the C. I. O.

Testifying before the Smith Committee, Ozanic urged amendment of the Wagner act so that the board would no longer have the power to fix the size of bargaining units. He suggested, on committee questioning, that that power be left in the hands of Congress.

Forced to Join, He Says

He charged that "80,000 mine workers in various coal fields" have been forced against their will into John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers of America, the C. I. O. affiliate, through pressure of employers and C. I. O. officials.

In the course of an otherwise unexciting day, the committee heard a confidential memorandum read into the record, alleging that an official of the U. M. W. A. had urged U. M. W. A. organizers to "shoot down like . . . a rabbit" the organizers for the rival A. F. of L. union.

The memorandum, addressed to Nathan Witt, secretary of the board, from Philip G. Phillips, regional director at Cincinnati, was dated October 12, 1938.

Tells of Ill Feeling

"If you have never been in the West Virginia coal fields, you are unable to conceive the hard feeling existing between the Progressives and the United Mine Workers," Phillips reported. "The United Mine Workers, at the cost of hundreds of lives and hundreds of thousands of dollars, seven or eight years ago successfully unionized the West Virginia fields.

"They feel the Progressives are interlopers, outlaws. In fact, at the Labor Day meeting in Charleston, Van Bitner (sic) told the United organizers they should treat a Progressive organizer with more contempt than they would a Pinkerton fink, and shoot them down like they would a rabbit. Unless someone steps in, hell will break loose in the West Virginia fields."

"I may remark that the mine owners are playing ball pretty closely with the United Mine Workers . . ."

Ozanic subsequently said that Van A. Bittner is the "provisional president of District 17, U. M. W. A., appointed by the dictator of the C. I. O. and never in his life elected by the U. M. W. A."

Queried by reporters, Bittner said that Phillips' memorandum was "absolutely untrue and manufactured out of whole cloth." He declared that "in the first place, we had no meeting in Charleston, W. Va., on Labor Day, 1938; in the second place, I have never made any such statement."

Bitterness Emphasized

In other memoranda which Edmund M. Toland, committee counsel, offered for the record, Phillips reemphasized the bitterness accompanying A. F. of L.-C. I. O. rivalry in the mines.

On November 13, 1939, he reported to Witt that "there is bound to be

The Neediest Families:

Is a Needy Family On Your Yule List?

By Lucia Giddens

Is your Christmas list complete—if it doesn't include a contribution for one of the 50 Neediest Families in Washington?

Here is a shining opportunity for those generous impulses which most people have at this season. It is not merely a matter of giving Christmas cheer to a needy family—although a contribution will give that abundantly—but it means giving them a future!

The needs of three more families are told here today. They have no other prospect of being rescued from suffering and despair, except through the help that comes to them from generous contributions to The Post's Christmas Fund. Help now will give them a chance to become self-supporting again—the one Christmas gift that they need most. Checks should be sent as soon as possible. Accompanying this article is a statement of how to make your contribution deductable in figuring income tax.

Case No. 32

With four motherless children looking to him for their needs, Mr. K. is out of work. The lack of funds for food and rent means a bleak Christmas for this family, unless some outside help comes.

His wife died in an automobile accident when she was returning from her sister's funeral in another city. Mr. K. managed to keep his home together for his small children, when Mrs. K.'s mother agreed to leave her home and come to Washing-

Hatch Pledges Law to Cover D. C. Workers

Capital Omitted By Oversight From Anti-Politics Act

By James D. Secrest
Post Staff Writer

District government employes will be brought within the provisions of the Hatch act or new legislation governing State employes, Senator Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico, said yesterday.

Explaining that the omission of the District had been an oversight, Senator Hatch said he would attempt to clarify the uncertain position in which Washington city employes have found themselves since the enactment of the Federal law barring political activities of Government workers.

Should the District get a "Hatch act" next session of Congress, the most important political head to fall might be that of Commissioner George Allen, who recently succeeded John B. Colpoys as chairman of the District's Democratic Central Committee.

Advised He Is Exempt

Allen, who was at first convinced that the Hatch act applied to District officials, has been advised that he is exempt. Even though the District were brought under the law, he might escape because of the exemption given policy-making administrative officials.

The Commissioners asked Attorney General Murphy for an opinion as to the applicability of the Hatch act to municipal employes shortly after it was enacted, but they have never received a reply.

An informal "grape vine" opinion emanating from the Justice Department is that the District is exempt because it is not an agency of the Federal Government.

"We'll clarify that when Congress reconvenes," said Senator Hatch. "I certainly think that District employes ought to be placed in the same category as other Government workers.

"It was a clear case of oversight. We so often forget the District when

Grain, Cotton Prices Rise on Drought, War

Short Wheat Crop Expected; Surplus May Be Reduced

By Felix Cotten,
Post Staff Writer

Rising trends in commodity prices expressed themselves in large advances yesterday in wheat, corn and other grains. Cotton continued to rise, although less sensationally than Tuesday.

Impairment of the winter wheat crop, due to the severe Western drought, and uncertainty over the effect of the drought on the spring wheat crop were reflected in an advance of over 3 cents a bushel in December wheat contracts, with distant months, up 5 cents.

Another factor was the lowered estimate of the Argentine wheat crop. The advance in wheat, the price of which passed $1 a bushel for December delivery at Chicago, came in spite of an abnormally heavy Canadian crop and a large carryover in the United States. The carryover at the end of the old season amounted to about 280,000,000 bushels.

In view of the anticipated reduction in the winter wheat crop, Government sources said, there is a considerable reduction in sight in the surplus, which normally would be between 100,000,000 and 150,000,000 bushels.

Even if there is a good spring wheat crop, it is said, the surplus will be reduced 80,000,000 to 100,000,000 bushels. This year's crop is estimated by the Agriculture Department at 739,000,000 bushels.

Shipping Distance Aids

The advance in cotton, it is pointed out, has been in face of a large surplus of American cotton. In August, the world's stock of American cotton exceeded 14,000,000 bales, of which more than 10,000,000 bales were in Government hands. It is understood that about 7,000,000 bales are owned by the Government, while about 3,000,000 bales were held under loans to growers.

20,000 at N. Y. Rally Hear Hoover Plead for War Victims

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 13. — Former President Herbert Hoover and former Governor Alfred M. Landon, of Kansas, told a giant rally in Madison Square Garden tonight that America was appalled by the suffering inflicted upon religious and political minorities in Europe.

Hoover, who flew here with Mayor F. H. LaGuardia from Chicago, made his address after Landon, who spoke from Topeka, declared the Americas' "real weapon of defense" was "a common love for democracy, a common passion for liberty, a common will to mutual acceptance." A capacity crowd of nearly 20,000 persons jammed the big hall.

A man identified by police as Leo Okin, of Brooklyn, was ejected in a flurry of fists—the only disturbance of the evening—when he interrupted a speech by President William Green of the American Federation of Labor that denounced Adolf Hitler and Josef Stalin.

Pleading for aid to Europe's war distressed, Hoover said:

"Happily we are not yet so accustomed to the sight of blood or the cries of the defenseless that our sense of justice has been dulled or the wellspring of our pity run dry. I fervently hope an all-wise Providence will speed the day when these dreadful scenes may be removed from the world."

He paid tribute to the courage of the Finns and Poles and con-

Farm Credit Control to Go To Wallace

Five-Billion Dollar Agency Will Lose Autonomy Under Roosevelt Order

The independent status of the Farm Credit Administration will be abolished and the $5,000,000,000 agency will be placed under the complete control of the Secretary of Agriculture under terms of an order that President Roosevelt is expected to issue this week, it was learned yesterday.

The impending move comes in the face of sharp opposition by the country's largest farm organization and rumors of it have aroused serious concern in New York and Chicago financial circles about the future of the securities of FCA-operated and supervised organizations, The Post learned.

Internal dissension on the question reached the floor of the American Farm Bureau Federation's annual convention in Chicago last week.

Autonomy Was Provided

Although the FCA is now technically a part of the Agricultural Department, to which it was transferred by last spring's reorganization orders, a memorandum of Secretary Wallace, issued with the specific concurrence of President Roosevelt, provided that the agency should retain complete autonomy in administration and policy.

The anticipated Presidential order would undo the provisions of Wallace's memorandum and place FCA in the status of an integrated bureau of the department.

Reason for the order, it is understood, is the desire of Secretary Wallace and other department officials to exercise authority over the FCA comparable to the responsibility which is formally theirs.

Transfer Opposed

FCA officers privately admit the strongest opposition to the transfer, basing their objections on the same grounds as those proffered by the farm organizations, namely, the possible jeopardy of the FCA securities should the agency's resources be intermingled with the Agricultural Department's lending activity.

Agriculture officials, particularly those of the Farm Security Administration, have not hesitated to admit their desire to use the FCA's huge resources in the department's lending program, arguing that the need for rural loans was not being met by the FCA.

Council Opposes Shift

Opposition to making last spring's nominal shift an actual transfer was voiced Saturday in a statement of the National Cooperative Council, sent to its 4,000 farmer-cooperative member organizations.

The statement, outlined last night by telephone from New York City by Council President John B. Miller, urged restoration of the independent status of the FCA.

Miller said that the FCA was organized to make farm loans on "a

Finns Stalemate Russian Offensive; Reported in Thrust At Murmansk Road

By the Associated Press

Helsinki, Dec. 13.—The Finnish army declared tonight the Russian invasion had been brought to a standstill on the Karelian Isthmus after a fortnight of bitter midwinter fighting, and that fiercely attacking Red troops on the Eastern Front had been repulsed in most places.

New attacks by air and sea were turned back today, the Finnish command said, and the 800-mile land front from the Gulf of Finland to the Arctic Ocean remained substantially the same.

"Great losses" to the Red army resulted when the Finns counter-attacked successfully on the eastern front, just north of Lake Ladoga, a communique said. Many prisoners were taken, and five more Soviet tanks and four pieces of field artillery were captured. Other tanks were reported destroyed on the isthmus.

Border Reported Crossed

[Finnish troops were reported without confirmation to have carried the war to Russian soil, striking across the southern part of the eastern frontier and driving toward the vital Leningrad-Murmansk railroad, the United Press said.

[A United Press dispatch from Copenhagen said heavily reinforced Finnish troops were reported laying siege to the strategic town of Salla just above the Arctic Circle, where the Russians were said to have lost 7,000 men. Earlier reports said the Finns had retaken the town, loss of which they admitted Tuesday.

[The Finns, concentrating large forces in an effort to prevent the Red army from reaching the Gulf of Bothnia and cutting Finland in half, hoped to recapture Salla tomorrow, the dispatch said.

[Salla is about 125 miles northeast of the top of the Gulf of Bothnia at the Swedish-Finland border and slightly northeast of the town of Kemijaervi, where fierce fighting was reported.]

Finnish coastal artillery "annihilated" enemy forces attepting to force a way along marshy roads skirting the northeastern shore of Lake Ladoga, the communique said, and transport detachments near Saunaniemi were forced to turn back.

Other coastal artillery, firing from Koivisto Island in the Gulf of Finland, bombarded Red troops operating on the mainland. Koivisto Island is offshore from Muurola on the Karelian Isthmus, where heavy fighting has been reported in the Russian advance upon Viipuri, Finland's second city.

Wedding in Madrid Climaxes Va. Girl's Storybook Romance

Jeanne Butler Bride Of R. A. F. Flier Met On Embassy Job

Out of the storybooks is the war romance of an Arlington girl and a young British air service officer revealed in a wedding announcement here yesterday.

Miss Jeanne Butler, of 1621 North Abingdon street, was married to Squadron Leader James Alonzo Dixon, Royal Air Force, at the American Embassy in Madrid, November 18, her mother, Mrs. Dorothy K. Butler, revealed.

The bride, a native of Washington and well-known here, made the head-lines when she sailed through the war zone to a post with the embassy in Spain three months ago. She wrote back of her adventures en route. These included a thrilling rescue of some survivors of the torpedoed Athenia by the ship on which she was a passenger, and a week's delay in war darkened Paris, due to troops using all available trains.

Then in the quiet of the Spanish summer capital, San Sebastian, she met the young British air attache to Spain. Romance bloomed and after a hurried cable home, the engagement was announced.

With the chance of being ordered away to the front ever present, the prospective bridegroom swept away all obstacles to an early wedding. One difficulty, Mrs. Dixon wrote her mother, was in finding a ring

League to Vote Today on Aid For Finland

Branding of Russia Aggressor, Expulsion Before Assembly

Associated Press Staff Writer

Geneva, Dec. 13.—The League of Nations leadership tonight put up to the Assembly a bold resolution to brand Russia an aggressor against Finland, put weight behind the drive for Russia's banishment from Geneva and even turn the League Secretariat into a coordinating general staff for war material and humanitarian aid for the struggling Finns.

A committee of delegates from 13 nations, including Great Britain and France, approved and submitted the resolution to the Assembly for final action.

The Assembly will meet tomorrow morning to vote on the resolution and since unanimity is not required there, it was expected to be adopted without difficulty.

The overwhelming drive for expulsion, which can be decided only by the Council, was given a strong push by the committee's action.

The resolution, noting Russia's refusal to participate in League efforts to mediate the war with Finland and her "vain" attempt to justify her refusal by declaring she had recognized a "pretended" Finnish government, concluded:

". . . that Soviet Russia not only is guilty of violation of one of the engagements of the Covenant but has placed herself outside the Covenant; that the Council is competent

Envoy to Italy Hastily Called Back by Soviet

New Ambassador Not Given Time to Present Credentials

By Herbert L. Matthews,
Copyright by New York Times

Rome, Dec. 13.—Nicolai Gorelkin, the new Russian Ambassador who has not yet had time to present his credentials, was hastily summoned back to Moscow by telegram and left Rome on Monday, it was learned today.

The Russian Embassy claims it is a mere informative visit without particular significance and that Gorelkin, who had seen Foreign Minister Count Ciano last week, will return to Rome shortly.

However, it is at least a curious coincidence that his sudden recall should come at a time when there are almost daily hostile demonstrations against Russia and when the Fascist Grand Council—without mentioning the entire Italian press—has been issuing warnings to Moscow to keep out of the Balkans. It is logical to assume Josef Stalin wants to know just what the Italians mean and how serious they are

If that is what his visit is about, Gorelkin will doubtless inform his government that Italy means business, for strong measures are being taken to parry the expected Russian thrust should it try to go beyond Bessarabia.

Popular feeling in Italy, exemplified by a series of anti-Soviet demonstrations by student Fascists, has been sympathetic with Finland ever since the Red armies invaded Russia's little neighbor.

"Articulation"

Schools Study Vast Changes To Equip D. C. Pupils for Life

Sweeping changes in the educational program of Washington's public schools, with the aim of better fitting the student for his place in the world, will be investigated by five large committees of school officials, it was disclosed yesterday.

A tentative statement of educational philosophy for the District school system has been distributed to school officers and teachers for study during the coming year.

The five committees will start from this statement of philosophy and investigate the school system along these lines:

Proposed establishment of a unified curriculum from kindergarten through high school.

Classroom techniques, subject matter of courses, textbooks and teaching materials.

Use of informational background, including cumulative records of students and research findings.

Counseling for students by teachers, psychologists, physicians and others.

Orientation of pupils and standards of promotion and retention.

The statement of philosophy, and the committee organization for investigating the educational system, are the products of an "articulation" committee of school officials whose chairman is Assistant Supt. C. W. Holmes.

His committee has been laying groundwork for the detailed investigation for two years. Early this month the statement of an educational philosophy was distributed through the schools and now, officials said, the five committees are organized and ready to start work in the near future. Their chairmen are:

Norman J. Nelson, principal of Woodrow Wilson High School; Miss Elizabeth A. Hummer, supervising principal of the seventh division; Miss A. Grace Lind, fifth division supervising principal; Miss Helen Samuel, commercial subjects teacher at Gordon Junior High, and Mrs. Agnes I. Kinnear, principal, Eliot Junior High.

The statement follows:

We believe that each child is an individual with needs and interests peculiar to himself. He is the center of the educational process. He should be thought of as a whole—mind, body, and spirit. He should learn to appreciate the privileges and to meet the respon-

Davies May Remain Here, Giving Up Post as Ambassador

Ambassador Joseph E. Davies may not return to his post in Belgium, but may be kept here by President Roosevelt for consultation and advice on the European turmoil.

It was learned at the State Department last night that President Roosevelt yesterday talked with Secretary Hull about the possibility of keeping the Ambassador here and will discuss it further with Undersecretary Welles today. Since the President is leaving Washington late today for a week-end at his home in Hyde Park, N. Y., no decision is expected until next week.

State Department officials emphasized that Davies has not resigned as Ambassador and the whole matter is in the study stage. No decision has been reached as to his duties henceforth, either here or in the event he returns to Brussels, it was said. Officials represented the President as considering it helpful and valuable to have Davies here at this time.

His background of service in Russia as well as his more recent tenure in continental Europe, it was pointed out, fortify him with first-hand information surrounding both wars now raging in Europe. In addition, it was said, he is perhaps the only Ambassador in Europe assigned to a nation not at war who could be spared now.

Davies was instructed to return here for consultation on the pending revision of the United States-Belgian trade agreement. Should

Pocketship at Bay

Montevideo, Uruguay, Dec. 14 (Thursday) (A.P.).—A 14-hour running fight between three British cruisers and a German pocket battleship ended shortly before midnight when the badly battered German warship took refuge in neutral Montevideo Harbor with 36 of her crew killed and 60 injured.

Early today the German minister to Uruguay, Otto Langmann, announced that the stricken battleship was the Admiral Graf Spee—not the Admiral Scheer as previously reported.

Commander Wounded

Returning from a visit aboard the ship, the envoy said the dead included a lieutenant and that the commander was wounded. The commander's injuries were said not to be serious.

The disclosure of the battleship's identity was the first definite word that the Graf Spee had been operating in the Atlantic. She, the Admiral Scheer and the Deutschland all are pocket battleships. The specifications of the three ships are identical.

The German minister announced the Scheer probably would be interned, thus giving the British a notable victory by depriving the Nazi fleet of one of its three fast powerful pocket battleships

[That the ship was the Admiral Von Spee was a surprise to military observers, who recalled that the British believed this ship was the pocket battleship damaged in a bombing raid on a German naval base in the first days of the war.—Editor's note.]

The British victory was not without its casualties, however. All three cruisers were damaged, the fast 8,390-ton Exeter so badly that she dropped out of the running battle sometime before noon. Up to midnight she had not been heard from.

But the other two British warships, the 7,030-ton Achilles and the 6,985-ton Ajax, trailed the Graf Spee to her refuge and took up positions just outside the harbor.

Nazis Attacked First

Their guns, hardly cooled from the furious battle, were still trained on the little battleship which earlier in the day had attacked one of them off the coast.

The battle was fought within the Americas' neutrality belt, and much of it was within sight of the Uruguayan shore where the reverberating roar of the great guns was heard and the flashes of gunfire observed.

(Meanwhile, the British admiralty reported another British naval victory in the North Sea, where a Brit-

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

OOMPH BOY OF 1940

Those who have talked with Mr. Roosevelt about the "oomph" or "appeal" of his stepchildren, the 1940 candidates, or their lack of it, think that when he says "vote appeal" or "political it" he means personality or, to put it vulgarly, something like what used to be crudely called "sex appeal."

Harlan Miller

I happen to think that when the electorate is cornered, careless or contented, it often prefers a Coolidge or a Hoover to 190 pounds of oomph or it.

* * * *

But let's accept the President's opinion (for once), assume that a man can't win in 1940 without 'em, and try to rank 1940's candidates on "it" and "oomph," alphabetically, with F. D. R. rated at 90.

* * * *

BRUCE BARTON: Few resist his magnetism. His oomph is gentler than FDR's, but it gets across. Even Democrats like him. Ranking: 80.

BRIGDES: His charm often rasps a little. Humor well in restraint. Will mellow. Oomph: 55.

BENNETT CLARK: Suspected of considerable oomph, but keeps it sternly under cover. Pugnacious for an amiable man. Rating: 70.

DEWEY: A little eager, but undeniable juvenile charm and virility. Disconcerting facial expression from mouth to eyes adds mystery. Oomph rating, 75.

"—measuring his oomph"

FARLEY: Wholesome oomph; makes people beam with approval. Preshrunk "it," long - wearing. Grade, 75.

GARNER: His oomph leaves strong, well-heeled men enraptured. Quite a few immune to it, though. Pre-war type of oomph. Grade, 60.

HOOVER: Grandmother called it oomph. Might flower again under a soft collar. But not exactly what F. D. R. means by "it." Grade, 75.

HULL: A different kind of oomph; might be called majestic or noble oomph. Presidential variety; only jitterbugs immune to it. Rating, 85.

* * * *

LODGE: So much political oomph that he's letting it cool till 1944 or later. Rating, 80.

JOE MARTIN: The kind of oomph that grows on you, works while you sleep. Vice Presidential type so far. Rating, 70.

* * * *

McNUTT: Oomph from his hair to his toes. Not fully tested under fire, but best example of naked oomph. Grade, 85.

JUSTICE ROBERTS: Magisterial oomph, akin to the Hull variety. Makes some Republicans dream of him as ideal candidate. Grade, 80.

* * * *

TAFT: Gifted with Landon type of oomph, not the forest fire or highly contagious type. Rating, 70.

TYDINGS: Similar to the Taft oomph. Maximum range, 125 miles. This type was fashionable under President Buchanan. Grade, 65.

"—oomph rises after election"

VANDENBERG: Unusual combination of hot and cold oomph. Might develop to Rooseveltian or tidal wave variety. Rating, 80.

WADSWORTH: Enormous reservoir of latent oomph. Almost effortless, like Roosevelt's. Proof that much oomph exists undiscovered far from limelight. Rating, 80.

* * * *

WALLACE: Roosevelt underrates his oomph. If he didn't scorn use of oomph a little might outoomph best of 'em. Rating, 75.

WHEELER: Oodles of oomph when he turns it on. Keeps several varieties on tap. Can oomph with either hand. Rating, 80.

There are hundreds of oomph boys scattered across the country, but these 16 have been tested in Washington's crucible.. It takes considerable oomph to get to Washington, and anyone who can reach a grade of 50 in the Capital certainly has a bit of the Clara Bow in him.

* * * *

Coolidge, for example, was elected with an oomph rating of barely 55. But one man's oomph is often another man's poison. (King George, for instance, has an oomph rating of only 45). When a man's nominated his oomph usually jumps 5 or 10 points automatically, and after he's elected it sometimes goes above 100 temporarily before finding its true level.

Borah Insists On War Issue Debate in '40

Senator Says Evasion Would Let G. O. P. in For Sad Defeat

Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, last night declared the Roosevelt foreign policy and foreign questions would be the "most thoroughly discussed" questions of the 1940 campaign.

He warned the Republican Party that any effort to eliminate or minimize those issues would be "a frightful mistake" and result in a "humiliating retreat" long before the election.

His statements were contained in a letter to Allen W. Dulles, a delegate to the 1919 Paris peace conference and now said to be an adviser to Thomas E. Dewey.

The Senator said he had seen press reports that Dulles, at a luncheon of the executive committee of the New York State Republican Clubs on December 9, had "advised against a campaign on foreign policies and favored eliminating foreign policy questions as issues in the campaign."

Criticism to Continue

Other prominent Republicans, Borah said, had urged the same course. This recalled that Alf M. Landon has, in general, been supporting the Roosevelt policy.

But Borah made clear that he intended to continue criticizing that policy during the coming campaign. He was one of the leaders of the unsuccessful fight in the special session of Congress against the Administration-sponsored amendments to the neutrality act.

Referring in his letter to the foreign questions, he said that "if an effort were made to eliminate such issues, or to minimize them, the only result of the effort, in my opinion, would be a humiliating retreat far this side of the middle of October.

"Any such effort would be a frightful mistake from a purely strategic standpoint and would be worst than a mistake from a moral standpoint."

Security Involved

Borah said that he believed the question of national security was wrapped up in the country's foreign policy, adding that he did not see how such weighty problems as the budget, taxes, public expenditures and other questions could be intelligently discussed without having a sound and well understood foreign policy.

"There will be no issues overlooked in this campaign by the voters," his letter continued. "They have passed through a period in which they have lost their homes and there are now millions of them out of work. They know the effects of the creeping paralysis of taxes and expenditures. They have not forgotten the propaganda which led us into sacrifice in a foreign war.

"They are fully advised and fully alive to all of the varied phases of the political and social conditions of this country. They expect their leaders to have the ability and willingness to grapple with the problems which are of such vast concern to them—and there is none of more concern than that of our foreign policy."

Boston, Dec. 13 (AP).—In New England on a "good will" tour, Senator Taft, of Ohio, centered a bid for sectional support of his Republican Presidential nomination aspirations today upon demands for a balanced budget through a 30 per cent cut in expenses and for elimination of "evil" governmental regulations "stifling" business.

In a series of speeches and interviews, he concentrated on those two issues and suggested they could be accomplished best through a broad study of government by a group of "practical" businessmen and administrators, including "perhaps some of these Republican Governors who have done such a good job in their States."

Taft maintained that such a study would show where cuts from 25 to 50 per cent could be made in governmental departments to produce a balanced budget of between seven and seven and one half billions, and at the same time consolidate or eliminate overlapping and "conflicting" Federal bureaus.

Answers Prize Offer

Commenting on President Roosevelt's offer of a handsome prize if Taft would furnish him with a full bill of particulars on how to balance the budget in two years, the Ohio Senator asserted "if it can't be accomplished in that time, it can't be done in 20 years."

He said he would "just as soon claim" the prize President Roosevelt offered at his Washington press conference yesterday, but added "it would take six months to make a complete study to show in detail where it could be accomplished."

Firms Breaking Banking Ties, Inquiry Told

Corporations Dictate Syndicate Members, Bostonian Testifies

Managing officers of corporations are falling more and more into the habit of dictating the membership of investment banking syndicates handling their security issues, George D. Woods, vice president of the First Boston Corporation, New York, told the Monpoly Committee yesterday.

Peter Nehemkis, Securities and Exchange Commission attorney conducting the committee's investment banking inquiry, agreed there was a definite trend in this direction.

Nehemkis said the trend showed corporations were assuming a more independent attitude and were throwing off ties of long standing with investment banking houses.

Woods cited the procedure followed recently by the Public Service Company of Indiana in offering $38,000,000 of mortgage bonds and $10,000,000 of debentures. The president of the company, he said, addressed a letter to each prospective underwriter asking for a certified statement of his financial condition.

Nehemkis exhibited to the committee records which he said were styled "the little black books" in which Harry M. Addinsell, chairman of the executive committee of the First Boston Corporation, listed participations granted First Boston in syndicates headed by other concerns, participations which First Boston had granted other concerns in business which it controlled, profits and other data.

His contention was that these records indicated obligations which First Boston owed other firms and vice versa, but Woods denied this.

Silver Spring Nominees

Mechanized Farms Boosting Relief Load, Says FSA Chief

Migratory Families, Some Victims of Drought or Foreclosure, Find Brief Work Little Chance for Schooling or Health Aid

Bad living conditions among hundreds of thousands of persons in migrant farm families were reported yesterday in the annual report of Dr. W. W. Alexander, Farm Security Administrator.

"Two current trends in American agriculture, mechanization and rural unemployment, are swiftly changing the pattern of farm labor," he wrote. The new way of life for the agricultural worker, he added, "so far does not offer stability of residence, security, adequate income or wholesome environment."

Discussing mechanization of farms, Alexander said the decrease in labor requirements has been in terms of hours, rather than in total number of workers needed. He added:

"Socially, there is no advantage in this greater efficiency unless the seasonably employed workers are able to find other jobs between seasons. . . . Under the present system, the large mechanized farm usually supports its workers only during the few weeks of their employment, and they must depend largely on relief between times. In other words, the taxpayer is subsidizing a labor supply for many of the big commercial farms.

Since 1930, the report said, "hundreds of thousands of families have been pushed off the land" by drought, foreclosure or mechanization. Most of the uprooted families were forced to take to the highway in search of work, and for the most part the jobs they found were seasonal farm jobs, entailing traveling continually from one crop area to another.

"Usually they find little or no provisions for shelter, health protection or schooling," the report continued. "Winter weather brings a sharp increase in cases of pneumonia, influenza, and other pulmonary diseases. The risk of epidemics of smallpox, typhoid, scarlet fever, and similar diseases is a year-around menace."

Two solutions were called for—more stable employment for the surplus workers, "perhaps in subsistence farming;" and decent shelter, steadier employment and a chance to educate their children for those who must continue to migrate.

Completion of FSA camps for the migrants under construction at the end of the last fiscal year will provide camp facilities for more than 30,000 persons at one time. The 32 camps already completed or under construction are in seven Western States.

Under the rehabilitation loan program, the report said, the FSA is "now helping more than 589,000 families to plan and finance their farming operations. Under the farm tenant act it has made loans to 6,180 tenants, sharecroppers or farm laborers to buy farms of their own. Grants for emergency subsistence needs have been made to "hundreds of thousands of families in drought and flood areas."

Altogether, in these efforts to check migration by helping needy families in their own communities, more than 1,231,000 families have been aided.

528,575 Asked Please to Lift Pension Checks

Social Security Board Trying to Contact 3 Classes Past 65

By the Associated Press

The Social Security Board is calling 528,575 workers to "come and get it."

John J. Corson, director of the old age insurance bureau, said yesterday that efforts were being made to contact three groups whose social security records showed they are eligible for the initial disbursement of insurance benefits.

The three groups include workers who were paid off with lump sum settlements in the early years of the system and eliminated from future benefits; workers who reached the retirement age of 65 in the last three years but have never filed benefit claims, and workers who will be 65 next year.

Approximately 178,000 persons received lump sum settlements aggregating nearly $10,000,000 in the early years of the act because limitations at that time prevented them from qualifying for monthly benefits. Congressional revision of the act last summer, however, restored the lump sum beneficiaries to the system and opened the way for them to continue accumulating the necessary wage credits to qualify for monthly benefits.

The money they already have received will be deducted from their monthly benefits in 1940. In such cases workers may have to wait two or three months after retirement for benefit checks.

Social security statisticians reported that out of $24,995,837 lump-sum settlements made between January, 1937, and August, 1939, a total of $9,930,751 so-called "live claims" were paid to 178,575 workers. The remainder were death claims.

The settlements averaged from $75 to $80, and if a worker retires and qualifies for a $25-a-month old-age insurance check, he will have to wait three months for the deduction to be made before the checks start rolling in. He will receive the monthly payment then for the rest of his life.

Corson said photostatic copies of the wage records of eligible workers have been prepared and will be distributed to the 400 field offices by December 22 to facilitate the work of informing wage earners about their eligibility.

The first old-age insurance checks will be payable for the month of January, 1940, reaching the recipients February 1. Workers who are 65 or over and have earned at least $50 in each of six calendar quarters up to the time of their retirement will be eligible.

35-Ct. Shoe Wage Opponents Pave Way for Appeal

Opponents of a proposed 35 cents an hour minimum wage for the shoe industry paved the way for an appeal to the courts yesterday when they succeeded, over Labor Department objections, in having the proceedings of an industry committee's executive session placed in the record of a public hearing.

Trial Examiner Robert N. Campbell, conducting a public hearing on the committee's wage recommendation, permitted Joseph M. Klamon, representing shoe manufacturers in the St. Louis area, to introduce the proceedings despite the protest of Rufus G. Poole, assistant solicitor of the Labor Department.

Poole contended any challenge of a wage order should be based on proceedings at the public hearing.

De Kruif Fears Slash in U. S. Health Outlay

Wagner Bill Likely To Be Pruned, He Says, After Seeing Roosevelt

By Gerald G. Gross

Paul de Kruif, public health crusader and author, emerged from a luncheon date with President Roosevelt yesterday pessimistic over the chances of enactment by Congress of a large-scale national health program next year.

Although he withheld details of his extended talk with the President, de Kruif did not conceal his belief that the cost of bolstering the Nation's defenses, plus increasing emphasis upon economy, makes it unlikely that the Wagner bill will be passed at the coming session.

He indicated, however, that Mr. Roosevelt, far from having lost interest in the need for extending Federal aid in public health work, is as hearty a champion of the program as ever but simply feels that its cost will have to be pruned.

10-Year Program

The Wagner bill, which was introduced following the National Health Conference held in Washington 17 months ago, provides for a 10-year program of hospital construction, medical care to the indigent and sickness insurance which would reach a maximum cost of $850,000,000 in the tenth year of operation.

It was learned yesterday that the Interdepartmental Committee, headed by Miss Josephine Roche and whose recommendations are embraced in the Wagner bill, would hold a special meeting here next week, probably Tuesday, to plot its 1940 strategy.

"Although there is hardly a chance that the bill can get through in its present form, circumstances being what they are, I do think a modified plan will be worked out in Congress," said the author of "Microbe Hunters" and other best selling books on disease fighting.

The health measure, sponsored by Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), of New York, was bitterly opposed by spokesmen for the American Medical Association at House committee hearings last spring.

Commenting on the statement of principles issued last month by the A. M. A. with reference to a proposed health program, de Kruif said:

"They didn't say anything the association hasn't said before."

Before leaving for Chicago last night, de Kruif conferred with Surgeon Gen. Thomas Parran, Dr. Charles Armstrong and other research surgeons in the United States Public Health Service on progress which is being made here in the study of infantile paralysis.

New Book on Way

De Kruif is secretary of the general advisory committee of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis.

"Dr. Armstrong's successful transmission, experimentally, of the disease to the cotton rat marks a tremendous research step," said the 47-year-old public health campaigner.

Naval Officer Feared Dead At Annapolis

Man Leaps From Bridge; South River Dragged for Body

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 13.—Dragging for the body of a man, believed to be a Naval Academy officer, was suspended tonight because of darkness but Naval Academy officials said it would be resumed tomorrow.

From clothing and cards in an automobile on the South River bridge from where the man plunged, Police Sergt. Walter L. Musterman tentatively identified the jumper as Lieut. Robert L. Love, a member of the Navy Dental Corps.

Commander Chester C. Wood, aide to the Naval Academy superintendent, issued a statement saying: "Lieut. Robert L. Love has apparently disappeared and all evidence indicates that he may be the individual who was seen to jump from the bridge."

Love is listed at the academy as a member of the Dental Corps.

Sergt. Musterman said a uniform coat bearing the insignia of a junior lieutenant of the Navy and marked with the initials "R. L. L." was found in a car on the bridge. A watch, several watch charms and a driver's registration card also were found, bearing Love's name or initials.

Lieut. Love came here in May from the Naval Dental Corps School in Washington.

Chester Lee, bridge tender, said the man stopped at the far end of the bridge, got out and removed his coat and hat, then dove overboard.

Records of the Navy Department show Lieut. Love was born in Missouri March 2, 1914, and was graduated at Kansas City Western Dental College. He was commissioned in the Navy as of August 15, 1938, and entered the Dental Corps August 27, 1938. He was assigned to the Naval Academy in June, 1939, after graduation at the Navy Dental School, here.

He was understood to have been living at West Annapolis with his wife.

Red Cross, at Peace-Time Peak, Is Lauded by Hughes for War Relief Work

Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes yesterday praised American Red Cross leaders for prompt response to the needs of "brave and courageous people who have been so brutally attacked."

The occasion for one of the Chief Justice's rare pronouncements on public affairs was the annual meeting of the board of incorporators of the Red Cross at the national headquarters here.

The same board session heard from Norman H. Davis, reappointed yesterday by President Roosevelt as national chairman of the Red Cross, that the organization's membership next month reaches a peace-time peak.

A 24 per cent increase over 1939 membership, realized during the roll call last month, will bring membership for 1940 to 7,047,251, he reported.

Chief Justice Hughes said, "We keenly appreciate the fact that the extraordinary situation abroad has imposed great responsibilities on the leaders of the Red Cross."

The organization is meeting problems with high efficiency, he said, "without losing the advantage of the great motive of the emotional sentiment, which must always permeate and strengthen our moves."

John L. Lewis, head of the C. I. O., was elected to fill one of the board's three vacancies. Other new members are Dr. Thomas Parran, jr., Surgeon General of the Public Health Service, and Edward A. O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation.

Davis said emergency contributions to the Red Cross since the outbreak of the European war totaled $273,000, of which more than 90 per cent was allotted to Polish victims. The central committee of the Red Cross has made available an additional $1,000,000, he said, of which $250,000 was designated for Poland.

The chairman, while expressing hope that no major war relief fund campaign will be necessary, emphasized the future course of hostilities might lead to "overwhelming needs."

In this event, he said, "I have every confidence that . . . the response will be as generous and spontaneous as that which has enabled the American Red Cross to meet the great emergencies of the past."

Davis reported Red Cross chapters throughout the country have been engaged for three months in preparing surgical dressings for shipment to France and Great Britain. Gauze purchases so far amount to 900,000 yards, he said.

More than 200,000 sweaters, dresses and hospital garments will reach Polish refugees, he said, in addition to large quantities of bedding, blankets, shoes and underwear.

The 3,700 American Red Cross chapters have been instructed to accept contributions for Finnish relief, he pointed out.

"I feel confident," Davis concluded, "that the American people will want to do everything possible to alleviate the suffering among the war wounded and the civilians who have been forced by the threat of air bombings and marching armies hastily to evacuate their homes."

Reappointed by President Roosevelt to the Red Cross central committee were R. Walton Moore, counselor of the State Department; Maj. Gen. James Carre Magee, Surgeon General, United States Army; Rear Admiral Ross T. McIntire, Surgeon General, United States Navy; John W. Hanes, Undersecretary of the Treasury, and Solicitor General Robert H. Jackson.

Chapter delegates reelected to the central committee Mrs. Henry P. Davison, of New York City, and Henry Upson Sims, of Birmingham.

Bremen Hailed On Docking at Bremerhaven

Crew Hurried to Boats When Sub Was Sighted, Officer Relates

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Dec. 13.—The liner Bremen was tied up at the dock at Bremerhaven at 12:15 p. m. today (6:15 a. m. E. S. T.) it was announced officially tonight.

Previously the whereabouts of the Bremen was established when Dr. Julius Dorpmueller, minister of transportation, arrived at Bremerhaven to congratulate Commodore Adolf Ahrens on bringing safely home the 51,000-ton German ocean pride.

Ahrens charged the Bremen was delayed in New York Harbor last August because the "Americans wanted to help England a little."

"We were held 36 hours in New York by the Americans, who gave as an excuse that they wanted to search the ship for arms and munitions," he said. "Naturally that was merely a pretext. Personally I had the feeling the Americans wanted to help England a little."

En route to Murmansk, the Arctic port of Soviet Russia, from New York, Ahrens said he did not sight a single enemy ship.

Officer Tells Story

Dr. Dorpmueller and other government representatives went aboard, where a ceremony was held in the grand ballroom.

An officer of the $20,000,000 liner told the story today.

When a German plane, accompanying the Bremen, signaled "English U-boat sighted," all the crew except an engine-room watch hurried to the lifeboats and prepared to abandon ship.

Commodore Ahrens ordered full speed ahead on a zigzag course, as the German plane swooped toward the submarine, but, the officer said, the submarine dived in time to escape.

Doubts English Version

Asked whether he believed the English statement the submarine had refrained from torpedoing her because of international law, Commodore Ahrens was quoted as replying:

"As commander of such a ship I do not believe in wartime in such exouses as not wanting to attack a ship for humanitarian reasons."

Dorpmueller told Ahrens that "England's command of the seas is broken. You proved that by this voyage."

The English excuse was but an effort to hide their weakness, he said.

Fight With Scheer Will Not Raise Neutrality Issue

By the Associated Press

Informed Washington circles believed last night that no issue would be raised because of the fact that the battle between the German pocketship Admiral Scheer and British warships occurred within the Pan-American neutrality zone.

It was said that the zone was designed to prevent belligerent activities harmful to American interests. In the case of a naval battle pure and simple, it was doubted that American interests were involved.

An official said that the Admiral Scheer would be within its rights under international law to put into a Uruguayan port.

Britain Indicates Land Drive When She Rules Air

London, Dec. 13 (AP).—Britain hinted today of a great land offensive against the Germans once the Allies have added command of the air to their sea superiority.

Lord Chatfield, minister for coordination of defense, indicated that British and French strategy would be to bide their time until they were sure of themselves in all branches of armaments.

The immediate allied aims, he told a luncheon audience, is to "retain command of the sea and gradually attain command of the air."

"Then when we have done that," he added, "we may have to win a big battle on land . . . It may well be that on the army finally the brunt of fighting will rest."

Soviet Trade Group Leaves Germany

Berlin, Dec. 13 (AP).—A Russian trade delegation, which has been in Germany for seven weeks, left for Moscow tonight and authoritative quarters said a German-Russian deal for exchange of products was expected to be concluded in Moscow shortly.

The Soviet delegation has been engaged in canvassing German industry for products Russia wants in exchange for the raw materials she has promised the Reich under their $200,000,000 trade accord of September.

Her Sistership Cornered by British Cruisers

ish submarine was said to have sunk a German U-boat and to have torpedoed a German cruiser. No details of the engagement were given, but the admiralty said the British undersea vessel was the same which Tuesday allowed the German luxury liner Bremen to escape.)

Battle Reported Off Iceland

(Details of the attack on the German cruiser will not be known until the British submarine reaches port. It was uncertain whether the German vessel was sunk or only slightly damaged.)

(International News Service said the Copenhagen radio reported another naval battle off the south coast of Iceland, where heavy gunfire was heard. There was no confirmation of this report, however, and no ships were sighted due to heavy fog.)

Uruguayan port authorities, nervous because their shore had been exposed all day to the booming 6 and 8-inch guns of the British men of war, and the 11-inch pieces of the German, kept curious crowds at a distance as the battleship dropped anchor, apparently seriously damaged.

The battered warship which had haunted South Atlantic shipping lanes since September when she sank the British merchantman Clement, chanced upon the British cruiser Ajax just after dawn.

The latter was convoying the French merchantman Formosa from Brazil to Uruguay.

The Graf von Spee rushed to the attack, but was momentarily repulsed by the 6-inch guns of the speedy Ajax, and then found herself engaged in an unequal combat with three British men of war instead of one.

The Exeter and the Achilles came up foaming. The Achilles' 6-inch artillery and the Exeter's 8-inch guns spoke in volley after volley.

The Graf von Spee apparently found the Exeter's guns particularly damaging, for she turned her attention from the rest of the pack and devoted her batteries exclusively to the Exeter.

As a result the Exeter was compelled to quit the battle. Meanwhile, the Formosa steamed away to safety.

But although the largest of the three British ships was thus forced out by damage to her sides, the other two continued to concentrate their fire on the Graf von Spee and she took to her heels.

Although built to outrun battleships and to outrange cruisers, the 26-knot von Spee found herself overtaken by the 32.5-knot Ajax and Achilles.

The two lighter cruisers with their total of 16 6-inch guns also were able to throw steel with the Graf von Spee with its six 11-inch guns.

Observers at Punta Del Este lighthouse on the Uruguayan coast saw the engagement, with the Graf von Spee fleeing in a southwesterly direction in evident search of a haven.

Her guns were still blazing, while her enemies' cannonading continued relentlessly as they maneuvered under forced draft.

Armored almost as heavily on their sides as the Graf von Spee, but with lighter protection for their gun turrets, they pursued their prey until she brought up in Montevideo Harbor.

Three huge silent crowds watched the German wounded brought ashore. Bandaged seamen were brought off on stretchers to be taken to a military hospital for treatment.

It was believed the bodies of the dead also would be disembarked here.

Although only the Exeter was reported forced to retire from the battle, the British Legation here said the other two British warships, which have been engaged in South Atlantic patrol duties since the start of the war, also had suffered some damage.

"The Graf von Spee was repeatedly hit," said the legation's account of the fight. Commodore H. H. Harwood, aboard the Exeter, was named as the victorious British commander.

Lighthouse observers at first reported early tonight that one of the British warships in the fight was the 31,000-ton battleship Barham.

An admiralty communique from London failed to bear out this identification, however.

The British version said the battle started at 6 a. m. and continued until after 8 p. m. All day the deadly combat continued down the Uruguyan coast.

Details of the battle were relayed from the lightship officials by radio to shore stations.

South American listeners sat by their radio sets and heard the running story, almost as if they were listening to the round-by-round account of a prizefight.

Rumors of an engagement at sea between the Admiral von Spee and the Achilles persisted throughout the afternoon.

At 4 p. m. (2 p. m., E. S. T.), however, the Punta del Este lightship first sighted the German warship, moving at great speed, with a ship then believed to be the Barham in her wake.

A single shot was heard.

Two hours later, Captain F. Rodriguez, in charge of the Uruguayan port authority, said he sighted, about 20 miles off shore, what appeared to be the Nazi pocket battleship churning westward at great speed. Two British warships, then, were some twenty miles behind their prey.

Just after the warships passed Punta del Este, which projects far out into the sea, the two British cruisers turned westward toward shore in order to take advantage of the setting sun by getting the Admiral Schreer silhouetted against the reflected light in the easteern sky while they were protected by the shadow of land.

This forced the Graf von Spee to change her course disadvantageously to the southeast. As soon as the British warships got a favorable situation, they renewed the heavy firing.

At 8 p. m., with the warring ships no longer visible, the lighthouse at Punta Del Este reported hearing 20 detonations from the sea, lasting ten minutes.

There was a brief pause and the guns opened up, thunderously, at 8:15 (6:15 p. m. Eastern standard time).

By this time the ships were 9 miles off Punta Ballenas, 15 miles down the coast from Punta del Este.

Gunfire echoed along the coast.

At 8:45 p. m. (6:45 p. m., Eastern standard time) intense gunfire again roared out, after a brief period of silence.

By then, however, complete darkness cloaked the ships.

Anniversary for British

Tonight's drama at sea came 25 years to the month after the British Admiral Sir Doveton Sturdee caught the German Admiral von Spee's two armored cruisers, three light cruisers and three supply ships off the Falkland Islands, which lie near the southern tip of Argentina.

All but one German warship was sent to the bottom of the sea.

That was on December 8, 1914, and the victory gave Britain undisputed command of main ocean routes for the rest of the war.

The Admiral von Spee is one of Germany's three swift and powerful "pocket battleships" technically classified as armored cruisers. She was completed January 6, 1936.

The others are the Deutschland, completed April 1, 1933, and the Admiral Scheer completed November 12, 1934.

Dispatches had credited the Admiral Scheer with the sinking of the 5,051-ton British steamer Clement in the South Atlantic more than two months ago. Now it seems probable that this ship and others were victims of the Graf von Spee.

German Trap Suspected

In certain diplomatic circles in Buenos Aires there is an interesting theory that the German cargo boat "Ussukuma," was being used deliberately to decoy the small British cruisers into combat with the Admiral Scheer.

The interest of the British and American embassies in Buenos Aires was aroused by the fact that the captain and other officers had maintained close contact with the German embassy there.

Both embassies had detailed men to watch for the Ussukuma's sailing. The interest of the American embassy is not clear, unless it suspected the Ussukuma of engaging in naval operations within the neutral zone.

The day before the Ussukuma sailed from Bahia Blanca its captain and first mate made another trip to Buenos Aires and conferred at the German embassy. A few days after it left Bahia Blanca four of its lifeboats were found floating at sea.

The fact that a live cat and some of the sailors' personal effects were left in boats indicated the Achilles had hurried away from the scene. The British embassy here finally stated the Ussukuma had not been sunk but captured by the Achilles. It explained that the Achilles believed a submarine near and had hurried away without destroying the lifeboats.

In view of today's developments it is believed the Achilles received word either by wireless or from its own airplane that the Scheer was near. Last Friday the Achilles put into Montevideo for refueling and remained until Sunday when evidently it steamed northward to a rendezvous with the Ajax.

The Deutschland, operating in the North Atlantic, sank the 4,693-ton British freighter Stonegate early in October and shortly afterward captured the American freighter City of Flint which later was released in Norway.

The latest appearance of the Deutshland was off the coast of Iceland when she sunk the 16,697-ton armed British merchantman Rawalpindi November 23 in the biggest naval engagement of the war.

There have been no reports of raiding activities by the Graf Spee. The British reported on the second day of the war—September 4—that their planes attacked her during an air raid as she lay off Kiel, Germany.

18 Lost on Danish Ship

By the Associated Press

Belated word of the destruction of a Danish freighter with a loss of 18 lives and the torpedoing of a British merchantman shared the spotlight of the war on the North Sea yesterday.

An exhausted sailor, clutching the body of a ship's offier, was rescued by an Aberdeen trawler after drifting four days on a raft. He said the 1,339-ton Danish freighter Magnus sank last Saturday after striking a mine in the North Sea. Danish marine authorities said he was the only survivor of a crew of 19.

700 Russians Feared Dead In Shipwreck

Japanese Save 395 From Soviet Steamer In Pacific Storm

By the Associated Press

Wakkanai, Hokkaido, Japan, Dec. 13.—The blizzard-blinded wrecking of the Russian steamer Indigirka off Hokkaido, northern-most of Japan's main islands, was feared today to have cost the lives of more than 700 Russians, many of them women and children.

The heavily laden vessel, built in the United States 19 years ago and sold to Russia in 1938, was operating in the Soviet fishing service when she went aground yesterday off the perilous Hokkaido coast.

Aboard were about 1,100 persons, fishermen with their wives and children and a crew of 39.

Tonight 180 bodies washed ashore across a 4-mile area of Hokkaido while surging waves prevented efforts to reach the half-sunken Indigirka.

The Japanese ship Karafuto Maru reached port today with 395 survivors who knew nothing of the fate of their comrades.

The wreck occurred on one of the sea routes between Vladivostok and the Kamchatka Peninsula.

British Planes Damage 2 Nazi Airboats

Rear Gunners Hit; Machine-Gun Bullets Spray Fuselages

By International News Service

London (Thursday), Dec. 14.—Two big German Dornier flying boats were attacked and severely damaged in a spectacular sky battle over the North Sea with two British fighting planes, the air ministry announced early today.

Although neither of the German ships was brought down, the admiralty said, both rear gunners of the Nazi planes were hit and the fuselages were sprayed with machine-gun fire.

It was believed the two British ships were part of an air patrol program just announced as an additional defense against mine-laying German planes.

Under this program air patrols will be carried out over seaplane bases on the German islands of Sylt, Borkum and Nordeney to interrupt activities of mine-laying aircraft.

It was understood these patrols are made up of long-range reconnaissance and pursuit planes.

French Los, Regain Outpost

Paris, Dec. 13.—More information available today confirms earlier impressions that the action yesterday on the Rhine-Moselle front between the Warndt Forest and the Saar River was sharp and obstinate.

The Germans stormed and captured an outpost; they were eventually driven out, but they took with them about ten prisoners. The position was then reoccupied by the French.

The importance of the minor action lies in the methods employed which bear out recent indications of greater aggressiveness on the part of the Germans.

Today's French G. H. Q. communiques completed the earlier report of the action as follows:

"No. 201 (morning). Patrols were active in the central portion of the front."

"No. 202 (evening). In the course of the series of engagements which occurred yesterday to the west of the Saar River one of our outposts was captured by the enemy who took about ten prisoners.

"Our line was quickly reestablished as announced in the evening communique of December 12.

"Today was quiet on the front as a whole."

Although large scale operations still seem ruled out by weather conditions there is renewed talk of "some sort of offensive" before the year is out.

Nazis Claim Position Disabled

Berlin, Dec. 13 (AP).—The German high command reported today the disabling of an Allied position on the western front with the capture of a number of prisoners.

The German communique said:

"In the west, local scouting, troop and artillery activity. In the region southwest of Saarbruecken, a reconnaissance squad disabled an enemy position on French soil in the strength of one officer and ten men. The enemy lost five men and one officer, and 16 men were taken prisoner. The German squad returned without losses."

Japanese Claim Readiness to Settle Future U. S. Relations

By Hugh Byas.
Copyright by New York Times.

Tokyo, Dec. 13.—Japan, in her forthcoming negotiations with America, intends to "take care not only of the protests the United States has made in the past, but will also look toward a constructive adjustment of future relations between the two countries.

In thus summing up, Yakachiro Suma, spokesman for the foreign office, today impugned the accuracy of newspaper reports from Washington, which declared that the difference between the position taken by Admiral Kichisaburo Nomura, Japanese foreign minister, and that of Ambassador Grew was that Admiral Nomura had offered to settle all outstanding claims, while the United States Ambassador demanded guarantees of American rights in the future.

Some observers here feel that the newspaper reports from Washington and the foreign office spokesman's denial are both accurate, but that they do not go far enough.

Cling to "New Order"

The Japanese are prepared to guarantee American rights, but only within the framework of the "new order" which her army is building in China. The United States considers the "new order" as creating a closed economic status in China which is incompatible with the principles of "the open door"—affording equal opportunity for all.

The Japanese aim in the Nomura-Grew conversations is to show the United States that American interests are as safe under Japan's "new order" as they are under China's alleged "lack of order." So far, observers believe, little progress has been made in this direction.

Japan's government is taking up every case mentioned by Grew or by American officials in China where protests have been made.

Suma added that Grew has not raised the question of the opening of the Yangtze River. He admitted that a whole year had passed without an answer to the American notes but added that hostilities with China were still continuing. He hoped that a new commercial treaty would be written, but continued to give the impression that Japan expects the first move to be initiated by the United States.

"American business," he said, "will suffer as well as Japanese business by the lapse of the treaty, but a nontreaty situation is not necessarily a nontrade situation."

Suma confirmed that Japan would open negotiations with Soviet Russia January 10 looking toward a trade treaty.

Suma admitted the Russian market "presently" was insufficient to replace that of America, but said, "if she cannot buy from one country, Japan should turn to another."

The spokesman said Japan hoped to begin talks in Tokyo for a new pact governing Japanese fisheries in Russian waters, while trade negotiations were pursued in Moscow, and the outer Mongolian-Manchukuo border was being defined at Chita.

Foreign Minister Nomura has not received a reply fro Russia on his overtures for renewal of the fisheries pact, which expires at the end of the year.

3 Red Army Columns Point To Sweden

Scandinavian Countries Anxiously Watch Drive Toward Bothnian Gulf

By the Associated Press

Copenhagen, Dec. 13.—Scandinavian countries anxiously watched tonight the signs of a great Russian drive through the middle of Finland and to the Bothnian gulf. Northern diplomats were worried over reports that a vast Red army was being thrown into the drive.

Of particular concern to Norway, Sweden and Denmark was the progress of three columns of Russians.

One column apparently was moving southwest from the Arctic port of Petsamo in the direction of Rovamieni, just above the Gulf of Bothnia near the Swedish frontier.

Another column, after taking Markajarvi, appeared headed for Kemijarvi and thence to join the northern column at Rovamieni. Kemijarvi is in about the center of Finland.

The third was pressing westward from Suomussalmi toward the Finnish port of Oulu on the Gulf of Bothnia.

If the three columns accomplished their objectives, they would face the Swedish border.

Unofficial Finnish reports today said the Russian drive had been checked in the Markajarvi and Kemijarvi area, and some unconfirmed reports even said the Finns had recaptured these two towns. Official Moscow communiques, however, said the Red army had advanced steadily on that front and held Markajarvi.)

Prospects for Military Aid Dim

Prospects of foreign military help for the Finns, however, seemed no brighter after Sweden's new coalition government announced it shared a popular desire to help Finland, but at the same time declared Sweden's neutrality one of its most vital aims.

Denmark previously had announced her neutrality in the Russian-Finnish conflict.

Popular feeling in the Scandinavian countries, nevertheless, was increasing in favor of outright armed assistance, particularly in Sweden.

Foreign diplomats in the Scandinavian countries, trying to evaluate the complicated situation, pointed out that if Norway and Sweden yielded to popular emotion and flung themselves into the fight for Finland, they might be playing into Germany's hands.

The theory in these quarters was that if Russia should become involved in a war with the three northern countries it would be good insurance for Germany in the event of a sudden rupture in German-Russian relations.

On the other hand, diplomats said, if the Scandinavian countries clung to neutrality out of fear of playing into Hitler's hands, they might discover too late—after the conquest of Finland—that they had played into Russia's hands.

Denmark Feels Safest

Of the three countries, Denmark felt the safest. She has a nonaggression pact with Germany and Danes believed Hitler wasn't likely to allow Russia to seize the gateway to the Baltic.

Appointment of Christian Gunther, former minister to Oslo, as Swedish foreign minister to replace Richard Sandler was the principal cabinet change.

Sandler, in office seven years, recently incurred Russian and German displeasure when he advocated Swedish-Finnish fortification of the Aaland Islands in the Gulf of Bothnia, which Russia opposed. Charges were made in the German press that he favored the Finns against the Russians.

In addition to Premier Hansson and Gunther, the cabinet lineup is K. G. Westman, minister of justice; P. E. Skold, defense; E. J. Wigforss, finance; A. A. Pehrson-Branstorp, agriculture; F. G. Moller, social affairs; Gustaf Andersson, transportation; J. sta Bagge, education; J. E. Domo, commerce; Hermann Eriksson, economy, and Nils Quensel and S. Bergquist, ministers without portfolio.

League to Vote On Aid for Finns

under the terms of Article XVI of the Covenant to decide the consequences arising from this situation."

The resolution then recommended that the Council sit to consider the "question"—by implication, expulsion.

In a previous section the resolution specifically called the Russian invasion "aggression" against Finland.

The resolution itself was regarded by diplomats as the strongest that had come out of the League since it tried to crack down on Italy with sanctions in the Ethiopian war. In that case, however, the League did not eject, but declared Italy the aggressor.

One of the clauses of the resolution carried immense potential punch.

After urging the member states to do everything they could to give material and humanitarian help to the Finns, the resolution continued:

"The Assembly authorizes the secretary-general of the League to lend the aid of his technical services for the organization of assistance to Finland as outlined above."

One part of the resolution empowered the League secretary-general to invite the United States to co-operate with League States in helping the Finns. The United States was not mentioned specifically, but in Geneva's official language the phrase "nonmember states" is almost synonymous with the United States.

China's veteran League diplomat, Wellington Koo, whistled when he saw the phrase to coordinate League help for Finland.

"China got nothing like that," he said. Koo fought for the same thing but got only a wordy resolution and little practical help.

Finn Not Too Optimistic

The so-called "authorization" to the League Secretariat will enable the League powers to turn the secretariat into a coordinating committee or general staff to aid in shipment, financing and other activities in getting arms, munitions, planes and medical supplies to Finland.

The Finnish delegate, Rudolf Holsti, commented:

"It could mean all or nothing—we must wait and see. As a resolution it is excellent, but we must see what its execution amounts to."

Jacob Surtis, Russian Ambassador to France, left Geneva and went back to Paris this morning.

His aide said he "saw the handwriting on the wall."

League procedure artists meantime decided China will not be reelected to her seat in the Council until after the body votes on expulsion of the U. S. S. R.

This would save China the embarrassment of voting on the expulsion of a League member from whom she has received aid in her fight with Japan.

China, one of the nonpermanent members of the Council, has been declared eligible for reelection. Of the 15 provisional members of the Council, Great Britain, France, Italy and the U. S. S. R. have permanent terms. The other 11 are elected by the Assembly for 3-year ters.

President Indorses 12 Captains For Promotion to Rear Admirals

DUNN REICHMUTH KIDD — FITCH SPRUANCE HEWITT — THEOBALD GYGAX TAFFINDER — TOWERS SHARP BRAINARD

Navy's No. 1 Flier, John T. Towers, on List; 81 Commanders Selected for Captains, Including Rosendahl, Airship Expert

President Roosevelt yesterday approved the selection of 12 captains for promotion to rear admirals, including the Navy's "No. 1 flier," John Henry Towers.

Towers, now holding temporary rank as rear admiral while chief of the bureau of aeronautics, is one of the few pioneer American aviators still in active service. A pilot for 28 years, he commanded the Navy's 1919 transatlantic flight and supervised the formation of the naval aviation flying corps in 1916.

Failing to be promoted by last year's selection board, Towers heads this year's list.

A board of ranking admirals headed by Vice Admiral Charles P. Snyder, made the selections, which officers said was more rigorous than in prior years, some 70-odd officers being considered for the 12 appointments.

The prospective rear admirals, who will advance during the coming years as vacancies occur, range in age from 52 to 56, and all are either 1906 or 1907 graduates of the Naval Academy.

Kidd Also Named

Also selected by the board were 81 commanders for promotion to captains.

Other captains appointed rear admirals were:

Ferdinand Louis Reichmuth, captain of the Navy Yard here.

Sherwoode Ayerst Taffinder, battle force chief of staff.

Alexander Sharp, native of the District, and assigned to naval operations here.

Robert Alfred Theobald, chief of staff to the fleet commander.

Raymond Ames Spruance, commander of the battleship Mississippi.

Henry Kent Hewitt, in charge of the Puget Sound Ammunition Depot.

Felix Xerxes Gygax, director of the naval reserve.

Charles Alfred Dunn, industrial manager, New York Navy Yard.

The commanders ordered promoted to captain included Commander Charles E. Rosendahl, famous dirigible expert and Commander Robert W. Hayler, commander of the naval torpedo station, Alexandria.

Sixteen of the commanders are on duty here. They are: Robert Bentham Simons; Alfred Eugene Montgomery, James Cary Jones, jr., Daniel Edward Barbey, Glenn Benson Davis, Palmer Hall Dunbar, jr., Arthur Granville Robinson, Walter Edward Doyle, Carleton Fanton Bryant, Herman Adolph Spanagel, Frank Loper Lowe, John Beresford Wynn Waller, Robert Messinger Hinckley, Anton Bennett Anderson, Forrest Unna Lake and Charles Snow Alden.

Four others make their permanent home in the District, Commander Chapman Coleman Todd, jr., Laurance Toombs DuBose, Samuel Nobre Moore and Roy Pfaff.

The others include: Samuel Jacob Zeigler, jr., Robert Stevenson Haggart, Ingram Cecil Bowell, Elmer Lee Woodside, Thomas Macy Shock, Adolf V. Schevan Pickhardt, Norman Campbell Gillette, George Dickson Hull, Paul Hendren, Wilbur John Ruble, John Lesslie Hall, jr., Charles Jefferson Parrish, Oliver Lee Downes, Paulus Prince Powell, Leo Hewlett Thebaud, Henry Albert Seiller, Robert Dudley Kirkpatrick, John Henry Buchanan, Also, Laurence Wild, Joseph Reasor Redman, Theodore Davis Ruddock, jr., George Barry Wilson, William Keen Harrill, Greene Williams Dusger, jr., John Marie Creighton, Edmund Weidmann Burrough, Albert Harold Rooks, John Gould Moyer, Richard Lansing Conolly, William Anderson Corn, Thomas John Doyle, jr., Alexander Rieman Early, Kemp Catlett Christian, William Augustin Heard, Thomas Shore McClov, Lyell St. Louis Pamperin, Herbert Ross Hein, George Bamford Ashe, Robert Paul Inrichs, Pat Buchanan, Carlos Augustus Bailey, Wells Eldredge Goodhue, Wallace Benjamin Phillips, Harry Dickson McHenry, Eugene Thompson Oates, Eric Lloyd Barr, Rivers Johnson Carstarphen, Virgil Childers Griffin, jr., Benjamin Perlman, James Chaffin Clark, Robert Archibald Hall, Guy Chapman Hitchcock, Schuyler Mills, Clarence Gulbranson, Carroll Morgan Hall, Campbell Dallas Edgar, Paul Seymour Theiss, Otto Marquard Forster and Leonard Noel Linsley.

Finland Holds Soviet at Bay On Long Front

Troops Are Reported Across Russian Line In Drive at Railway

sector, said the communique, the troops had advanced 105 kilometers (between 65 and 66 miles) from the frontier.

"This area apparently is near Kuolajarvi where one Red army is seeking to drive a wedge through Finland, and would indicate Russian troops had pushed on about 20 miles from the point where they were reported yesterday, at Markajarvi.

Bombs From Clouds

The Red air corps dropped bombs from above the clouds in the vicinity of Hangoe, southwestern naval base, and Tammisaari, 20 miles inland from the tip of Hangoe head, the Finns reported.

Of fighting on the eastern front, the communique said: "The enemy is continuing fierce attacks which for the most part were repulsed."

At the southern end of the front, severe fighting was reported, with Finnish counterattacks launched at Tolvajarvi, 43 miles north of Lake Ladoga.

Exact position of the fighting on the northern end of the front was not reported.

(The Norwegian radio reported, however, that the bodies of six Soviet soldiers were found but 5 miles from the Norwegian frontier near Kirkenes. The radio said the dead Russians probably were part of a patrol which was repulsed after almost crossing the narrow belt of Finnish territory bordering the Arctic.

(Copenhagen dispatches reported great concern in Sweden that a huge Russian army was being massed on this front for a drive along the Arctic Circle to the Swedish border and the Bothnian Gulf. Columns apparently were aiming from Petsamo, on the Arctic; Markajarvi, 200 miles south, and Suomussalmi, 130 miles farther south.)

The Finns were reported by military observers to be in a position to organize counter attacks on the Karelian Isthmus, or southern front, after holding the Russians in check from their fortified Mannerheim line and its outposts.

The Finns said the fighting there today was largely localized, with the principal Russian activity carried out by patrols and tanks, of which several were destroyed.

Finnish aviation machine-gunned and bombed motorized and foot forces at several places along the front.

Persistent rumors give the Finnish air force credit for heavy bombardments of the Murmansk Railway. Rails were reported bombed and the right of way destroyed by bombs in many important sectors.

Salla Reported Recaptured

Helsinki, Dec. 13 (INS).—Field dispatches late tonight indicated Finnish troops have recaptured the strategic town of Salla and stemmed the Russian attempt to cut Finland in half.

(Pasen Stockholm authorities said Salla was evacuated by the Russians under heavy Finnish attack. The town of arkajarvi, about 15 miles southwest of Salla and 55 miles from the Russian frontier also has been evacuated by the Soviet troops, it was said in Stockholm.)

Military experts at Helsinki stressed the importance of Salla as a strategic objective because it was one of the most important Finnish military strongholds, and because the Russians, having taken the town, would then have the advantage of sloping territory to traverse on the way toward Hemijaervi, next major Red army target.

Explosive Factory Blast Kills 15

Bucharest (Thursday), Dec. 14 (AP).—An explosion early today destroyed a cellulose factory, producing military explosives, at Atzarnesti, near Brasov, in Transylvania. At least 15 persons were killed. Chlorine gas released by the blast spread over the area, driving the population to the woods.

Sees Stalin A Doomed Man

inum affair was procured and cut down.

Ambassador Weddell gave his young secretary away, while Mrs. Weddell arranged the wedding. Present at the ceremony were the British Ambassador and Lady Petersen and many of Madrid's diplomatic set.

A honeymoon in London and Paris followed, and the couple are now in Madrid, house hunting.

Unexpected as the news was, Miss Butler's friends here were not astounded. She has been surprising them for years. Since graduating from Trinity College in 1932, she has been a welfare worker, hostess at a local broadcasting studio, written radio script, and served as secretary to a member of Congress.

In 1935 and 1936, armed with letters to the "right people" in many ports, she made a trip around the world by herself. Two years ago, accompanied by her mother and friends, Miss Butler visited Finland, and last spring made a trip to Venezuela as secretary to a welfare mission from the United States.

LaGuardia Urges Uniform Taxes

Chicago, Dec. 13 (AP).—Mayor LaGuardia of New York today suggested a uniform tax system with the Federal Government serving as the collection agency.

In an address at a forum sponsored by the Illinois tax commission, he said that where State and Federal governments overlap in the taxing field, the State should allow the Federal Government to collect the entire tax and then refund to the State its proportionate share.

1½% Wage Tax Is Imposed by Philadelphia

Philadelphia, Dec. 13 (AP).—Philadelphia City councilmen levied a 1½ per cent tax today on all wages and commissions earned in the city.

It is to be collected from all persons here regardless of whether they are residents. The tax is expected to yield $18,000,000 annually and balance the city's budget.

A. F. of L. and C. I. O. union leaders immediately massed forces to attack the ordinance, signed by Acting Mayor George Connell after its 17-to-3 approval by the predominantly Republican council.

Tact and Eye for the Corners Vital in Hotel Housekeeping

Tact, cordiality, a sharp head for figures and a keen eye for dark corners were listed yesterday as the ingredients of success for hotel housekeeping.

Thirty women responsible for the comfort of thousands of hotel guests in the Washington area were offered this formula by Daniel Wathey, manager of the Roger Smith Hotel, speaking to the Washington branch of the National Executive Housekeepers Association. The housekeeper "must please guests by making a cheerful home away from home and must please the management by keeping costs down," he explained.

Mrs. Doris Dungan, of Camden, N. J., national president of the association and honor guest at a luncheon at the Roger Smith, said hotel housekeeping is gaining increasing recognition as an established profession.

"Our work today attracts women of outstanding executive ability and thorough business training," she said.

The association appointed a committee to investigate possibilities of endowing a bed or room in a local hospital as a memorial to Mrs. Margaret Barnes of Washington, founder.

British House Holds Secret Session on War

Peers Urge Peace In Debate Arousing Attack by Halifax

By Wallace Carroll,
United Press Staff Writer.

London, Dec. 13.—The House of Commons, in its first secret session since the last war, tonight debated behind locked doors for seven hours opposition charges the government is bungling the production of vital war supplies.

While the House was in secret session there broke out in the House of Lords a debate concerning peace overtures which threw that august body into an uproar and prompted Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax to reprimand the speakers by declaring they "damaged the nation's cause."

Esme Ivo Bligh, Earl of Darnley, touched off the fireworks by asking whether the government wouldn't take advantage of the offer of King Leopold of Belgium and Queen Wilhelmina of Holland to mediate the European war.

"I am opposed to the defeatism of those who thought there was no remedy except war," declared Lord Darnley. "Understanding, or a reasoned way of approaching the problem, must demand something newer and more efficient in result than the old method of revenge producing victory."

Darnley said Britain had not done enough "in the years after Versailles to conciliate Germany and something of the same kind will arise in the future."

Davies May Stay Here as Consultant

he not return to Brussels, the embassy will be in charge of Orme Wilson, counselor.

Davies, following a conference with Mr. Roosevelt yesterday, called for a third term for the President.

He sounded a slightly different note from Joseph P. Kennedy, Ambassador to Great Britain, who called at the White House last Friday. But the net effect was the same: that the President is the man most capable of keeping the country out of war.

The similarity in statements issued by the ambassadors caused Representative J. William Ditter, Pennsylvania Republican, to ask whether they had first consulted Mr. Roosevelt and were speaking with his approval.

McNutt Angle Is Cited

Ditter assumed that Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt was out of the picture as Administration "heir," due to refusal of New Dealers, led by Secretary of the Interior Ickes, to support him. He questioned whether, in this case, the President "has decided to undertake to smash the greatest of all American traditions and seek a third term."

Davies, like Kennedy, first issued a third-term statement on arriving in New York. As was the case with Kennedy, he merely amplified at the White House what he had said.

Both ambassadors were highly pessimistic over the European war situation. Davies told reporters that "nothing short of a miracle can prevent the European war from being a long and bitter one." He would not make any prediction in terms of years.

"Doesn't Want It," He Says

"I said in New York," he explained, "that with the situation as it is today, a third term for the President is necessary.

"It got my goat to hear on all sides that he could have a third term if he wanted it. That was putting the shoe on the wrong foot. I knew that he did not want it.

"But that is not the point. The question is: who is the man best fitted to keep this country out of this thing when the whole world is on fire. I don't think this is a time to consider the personal wishes of any man.

"America is in jeopardy as it certainly has not been in our generation and probably not since its institution."

Davies conferred with the President and Secretary of State Hull on developments in Europe.

Describing the present war as one of "surprises," he said it may produce still further surprises, both of a military and diplomatic nature. "There are a half-dozen in the bag that you might pick out," he added. But he would not comment on a possible change in the German government.

Rapid Change in Situation

The European situation, he declared, is changing so rapidly that it is imposible to form a fixed opinion.

Davies said he would discuss with State Department officials the revision of the trade agreement with Belgium, the first of the trade agencies to be negotiated. He will return to his Brussels post, he said, when he has been informed his work here has been concluded.

The prevailing feeling among the Allies, Davies asserted, is that it would be "foolish" for the United States to become involved in the war.

German public opinion, he said, apparently has been materially affected by the repeal of the arms embargo. He said there were reports fear of American public opinion had prevented a German drive through Holland and Belgium.

Devies denied reports he might be appointed Secretary of the Navy.

80,000 'Forced' to Join C. I. O., Mine Union Head Tells Inquiry

Harris & Ewing

Joe Ozanic, international president of the Progressive Mine Workers of America, shown as he testified yesterday before committee investigating National Labor Relations Board, charged that John L. Lewis caused the discharge of five men in his union to bring pressure on other employes to join the United Mine Workers riot and bloodshed if something soon isn't done . . . I do know that meetings of the Progressives have been interrupted by mobs from the United Mine Workers and men brutally assaulted."

And as recently as last November 25, he informed the Secretary that "organizers troop down the valleys and shout, 'The Labor Board is pro-C. I. O. and you can't get a hearing.' Of course, we are not responsible for the actions of the United Mine Workers but when they (the Progressives) have been taunted for well over a year now by the United with this battle cry, it is not unreasonable that unless they get a hearing, they may feel that the United know whereof they speak, even though their thought on the matter is entirely unjustified."

Principal complaint against the board by the Progressives' president yesterday springs from its failure to accept the A. F. L. union as the bargaining agent in certain mines where a majority of the workers are A. F. L. members. However the board maintains that not the individual mine, but mines as grouped in mine associations are the proper and traditional bargaining unit in the coal industry. (The CIO has a ajority of workers in many cases where the mines are considered in groups—even though some of the mines composing the group are dominated by the A. F. L.).

Admitting that the Progressive Miners had entered into an association-wide contract in Illinois, where they have a majority of the workers, Ozanic snapped: "What's good for the United Mine Workers in outlying fields is good for us in Illinois—but we think it's wrong."

Blames Alston Case

Ozanic alleged that the board had dismissed repeated petitions from the A. F. of L. union "without hearings" and without giving any reasons. On questioning by Representative Murdock (Democrat), of Utah, he admitted that "apparently" the reason was that the board viewed the Alston case as controlling.

In this case, involving the Alston Coal Co., of Pittsburgh, Kans., the board held that the association to which Alston belonged was the proper bargaining unit rather than the Alston company alone.

Ozanic told the committee that a majority of the Alston employes had quit the C. I. O. for the A. F. of L., but after the board's decision, most of the workers went back to the C. I. O. "to save their jobs." He accused John L. Lewis of bringing "pressure to bear on Alston to discharge some of its A. F. of L. employes.

Holds Facts Ignored

Banging the table with his fists, Ozanic shouted that in the case involving the Acme Semi-Anthracite Coal Co., of Williams, Okla., "the board didn't give anybody an opportuniy to bring out the facts."

He charged the Labor Board with responsibility for a situation in which, he said, "all the men employed for years in the Williams mine without complaint are out of jobs today while the mines are working full force with imported labor."

He said that the board's dismissal of the A. F. of L. petition to be recognized as the proper bargaining agent in this case was apparently based on the Alston decision; but, he added "it was the plan of the National Labor Relations Board as a way out" in behalf of the C. I. O.

In another case, Ozanic said his union had filed its petition with the board on February 7, and the case has "never been heard, tried, decided."

"We failed to receive any consideration from the NLRB whatsoever," he stormed, adding that a telegram to J. Warren Madden, chairman of the board, "failed to receive so much as the courtesy of a reply."

Ozanic declared that the board's regional director had informed him that, on the strength of the Alton decision, "you can expect all your West Virginia cases to be dismissed without a hearing.'

Board Aide Urged Hearing

In memoranda Toland read to the committee, Phillips allegedly notified the board secretary in Washington last June that "I may say I am very troubled about how to sit on the lid in the West Virginia coal cases." In a message to the assistant secretary in August, he said: "I have not changed my original impression that a hearing would do more to clean up the West Virginia coal situation than a straight dismissal."

Phillips wrote to Witt last May: "I suppose if we have to go after anybody, we ought to go after the Carter Coal Co. just for the sake of letting Mr. Pierce Butler write a brilliant decision in the event we get up to the Supreme Court."

And in June: "I attach hereto a copy of a letter I received from Joe Ozanic, of the Progressive Mine Workers. In view of the flowery language you might wish to put it in the Senate puff file."

When Ozanic entered the committee room in the Old House Office Building yesterday, he was accompanied by 14 miners, who will testify today. One of them, a colored man, wore a miner's outfit, complete with helmet, carbide lamp, knee pads and heavy boots.

Scrugham Asks Definition of U. S. Frontiers

Wants Technical Data Before Study of Billion Dollar Naval Budget

By John G. Norris,
Post Staff Writer

Chairman Scrugham of the House Naval Appropriations subcommittee said yesterday the group would launch an inquiry into the land and sea frontiers of the United States before considering the billion-dollar naval budget for next year.

"We're spending a lot of money for defense," he declared. "Before we vote this year's budget we want to see what it is going for.

"Where are the limits of the United States? What have we to defend? We want answers to those questions, and to get technical and scientific advice as to the boundaries of the Nation."

Scrugham said Dr. Frank Baldwin Jewett, president of the National Academy of Sciences; Dr. S. W. Lee, chief geophysicist of the United States Geological Survey, and Rear Admiral L. O. Colbert, director of the Coast Geodetic Survey, will appear before his subcommittee today.

Shelf Extends 300 Miles

These witnesses, he said, will be questioned as to the "possible real boundary of the United States," the line where the shallow water over the continental shelf ends and the deep water of the ocean begins. This region can be mined, he declared, and might be adopted as the extent of American territorial waters, rather than the old 3-mile limit, one hour's sailing distance or other means of defining our sphere of control.

Scrugham said he had been informed that the "continental shelf" extended as far as 300 miles to sea in some cases, and if adopted as the new boundary of the United States would assure our control over coastal fishing rights, such as have led to disputes with Japan over the important Alaskan banks.

Later, he stated, the sub-committee probably will go into the question of the economic and political boundaries of the Nation. Naval officers and other witnesses will be called in this connection, he indicated. Reference was made to the suggestion made in the last Congress that the 180th meridian be taken as the limit of American arms in the Pacific.

More Armament Urged

Meanwhile, Senator Truman (Democrat), of Missouri, returning with 11 other members of a congressional group which surveyed Army defense posts, urged more pursuit planes, anti-aircraft guns, and coast artillery for this Nation.

Following a visit to the White House at which he reported to President Roosevelt on the trip, Truman told reporters that Army expenditures at least equal to those of the current year should be provided. He said the congressional group felt that the newly authorized third set of locks for the Panama Canal should be started immediately, after an inspection of the present facilities in the isthmus.

Allies Order 470 More U. S. Bombers

Britain to Get 200 Lockheeds, France 270 Douglases

Copyright by New York Times.

New York, Dec. 13.—The Allied governments were disclosed late today to have ordered 470 more two-engined American bombers, bringing to 820 the total number of planes purchased by Britain and France from Lockheed and Douglas.

A contract for 200 "Hudson" bombers at about $20,000,000 was signed here today by representatives of the British air ministry and officials of the Lockheed Aircraft Corporation of Burbank, Calif.

The original British order for 250 planes of this type was completed less than a month ago.

It is understood that the British contract calls for the first hundred of the planes to be powered by 1,100-horsepower Wright Cyclone engines, and reserves the right to have the second hundred equipped with 1,200-horsepower Cyclones.

The "Hudson" bomber, a military adaptation of the Lockheed 14 commercial transport, is an all-metal, twin-engine monoplane of high speed and considerable range. According to reports from England, the "Hudson" has been used considerably in off-shore patrol and on leaflet "raids" over Germany.

It was also learned today that France has ordered 270 more of the fast Douglas bomber known as the DB-7.

An all-metal, high-wing monoplane with tricycle landing gear, the DB-7 is powered by two Pratt and Whitney 900-horsepower engines and has a top speed of "300 miles plus." Prior to the outbreak of war, France had ordered 100 planes of this type.

Troyanovsky And Litvinoff Draft Reports

Digests on Foreign Policy Are to Be Submitted to Stalin

By the Associated Press

Moscow, Dec. 13.—Three men who at one time took a leading role in Russia's now abandoned policy of collective security were reported unofficially today to be engaged in submitting digests of foreign policy to the central committee of the communist party. Josef Stalin is secretary-general of this body.

The three are Alexander Troyanovsky, former ambassador to the United States; Maxim Litvinoff, one-time foreign commissar, and Boris Stein, former ambassador to Italy.

Reports say they constitute a sort of foreign affairs information bureau of the Communist Party, with Litvonoff in charge. Litvinoff's replacement as foreign commissar by Premier Molotoff last May 3 was followed shortly afterward by Russia's turning away from cooperation with the League of Nations and her new accords with Germany. Troyanovsky left Washington in June, 1938.

It was understood that the three do not necessarily make personal reports to Stalin and Molotoff but that they prepare material for them.

Litvinoff no longer is living at Spiridovnaka, the official residence of the foreign commissar, as he did for months after his replacement by Molotoff, but now has an apartment of his own.

Rotary Urged To Keep Strict Neutrality

'We May Be Leaders In Reconstruction,' Head Tells Members

Strict neutrality for Rotarians in the present European war was urged yesterday by the international president, Walter D. Head, of Montclair, N. J., in an address to the Rotary Clubs of Washington and vicinity.

Head, speaking at a luncheon in the Willard, described appeals he has received from Rotary leaders in England and France for indorsement of the Allied cause. He questioned whether such indorsement would be wise for Rotary, and declared strict neutrality would be the best guide during the war.

"After the war," he said, "we may well be the leaders in the reconstruction which will inevitably follow. After this war is over the nations of the world are going to be in a humble and contrite frame of mind, more ready than ever before to listen to Rotary's message of understanding, good will and peace, as a guide to international peace."

Head said that the world cannot go on "living from truce to truce" and warned that "unless we find some better way, we face a wave of communism and chaos."

He suggested as the better way, the Rotarian principle of cooperation, and said there is no reason why cooperation among nations is not as possible as cooperation among businessmen.

Head said that it is easy to become pessimistic at a time when human liberties are threatened by "the law of might," but that pessimism is foolish. He suggested as a guide, the words of a Rotary song, "Keep on Hoping."

Thomas L. Eagan, Washington Rotary president, introduced the speaker and other guests who included George C. Hager, past international president; George W. Harris, sergeant at arms of the international and past Washington president; Past District Governors Harrison E. Howe, Walter N. Kirkman, Oliver C. Short, Edward L. Stock, George W. Bahlke, Roy Danzer, Ignatius Bjorlee, Ward O. Wilson and Arthur E. Winter.

Others at the speakers' table were Lewis A. Hird, chairman of the Rotary International financial committee; Winthrop R. Howard, of the North American transportation committee for the 1940 convention; Ray Brehaut, president of the Alexandria Rotary Club; L. C. Smith, president, Arlington Rotary; Irwin Ray, president, Bethesda-Chevy Chase Rotary; John M. Littlepage, president, College Park, Md., Rotary; E. G. Both Sides Have Enough Data For Big Raids

Required Photographs Taken to Launch Intensive Flights

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 13.—By all the tried and tested rules of modern warfare, Germany, France and England ought to have by now all the photographic information required for the launching of intensive bombing raids.

For more than three months both sides of the conflict have had no compunctions about announcing the periodic completion of "successful" reconnaissance flights over enemy territory.

Reconnaissance means, among other things, the use of special cameras so delicately contrived that an airman flying at a height of 2 miles can tell whether a bridge or a dock requires 300-pound or 1,000-pound bombs for its destruction.

More than that, pictures for stereoscopic examinations—using the same gadget grandma let you look through in yesteryear—reveal every feature of the terrain. They tell the depths of a trench or the amount of freeboard on a cruiser under construction.

Any forecasts of offensives by the big air fleets of the opposing powers is pure guesswork. The strategy of the high commands is too bound up with other military and political considerations for an outsider to draw definite conclusions from censored news dispatches.

"Development of Objective"

But the character of the long-range flights made by both sides—in dozens of them no bombs were dropped at all—points unquestionably toward one purpose, what military men call the "development of the objective."

If war is both an art and a science, the means of waging it is no better exemplified than in the care taken to determine in advance the strength of an enemy's defense.

Ever since Versailles the United States Army Air Corps has worked to perfect its reconnaissance. At Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio, Maj. George W. Goddard is engaged in carrying photographic reconnaissance a step further into natural-color pictures.

"Filters" for high altitude flight are being used to photograph the ground through several hundred feet of clouds. Unseeing and unseen, our reconnaissance 'planes in wartime would be able to spot and evaluate an enemy's defenses with camera and film.

Stereoscope work approaches black magic. Two pictures are snapped several seconds apart from a fast-flying plane to provide an "over-lap" of a given area. Developed, they are placed under a stereoscope fitted with four mirrors set at oblique angles.

In place of the flat, almost featureless patchwork of the ordinary aerial photograph, the mirrors bring out hills, valleys, trees, trenches and the depth of gun emplacements.

Cruise Over Daily

In wartime photographic planes cruise over enemy ground and snap the same places daily. Officers trained in picture-reading study the results. Here is a footpath which was not there yesterday. That indicates troops have moved there. The length of a supply train springing into a new picture is a good index to the number of troops moving into a given sector.

It is next to impossible for any one army to fool another nowadays as to the number of troops it is using or the character of its defenses. To complete their information, both sides carry on raids between the lines to capture prisoners and question them.

It is in long-range reconnaissance that modern warplanes are perfecting a relatively new function. A German pilot returning from a "raid" on the Firth of Forth delivers photographs of the area, and tells how many pursuit planes chased him and how many anti-aircraft batteries fired at him.

A British pilot returning from the interior of Germany delivers stereoscope photographs, taken at night with parachute flares, which tell whether the enemy has mounted anti-aircraft batteries on that hill near Hannover or Hildesheim.

The question is, what use will the warring nations make of their information?

Reich Decrees Death for Armed Crimes

Penalty Applies Even to Offenses Only Contemplated

Copyright by New York Times,

Berlin, Dec. 13.—n order to fight "gangster methods" in crime, the Reich minister of justice has declared capital punishment for all criminals who make use of, or threaten to make use of any weapon from a knife to a blackjack in carrying out robbery, burglary, rape or other major crimes.

The death penalty is also applicable to acid throwers, and criminals who defend themselves with weapons against capture. The supreme punishment is called for even if the crime is not committed, the decree stipulates. As long as there is evidence to support the supposition that a crime was intended, it is immaterial whether or not the criminal succeeded in carrying it out. The same penalty will be applied to accessories after the fact.

Finally, it is stated that any person who voluntarily takes up the pursuit of a criminal will be granted the same legal protection as a policeman carrying out his duty. All cases of this kind will be carried out by a special court "in the interest of the quickest possible sentencing of such criminals."

The newest and most degrading penalty in the Reich is now considered to be hanging. It was first applied Saturday in a concentration camp to two inmates—who allegedly attacked an S. S. warden in an attempt to escape November 25. The guillotine still is used for murder and other capital crimes, while those convicted of sabotage are shot.

Author of 'Mademoiselle From Armentieres' Scratches Head for New Song Inspiration

Copyright, 1939, by New York Tribune, Inc.

Sutton, County of Surrey, Dec. 13.—"Red" Rowland, as a young sergeant in the British army, sat down in a cafe in Armentieres on a bleak day in March, 1915, and dashed off in an hour or so the words of the most famous song of the last war—"Mademoiselle from Armentieres." Now, 53 and a grandfather, he is scratching his head to compose a new series of war-time jingles, with a refrain as catching as the nonsense of "Hinky Dinky Parley Vous."

At least Rowland is occupying his spare hours at this task to provide the tommies of 1939—and their Allies—with a ditty to parody and march by. His regular work is that of manager of a motion picture theater in this quiet suburban town, only 24 minutes by rail from Victoria Station, London, but far from Armentieres and the battle front beyond. To be sure, he has been issued a regulation steel helmet much like that he wore in France twenty-five years ago, for he is doing his bit as an air raid warden.

Through the song of the last war, Rowland, who was a music hall comedian before he went out in 1914, played a major role in bringing fame of a sort to a little brunette waitress in an estaminet or cafe in a French provincial town. She was the original "Mademoiselle from Armentieres."

Incidentally, apart from being the author of the original version of the song, Rowland was the first to sing it. That was before an audience of Tommies in Armentieres the night of the day on which both words and melody came into existence. Getz Rice, the composer, then a sergeant in the Canadian army, wrote the music. On the "first night" he accompanied Rowland on the piano.

This afternoon Rowland reminisced about "Mademoiselle" and told of his plans for a new war song, as we sat together in his modest office on the second floor of the building in which the "movie" he manages is situated.

I had handed him a copy of the European edition of the New York Herald Tribune which carried a United Press dispatch with the headline:

"'Mademoiselle from Armentieres'
"Still holds forth behind the lines—
"Grandmother of forty-nine now, famous little lady
"Who slapped a general, says first song was nice,
"Later editions unauthorized."

"So she's a grandmother," Rowland said amusingly. Then with a chuckle, he added:

"Well, I'm a grandfather, my grandson is two years old. But Marie—that was her name, you know—can't be very old, she was under 20 when we were there in '15.

Crew of Polish Sub Ready to Avenge Their Country's Fall After 44 Harrowing Days of Flight From Estonian Port

By Raymond Daniell
Copyright by New York Times

London, Dec. 13.—Hunting enemy craft as a unit of the British fleet is the Polish submarine Orzel. A few weeks ago Gen. Wladislas Sikorski, the Polish premier, made a special trip during his visit to this country to decorate her officers and crew, and well he might, for the saga of this naval vessel of a country which was rubbed out by the Nazis is one of the most fascinating sea stories this war has produced. It was told officially today, for the first time, as I was told, by men who lived through 44 harrowing days with all men's hands against them, as they related it in broken English and a smattering of French to fellow seamen at the end of their strange odyssey.

They were interned and their arms taken from them. But they had seen wave after wave of German bombers on the way to bomb their cities and they decided to escape and get into the fight, although Estonian officials had removed all their armament save five torpedoes, which they hoped to send German ships to the bottom. Chasing this chimeric hope they cruised for days without charts, as their water and fuel ran lower. They bumped into rocks, ran aground in shoal waters, and skulked hours at a time hiding on the sea bottom while depth charges bombs shook their craft and propellers of hunting ships above them thrummed a song of doom into their ears.

Miraculously they escaped death and lived to send a message which brought them safely into a British port under escort of destroyers on their forty-fourth day out.

Bombed By Nazi Planes

Then when they had reached a friendly harbor, an enemy air raid was in progress. The half crazed crew swarmed from the conning tower of their submarine and danced on its deck in impotent rage, shaking their fists at the sky. The Polish officers explained that they wanted only arms and ammunition to put to sea again to do their bit in the war. Unless accepted as volunteers and provided with the wherewithal of carrying on the war against the enemy, the commander said, he would not be responsible for his men's behavior.

The Orzel, which means eagle in Polish, was lying in Gdynia September 1 when the first waves of Nazi bombers swept over Poland. The captain, who was ill, decided to leave the submarine's mooring and get into the Gulf of Danzig. Through his periscope, as the half submerged submarine cruised, the skipper of the undersea boat saw attacks on Polish towns and cities. Sighted in shallow water, the submarine was bombed by Nazi aircraft.

As German destroyers spread fanwise across the entrance to the gulf in an effort to bottle up the Polish ships, the Orzel received a distress message from her sister submarine. Eluding the destroyers and escaping into the wide waters of the Baltic, the Orzel searched for a week for a trace of the other submarine and on September 13, as the captain's illness grew more serious, John Grudzinski, second in command, decided to make for a neutral port in search of medical help. Tallinn, Estonia, was reached on September 15.

The harbor at Tallinn is a small basin about a quarter of a mile square. In the center are rocks, and ships have to lie alongside the wharves. The Orzel found a mooring between an Estonian gunboat and several destroyers. There was a German merchantman leaving, so the Estonian authorities told the submarine's crew they could not leave for 24 hours. Then authorities informed the submarine crew that they had overstayed their allotted time and would have to be interned for the duration of the war.

Guards were placed at the gangway and in the control tower. Breech blocks were removed from the guns and torpedoes were hoisted from the submarine by crane. Fifteen of the 20 torpedoes the Orzel carried were taken out when the hoisting cable, which had been surreptitiously filed by the officer second in command, snapped and the Estonians decided to call it a day. The skipper with a hacksaw, meanwhile, was busily engaged in filing the four wire ropes which made the submarine fast to the dock.

That night the crew kidnapped two guards, snapped the mooring lines and hauled up anchor. Shouts aroused the crews aboard destroyers and machine-gun fire immediately rained on the submarine which was cruising on the surface. A German tanker was ahead of the Orzel as she made for one of the two 30-yard-wide harbor mouths, but out of deference to international law or fear of causing further trouble for herself, the Orzel's crew refrained from firing on her. Just short of the passage to the open sea, the submarine grounded on rocks. Searchlights played upon the spot where she had grounded and the artillery and rifle fire was increasing. The Orzel crew blew her tanks to make herself more buoyant and with engines churning astern, she slid off from the rocks and slipped past the breakwater.

Not only had the breach blocks been removed from the guns of the submarine but the craft's charts had been taken by the Estonian officials and her radio had been damaged by rifle fire. The second engineer, who had been appointed navigator, however, had a list of lighthouses and some squared paper, and managed to plot his approximate position. Outside of Tallinn, where there is a fringe of fortified islands, searchlights swept the surface and artillery fire drove the Orzel to the bottom. All night the fugitive submarine cruised blindly, and at dawn lay on the botton. Next day, they heard hunting craft above them, while depth charges burst about them, some close and some far away.

Grounded Again

The captain decided to cruise into the Baltic to see what damage he could do to German shipping with the five torpedoes which he had left. First he found a haven where he could charge his batteries. His aim was to find a German ship and force her to give up charts, and then sink her. Meanwhile, lamentations of kidnaped Estonians was getting on everybody's nerves, so the submarine put into shore, loaded the captives into a collapsible boat, supplied them with whisky and cigarettes and money, and told them to row for it. This was the twenty-second day out and the dark cramped quarters, the stench of batteries, and the fog which steals over everything aboard a submarine when she rises after long periods undersea, was causing discomfort bordering on suffering.

A few hours later a British destroyer found the Orzel and its Haggard crew and led them to port.

Turks Train Forces With Allied Arms

Planes, Ammunition, Antiaircraft and Antitank Guns Ordered

Copyright by New York Times.

London, Dec. 13.—Turkey has not only purchased a considerable quantity of war material and airplanes from Britain and France but has already received enough material to allow her to proceed with the training of her men, it was disclosed unofficially today.

During the recent visit of the Turkish military mission, Britain made a deal with the Turks for anti-aircraft guns, planes and ammunition, and the French agreed to sell them, among other things, antitank guns. Coastal defense guns are also believed to have been delivered.

The Allies explained to Gen. Orbay, who headed the Turkish military mission here, that they could not possibly deliver arms and planes at present in the quantity Turkey asked, but Gen. Orbay was told that if the lull continued on the Western Front during the winter an attempt would be made to complete the Turkish order by spring.

Decision May Be Altered

These decisions, however, were taken before Russia started her new anti-Turkish campaign. After threatening Rumania the Communist international organ of the Kremlin stated, "Turkey has left the path of neutrality and has accepted military undertakings towards Britain and France. Owing to the rapprochement between the ruling Turkish classes and the Anglo-French imperialists, Turkey's independence, attained through great efforts and sacrifices, is now seriously threatened."

It is admitted in official quarters here that Russo-Turkish relations have deteriorated steadily during recent days but it is not known whether Britain and France intend to expedite the delivery of arms and planes in view of this new political development.

In view of the recent shipment of British bombers to Rumania and the disclosure last night that a considerable quantity of British war material was being shipped to the Finns, it is evident Britain has decided to try deterring the dictators on the continent with guns.

Dissatisfaction Voiced

Only the strongest political considerations could persuade Britain to part with war material at this time. There is a great deal of confidence here that Britain has managed to produce airplanes superior to any they have seen in the German air force in the first three months of the war, but nobody here pretends that Britain and France have reached parity with the Germans, either in the air or in the production of war material.

In fact, there is considerable dissatisfaction here with the supply of material—so much so that the government has felt it necessary to discuss the subject in a secret session of the House of Commons next week.

In Finland the position is much like that which existed during the Spanish civil war. Then Germany and Italy furnished arms to Generalissimo Franco while Russia helped the Republicans. Now Britain is helping Finland. In other words, Britain has finally abolished the policy of nonintervention.

Spain Frees Bank Deposits At Sliding Rate

Deposits Recorded Before Civil War to Be Paid in Full

By Thomas J. Hamilton

Copyright by New York Times

Madrid, Dec. 13.—Details of the new law unfreezing bank deposits in former Communist territory, which were published today in an "official bulletin," revealed private and commercial accounts will be validated under a sliding scale fixed according to the time the money was deposited.

After stating that every depositor is authorized to withdraw an amount equal to that of his credit on July 18, 1936—the day the nationalist revolution began—the law validated subsequent deposits as follows:

6 Months Necessary

For deposits between July 19 and October 31, 1936, 90 per cent; from November 1, 1936, to February 28, 1937, 80 per cent; from March 1 to June 13, 65 per cent; from July 1 to December 31, 1937, 40 per cent; from January 1, 1938, to June 13, 20 per cent; from July 1 to December 31, 1938, 10 per cent; from January 1, 1939, to March 31 (the date of the capture of Madrid and the end of the civil war), 5 per cent.

Similar percentages were applied to loans and credits expected during this period both by banks and private citizens and to transactions between banks. As for bonds, mortgages, &c., repaid in red pesetas since January 1, 1937, the decree authorizes a creditor to demand a new payment in nationalist pesetas if the redemption period originally, was fixed at five years or lower. Even here, however, a creditor, provided he fulfills certain conditions, can prevent a transaction from being reopened and all others stand.

Debt Moratorium Ends

Owing to the tremendous accounting problem involved in checking deposits and withdrawals of all bank accounts in the one-time Red territory throughout the three years of the war, it is expected six months or more will be required to complete the unfreezing of the deposits.

A special "general unblocking commission" has been instituted with final authority on all cases except a few to be settled in the ordinary courts. Formation of depositors' associations to handle claims collectively also has been authorized.

With the publication of the law, the moratorium on all loans, mortgages, et cetera, which, since the close of the Civil War, has been invocable at the option of the debtor, automatically comes to an end.

British Create Special Group To Study Peace Fundamentals

Agency to Work Immediately After Outbreak of War, Gathering All Data Pertinent to Terms to Be Discussed

By Tania Long

Copyright, 1939, by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, Dec. 13.—Motivated by a desire to gird for peace, just as before hostilities began it girded for war, the British government has set up a "peace establishment"—in contrast to a military establishment—which is making every preparation to assure that the peace, when it comes, will be the kind this country wants.

Concealed from the knowledge of the British public and the majority of British officials, a small department of the foreign office has been engaged since the outbreak of war in laying the foundations, day by day, for the official British viewpoint, once the guns have stopped roaring and the statesmen meet to attempt to bring order out of the periodic international chaos.

Appeasement Not Sought

Since, if the Allies win the war, Britain will have a good deal to say about what the new Europe is to be, the government, by the creation of this special body, is taking care to avoid finding itself unprepared to face a peace settlement, should it come suddenly or after many years of hostilities.

It should be emphasized that the work being carried on at present has nothing to do with what is known as "appeasement," nor is it a direct attempt to shorten the war. Perhaps the fear that it should be misunderstood as such is one reason for the great secrecy which has surrounded everything connected with the foreign office section engaged in it. The name of the department or those of the highly trained experts who are members of it are unknown, except to the elect within the government.

In a sense the "peace body" of today is the embryo of the British delegation to the peace conference of the future. Even if the present members of this section do not themselves attend the conference, the background material which they are now preparing will be the basis for the arguments of the British delegation.

All Trends Analyzed

The entire world is taken under the scrutiny of the experts. Every political trend, whether belligerent or neutral, is carefully analyzed. Up to the minute information on present or potential developments is sifted. The question of the minorities of the world is delved into for possible future solution and research is carried on into all sources of dispute between all nations.

All this material, which is gathered daily, is correlated and filed.

If there is need for it, reports are made to foreign office heads. At all times the material must be in such shape as to permit the immediate discussion of any one problem. If there were to be a sudden peace the group of experts must be ready to have the latest and most precise information at hand in order to advise regarding the numerous questions which would be raised.

In other words, the British government throughout the war intends to have everything in readiness, so far as it is possible, to enable it to consider any serious peace proposal and allow it almost at once to state its attitude on any one subject.

The department, whose work will be the basis for the above, is believed to be unique in that no other government has ever established at the very outbreak of war a body designed specifically to prepare in detail for peace. The experts now at work had been selected and notified to report the moment war was declared.

Skeleton "Peace" Army

For centuries, all governments have maintained military establishments in peace time at "peace strength." Here is a government which, so to speak, has set up a "peace establishment" in war time, and is maintaining it at what might be termed "war strength."

Obviously the "war strength" of this "peace establishment" is a skeleton strength, just as the peace strength of a military establishment is of skeleton strength. When peace "breaks out," the British government, it is to be assumed, will immediately bring it to "peace strength."

The present British method of preparing for the peace to come is in sharp contrast to that of the last war. It was not until early in 1917—after nearly three years of hostilities—that the British government made any move to work out in detail what it wanted in the way of a settlement. At that time Parliament sanctioned the appointment of a committee under the late Lord Phillimore, to lay out the general lines of the British demands.

Peace Plan Now Unlikely.

When the report was made in January, 1918, it consisted of well defined points which became the basis of peace discussions between Britain and major allies—the United States and France. Later many of these proposals were employed in somewhat revised form by President Wilson in his fourteen points, and thus became part of the Versailles treaty.

The Phillimore committee's report consisted of definite "peace aims." As opposed to this the job of the special foreign office group is only to elaborate the elements from which eventually the British peace plan will be fashioned. There is little likelihood for the present that Britain will come out with anything concrete in the shape of peace aims.

"When we come to peace aims we are dealing with something we cannot at present foresee," said Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain in his radio address to the Empire November 26. "Our definition of them can therefore only be in the most general terms."

There is another important factor to be considered by Britain: That is the attitude of France, her ally, who is exceptionally sensitive to any suggestion of "peace talks" on the part of the British. Every time a British public speaker—Lloyd George for example—speaks in favor of peace or negotiation, the French people are subjected to another wave of anti-British propaganda from the Goebbels machine across the Rhine. This propaganda invariably takes the form of pointing out to the French that Britain is talking of peace while French soldiers are being killed in a war which, it is charged, Britain has foisted upon them.

Sister Sub of Squalus Flooded by Waves

The Navy said yesterday the new submarine Seadragon, a sister ship of the sunken Squalus, had taken on water through an open after hatch on a shakedown cruise and had been forced to return to New London, Conn., for repairs. The mishap occurred Monday.

A following wave struck the vessel as it was cruising on the surface, a report to the department said.

Eye Injuries Exceed World War Record

Peering Through Firing Slits Blamed for High Count in Head Wounds

By the Associated Press

Basel, Dec. 13.—Medical reports from both sides of the Western Front indicate the percentage of eye injuries in modern fortress warfare is far above the proportion of the World War.

Doctors from field and rear guard hospitals in French Alsace and German Baden agree that the proportion of casualties blinded in one or both eyes is far greater than in past wars.

Both the German and Allied command have so far spared their manpower, and the number of injured in proportion to the number of troops engaged is low, but Maginot Line-Westwall warfare has changed previous figures where soldiers are wounded.

Head Wounds 25 Per Cent

Machine-gunners and infantrymen fighting from pillboxes and larger forts on both sides of the front suffer the greatest number of eye and head wounds.

Eye injuries usually are caused by bits of mortar and cement sent flying through the firing slits when a shell strikes the pillbox or explodes near it.

German machine-gunners, it is reported in Basel, now are being supplied with thick-lensed convex goggles to protect their eyes against such debris.

Army medical men, agreeing it was too early in the war to make new figures on the places where a soldier generally is wounded in fortress combat, said, however, that while head and neck wounds accounted for only 13 per cent of the casualties in the World War, the proportion in this conflict at present is more than 25 per cent.

So long as most of the fighting is done from trenches and forts, they said, the proportion of men injured above the waist will remain higher—about 65 per cent so far—than the World War figure of about 48 per cent.

Reich's War Closes Its Universities

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Dec. 13.—War has reduced higher education, except in technical schools, to a minimum in Germany while some student doctors are stepping into the positions of physicians and surgeons called to the front.

In the first days of the war, as the number of men being called to the colors mounted, most class rooms had to be closed because of a lack of teachers. A reshuffling of available instructors later did not help matters.

On the university level only a half dozen schools remain open—all others including the famous old universities of Heidelberg and Freiburg, lying close to the French border, are closed.

But 2 Technical Schools

Those students who have not been drafted for army duty—a very small number—may pursue their studies in so far as professors are available.

Boys drawn out of upper grades of the German equivalent of high school to go to war and having only a few months to go to graduation were presented with diplomas without taking examinations.

The technical schools—there are only two open out of more than a dozen—are jammed with lads being hurried through studies in all types of engineering, chemistry and related subjects important to the Reich and its war.

A handful of American students registered for doctorate work were advised to continue their studies in Switzerland because the laboratory space was needed for German students.

The few doctors left for civilian hospital work have been forced to depend more and more on advanced students as assistants.

Supposed to Die 5 Months Ago, Salesman Has Cancer 'Licked'

Doctors Told Him He Couldn't Live, But Claude Bradley Merrily Prepares For Christmas and New Year's

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 13.—Claude J. Bradley gave death another push in the nose today and laughingly planned for Christmas and New Year's.

Bradley has a right to chuckle. He's supposed to be dead. Or at least downhearted. But he's neither.

It was ten months ago that doctors told him he was due to die within two or three months—from cancer.

The 53-year-old Bradley started right into fight. Now——

"I think I've got this thing licked," he said in his Flatbush home, pounding his fist on the nearest wood. "Why, I've felt better in the last three months than I have for the past 15 years. This is going to be a real Christmas for me.

"I'm going to have a Christmas tree—I've invited in my friends to help me share it. And I'm busy right now sending out 500 Christmas cards, and fixing presents for my daughter.

"But there are lots of people in this world I wish I could invite to my Christmas party. Why—I've had letter from all over the world. I'm amazed."

His amazement started after the day last July when his friends staged a "wake" for him—with Bradley at the piano, the life of the party.

Stories of his fortitude in the face of predicted death moved around the world. Letters poured in on him—2,500 of them—from Bombay, India, from Paris, from Australia, from Buenos Aires, from Canada.

"Hundreds of them wished me well—and helped me keep my chin up—because I can't write to them all myself, I'd like to wish them all a 'Merry Christmas' now.

"Why, I even heard from friends I hadn't seen or heard from for years—one friend I hadn't heard of for 22 years wrote me from Hollywood."

One woman—a Hungarian living in France—wrote him page after page in French—asking him to marry her.

CHEST COLDS
COUGHING COLDS
STUBBORN HEAD COLDS

Don't keep on suffering, day after day, from the stuffiness, coughing, soreness and muscular tightness of a cold without doing something about it.

A cold is bad for you—bad for those around you, too. What's more, you can't trust the simplest little cold not to grow worse.

Do As Millions Do

So do what millions of people do. Have on hand a jar of Vicks VapoRub—the famous poultice-vapor treatment you can depend on to relieve miseries of chest colds, nasty coughing colds and stubborn head colds.

You can use VapoRub in so many ways. It acts to relieve miseries like a good old-fashioned poultice. Also, its medicated vapors are breathed into cold-irritated air passages to help relieve the congestion and loosen phlegm. And, when you melt it in boiling water, it gives you a marvelous medicated vapor-steam treatment.

These simple VapoRub treatments are standbys in millions of homes—used whenever colds strike. More people use the poultice and vapor action of VapoRub than all similar treatments combined. Follow the full tested directions that come with every jar of VapoRub.

ton to keep house for the family. The grandmother could keep up her spirits "as long as there were not too many money troubles," she says, but now her discouragement is added to Mr. K's.

He is a painter and usually works regularly except for some seasonal lay-off. Since he is employable, he is not eligible for public relief.

Only $90 would mean that the family could feel secure about food, rent and other necessities for a time, while Mr. K. continues his search for work.

Case certified and help administered without cost by Catholic charities.

Case No. 33

When Mr. L.'s doctor told him that he must discontinue working because of a serious heart ailment, Mrs. L. tried to carry a larger share of the burden of supporting the family. She continued to work as a domestic, until the day before her baby was born, a few months ago.

In the family of nine children, the oldest boy managed to get a job with small wages, but the next oldest son has a chronic illness because his back was injured in a fall in his infancy.

The family is in such need that it is hard for Mr. L. to refrain from accepting jobs which the doctor's orders have forbidden.

Case certified and help administered without cost by Family Service Association.

Case No. 34

Billy R., who is 12, told his mother that if he ever got a job, he would give her one dollar week just for herself, so she could go to the movies. Even though the R. children are not getting enough to eat, Billy sometimes thinks how nice it would be to be able to go to the movies.

Billy's father was a draftsman at one time, and a good one, says the agency which investigated the family's circumstances. Some years ago he had a mental break and had to go to an institution. Since then he has held one job, and then another, but something always happens to break into the regularity of his work. That has been especially true in the past six months, and he has been unable to find a job.

The oldest girl, 17, who will finish high school in February, is taking a business course and hopes to get a job. Her teachers say she is an "A" student.

With $85, the family's rent for the next three months could be paid and they would have some security until the girl is ready to go to work.

Case certified and help administered without cost by Catholic Charities.

Amount needed, $85.

Gifts for Needy May Be Deducted From Income for Tax Purposes

Contributions to the Neediest Families can be made so they are deductible in figuring income for Federal tax purposes, it was pointed out by officials of the Family Service Association yesterday.

In such cases checks should be made out to the Family Service Association. On cash contributions, in which such deductions are contemplated, the Family Service Association will, on request, issue a receipt acknowledging the sum.

The Washington Post will act as agent in receiving such checks and cash contributions. If you wish to make a cash contribution with The Post as agent, bring or send it to 1337 E street northwest.

sibilities of life. He develops through the satisfactions of real and vicarious experiences in group contacts. We believe we should seek to develop in him a deep-seated sense of servie and tolerance, and an increasing awareness of the individual's responsibility to his group and of the group's responsibility to the individual.

We believe we should provide opportunities for differentiated education; use the data which will discover remediable needs; apply the corrective technique; integrate the factors that influence development; and through purposeful teaching, provide challenging situations that lead to desirable outcomes.

Our materials of instruction should be so varied that each pupil will find numerous appropriate challenges. We should use from our cultural heritage and from our present environment that which enriches, interprets, and encourages investigation and creative activity. We should take from the current fields of experience and subject matter that which is functional.

We should hold as the immediate aims for American education equal opportunity for all and progressive development for each individual according to his needs and capacities. In addition to promoting his growth in the basic skills, attitudes, appreciations, knowledges, and judgments, we should seek to improve his behavior and develop his character through guiding him to face constructively social and economic problems.

We should hold as the ultimate aim an invidual who is physically sound, with wholesome recreational interests; who is emotionally stable and spiritually conscious; who is capable of independent, discerning, and critical thinking; who is socially competent and economically sufficient; who as a responsible citizen is ready for the enjoyments and duties of home, family, and community life, with an understanding and an appreciation of American ideals, principles, and purposes that will promote the progress of our own democracy and carry over into world citizenship.

Chairman Holmes today will outline the revison program at the first fall meetings of the Teachers Institute of Washington. He will speak to teachers of Divisions 10 to 13, in the Dunbar High School auditorium at 3:45 p. m., and to Divisions 1 to 9 at McKinley High auditorium at 8 p. m.

In announcing Dr. Holmes' address, Supt. Frank W. Ballou explained that he was yielding his own place as traditional first speaker for the Teachers' Institute.

cluded:

"I can add little to the eloquent words which you have heard here except that by my presence I can join in your feeling of indignation and in your desire to serve, and in that I am your servant."

Mayor LeGuardia said the situation in Europe is no longer methodical and deliberate oppression and abuse based upon hatred of any one religion.

"It is a new cruelty," he shouted, "of exploitation of occupied lands taken contrary to all rules of civilization."

Noted Jewish leaders and Dr. Samuel McCrea Cavert, general secretary of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, also spoke.

Green declared the "free people of America" would "never acquiesce in or accept the triumph of Stalinism and Hitlerism in Poland, Finland, Austria or the Balkan states," and added.

"We favo a resort to the use of all means at our command, short of war, in order to prevent these brutal dictators from accomplishing their distardly purpose."

The mass meeting was sponsored by the American Jewish Congress, the A. F. of L., the Church Peace Union and other labor and religious groups as "America's challenge to Nazi torture of Jews and others in Poland and other conquered areas."

The audience chanted an ancient Yiddish memorial prayer for the cheered adoption of a resolution calling on President Roosevelt to extend aid to the Jews of Poland and "to convey to the German government America's condemnation of this oppression."

They cheered Dr. Stephen S. Wise, president of the American Jewish Congress, when he pledged Jewish support of the Roosevelt neutrality policy.

Kennedy Takes The Ball

Representative Kennedy has given a new and interesting turn to the campaign for modernization of the District government. By promising to include a suffrage provision in his reorganization bill he has once more taken leadership of the drive away from local officials. Likewise he has greatly enhanced the probability that Congress will act upon the Griffenhagen plan instead of the District Commissioners' bill.

The position of the Commissioners has unquestionably been weakened by this move. It was the hearings conducted by the Commissioners which brought out the emphatic demand for self-government in Washington. When officials let it be known that they would ignore these appeals from organized citizen groups they were left with a bill that reflects the view of only a handful of appointed officials.

The President recalled Commissioner Allen into the District service for the special purpose of working out a satisfactory reorganization plan. Apparently Mr. Allen has been outvoted by Commissioners Hazen and McCoach. At any rate, the stand which the board has taken leaves it virtually unsupported in advocating the modified Seal bill. This failure of the Commissioners to accept the community viewpoint is especially disappointing because it means that Congress will be given divided counsel once more.

Fortunately, the Kennedy bill, which puts the recommendations of the Griffenhagen report into legislative form, is adapted to a grant of local suffrage without much change. It can thus be used to carry both the issues of local self-government and modernization of the District's obsolete municipal machinery before the House District Committee and perhaps before Congress. Civic groups will have a good opportunity to press their demands for a voice in the management of the city's affairs.

Should the plea for reorganization with suffrage fail, then the appeal for reorganization alone should be pressed. The District is not in a position to choose its own form of local government. All it can do is to present the demands of local citizens squarely before Congress. Even if that body is willing to grant only half a loaf at present, the resulting improvement should greatly stimulate efforts to bring about further reforms.

Hostile To Biology

The urge for the democratic way of life is not merely idealistic. It may be traced also to biologic necessity.

As Darwin pointed out, when a change in environment threatens the existence of a species, it may gradually adjust its way of living. As the species succeeds or fails in meeting this threat, it survives or perishes.

Totalitarianism does not permit the human species, functioning within the limits imposed by nature, to adjust itself as the need arises. The adjustments are made for it by a more or less fanatical minority.

In Russia, Germany, and the other dictatorships, the masses are regimented into a prescribed way of living and thinking, motivated largely if not entirely by political or ideological ends. This way of living is often at complete variance with the change or adjustment which normally would occur. Thus there is obstruction which in the long run must either be removed by revolution or result in death.

Underlying all change in human affairs there is, in addition to the effort for survival, the evolutionary drive for improvement. The latter cannot come from without; it must come from within. In a democracy such a drive, whether of the species or the individual, is permitted to go forward and, if it strong enough, to fulfill its purpose. In a dictatorship the drive for improvement is at best deflected and rigidly controlled.

It is true, of course, that an organism has the best chance for survival where the individual units work for the common good, which in turn operates for the good of the individual units.

The dictator state is presumably founded on that axiom. The trouble is the dictator state, which inevitably suppresses variation from the party line, does not and cannot concern itself with the individual good. The primary objective of the dictatorship must be to strengthen and perpetuate itself, no matter at what cost and ultimate injury to the constituency it is supposed to serve.

The Brand of Cain

The resolution branding Russia an aggressor, which the League committee of 13 has drawn up, is certain to meet with the overwhelming approval of the League Assembly.

The Soviet Union will thus stand condemned by the community of nations—it has already been condemned by world public opinion—as a nation guilty of an unprovoked and monstrous assault on an unoffending neighbor a tiny fraction of its size. Nor does this resolution of censure preclude the possibility that the delegates assembled at Geneva, as an additional indication of the disgust aroused by Moscow's attack on Finland, will expel Russia from the League.

Whether or not this further action is taken, however, is largely immaterial. It is doubtful whether, in view of her formal condemnation by fellow members, Russia will long remain in the League even if permitted to do so. The course hitherto followed by nations which the League has branded as aggressors has been to resign from that body. Probably Moscow will in this particular, too, imitate the examples set by Tokyo, Berlin and Rome.

The fact must also be recognized that, while the League's condemnation of the Soviet Union is an encouraging indication of revived vigor, at least in the moral sphere, it is only a gesture. There is little likelihood that it will force Russia to abandon her criminal war on Finland. Had there been any such possibility, Moscow would no doubt have accepted the League's offer to mediate and in that way would have forestalled the resolution of condemnation.

If Finland's independence is to be spared it will have to be, as Rudolf Holsti, the Finnish delegate to the League Assembly, has pointed out, through more concrete measures of support. Fortunately, that fact is being recognized by the nations represented at Geneva and by others, including the United States, which are not members of the League.

The committee of 13, for instance, has recommended that the League's entire staff of technical experts be placed at the disposal of Finland. It has also invited League members to give Finland all possible aid. In this latter particular the League itself is almost helpless. It can act only to the extent that member nations permit it to act, and when they are unwilling to do so the only alternative is for the individual nations to act on their own responsibility. In the case of Finland they can now do so with the League's full approval.

Time is of the essence, if Finland is to be saved. Its prestige already greatly compromised by the hitherto successful resistance put up by the Finns, Russia appears to be redoubling her efforts to overwhelm her plucky little neighbor as soon as possible. The nations that have condemned the Soviet Union are, therefore, under moral obligation to see that aid to Finland is immediately forthcoming. Finland is fighting not only her own battle but their battle as well.

Culture For Export

Criticism has been directed against the move for closer cultural understanding among the Latin and English speaking peoples of our hemisphere chiefly because of its lack of a practical approach. Last week's Conference on Inter-American Relations in the Field of Publications and Libraries was significant largely because it cut through generalities to specific problems.

The committee on books reported that, if an interest in North American literature is to be developed below the Rio Grande, our publishers must "offer their books at lower prices than in the United States market." The same point was made by Dr. Waldo G. Leland, director of the Council of Learned Societies.

Incomes of Latin-American teachers, journalists and authors are in no way comparable to the incomes of their colleagues in the United States. Moreover, the currencies of Central and most South American countries have depreciated more than our own. When these factors, plus postage, are taken into consideration, it can be seen why the products of North American publishers reach only the wealthiest Latin Americans.

At the same time it is difficult to see how North American publishers can make any drastic price concessions to Latin-American readers, at least so far as new books are concerned. A considerable proportion of almost any publisher's list is comprised of books that represent either a loss or some degree of subsidization by the author.

Perhaps the answer may lie in special editions of chapbooks for Latin Americans. Every traveler will recall the Tauchnitz editions in which the work of English authors was made available at slight cost to continental Europeans. Republication rights could no doubt be obtained without difficulty and the cost of translation would be negligible. Such highly successful experiments as the Modern Library and the more recent Pocket Books show what can be done in the way of attractive formats.

Of course, profitable ventures into the field of chapbooks is predicated on quantity production and the existence of a mass market. It is doubtful whether any mass market now exists in the Latin-American nations, in most of which the illiteracy rate is high. But a mass market for such inexpensive books does exist in the United States. The practicability of making the best Latin-American authors available in good English translations at low cost might well be explored by some publisher. The profits of such a venture might even be sufficient to offset the probable initial losses in the South American field.

It Can Be Balanced

Some curious echoes arise out of the controversy between President Roosevelt and Senator Taft over the possibility of balancing the budget. As an aspiring Presidential candidate, Mr. Taft believes that the budget can and should be balanced within two years. To accomplish that he favors a cut of 25 to 50 per cent in the expenditures of various departments.

That line of campaign argument must have brought some rather disturbing recollections to President Roosevelt's mind. Somewhat less than eight years ago he used precisely the same attack against the Hoover Administration. At that time he thought he could reduce governmental expenditures by 25 per cent. But expenditures continued to mount after he went to the White House, deficits grew larger and the unbalanced budget has remained far out of balance through every year of his Administration.

No doubt, then, Mr. Taft's challenge did sound fantastic in the President's ears. So the President offers a prize for a bill of particulars on how income can be made to match outgo, with a clear implication that the feat cannot be accomplished. That is a far cry from his advice of 1932 that governments which spend more than they collect are on the way to disaster.

To an Administration which has never balanced its budget over a period of seven years no doubt the task does seem to be impossible. An individual who is accustomed to spending more than he earns usually takes the same attitude. But that does not alter the fact that the job must be done if bankruptcy is to be avoided.

Of course, the budget can be balanced any time the Administration and a majority in Congress make up their minds that such a course is imperative. It will necessitate the reduction of some desirable expenditures. It will require curtailment of many activities that various groups would like to see expanded. Economy is never pleasant. That is why Congress has refused to face the necessity of cutting down its outlays until it has come face to face with the prospect of an increase in the national debt limit.

Government spending has now been carried to a point where it may be more dangerous, politically speaking, for legislators to favor a higher debt limit than to lop off some of the benefits and subsidies going to their constituents. Apparently Senator Taft believes that a policy of cutting unessential expenditures, even where it hurts, will prove to be popular. It would not be at all surprising if he proves to be right.

Saga Of The Sea

There has been plenty of mystery in the saga of the Bremen's journeys since the outbreak of the war, but most of all there has been a display of daring that ranks with the most exciting tales of the sea. Now another chapter has been appended to the story of the big ship's original spectacular disappearance from New York and unexpected arrival in Murmansk after eluding cruisers lying in wait for her delayed departure.

Details of that trip were as thrilling as could be expected. Painting the boat a ghostly gray as she sped through Arctic waters, the crew was ready at any moment to destroy their craft and themselves with it, rather than risk capture. In the latest dash to Germany, the danger of being taken by enemy cruisers was minimized by a convoy of airplanes. But that fact does not lessen the daring of the crew in running the big ship through the British blockade.

Just what happened off the west coast of Norway when the Bremen was sighted by a British submarine is still uncertain. Whether the sub captain really refrained from torpedoing the liner because there was no way of warning her first, or whether the ship's convoy effectively frightened off the enemy may never be known. There is a possibility that the British admiralty was banking on eventual possession of the Bremen after a victorious peace and decided against destroying her.

Nor is it yet clear why the German high command risked moving their $20,000,000 luxury liner. It is not probable that they intend using such a valuable vessel for commercial shipping or as an armed raider. Possibly the German authorities will now write "finis" to this enthralling serial and keep their prized possession safely in port.

The time has just about come when if something usual should happen, that would be news.

Middle age is that period when many a man goes in strenuously for making a fool of himself before it's too late.

"The modern girl is wrapped up in herself," declares a psychologist. And very little else.

"Newer Dawn"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: How tender sweet the nursling flower that clings unto the mother breast; how baneful that it must devour the curse of humankind oppressed. For dread destruction's iron hand with double scepter, force and fear, moves ruthless through a peaceful land to blast what love in travails rear.

And through a torn and bleeding world chill winds of desolation wail—if this be civil justice hurled how utterly God's earthlings fail. Thus has it been since time began, with man the barter in the pawn; but still we look—and looking, scan the heralds of a newer dawn.

FREDERICK FARRELL.

Test Of Fitness?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Post of December 11 carried a story that a candidate for admission to the local bar has stated that he would not advocate or support "any radical change in the present relationship between Government and private industry" in order to induce the committee on admission to reverse a prior decision against recommending his admission by the chairman of the committee.

Inasmuch as a lawyer, like any other citizen, is constitutionally obligated to support the laws of this country, entirely apart from their affect on "the present relationship between Government and private industry," if the committee has in fact required or accepted the statement made by this applicant as a test of his fitness to practice law in the District, the fitness of the committee itself to perform its function seems to invite investigation.

Dies Committee And The Consumers

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a taxpayer I am strongly opposed to Congress appropriating further funds for the committee investigating un-American activities, unless a new committee is appointed by the Speaker.

I have attended quite a few of this committee's hearings and the manner in which they have been conducted is a joke. It would remind one of the old-time minstrel show with Mr. Dies as the interlocutor and Messrs. Starnes and Thomas as bones and tambo. Dignity was entirely lacking when Congressmen Dempsey and Voorhis were absent. It was only when these two gentlemen were present that one was made to feel that he or she was attending a Congressional committee hearing.

The purpose of this committee is splendid but until such time as new members are appointed to take the places of Dies, Starnes and Thomas, it is merely a foolish waste of taxpayers' money.

Mr. Dies, a publicity seeker of the first water, is continually raising his eyes heavenward and shouting sabotage and at the same time doing his darndest to sabotage the Democratic Party. Well, at least he is doing just that whether or not it is his direct purpose.

I have personally been connected with a movement to put a stop to communism in our country for the past eight years and our organization has accomplished more than the Dies Committee will ever accomplish. And it did not cost $125,000 of taxpayers' money.

Dies is evidently of the opinion that the Communists in America are afraid of him. On the contrary, they are laughing up their sleeves at his antics.

The Communists' bogeyman is Congressman John McCormack, of Massachusetts. Ask him to serve as chairman, Mr. Speaker, and if he accepts you will truly see some action.

If Dies, Starnes and Thomas are really sincere they will resign immediately and say "Well, we did our best, but we could not get anywhere."

WORLD WAR VETERAN.
Upper Darby, Pa., Dec. 11.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your reporter who wrote the story on the Dies Committee "report" on the American consumer movement deserves praise for his shrewd journalism. He was careful to include in his story sufficient data so that the informed reader would not be misled by the committee's propaganda.

May I take the liberty of making explicit what your reporter was required, by the ethics of his profession, to leave unsaid?

1. The so-called "report" was kept secret even from other members of the committee and then was suddenly sprung. Apparently it was based upon no hearings whatever, not even the sham hearings which the committee has specialized in at one time or another.

2. The strong personal bias of the author, Mr. Matthews, was revealed by the list of organizations he was attacking, organizations which strongly opposed him and his colleagues whose improper labor policies wrecked and split Consumer's Research.

3. The "report" is quoted as saying: "Some of the current Government procedures against advertising and advertising media have been instigated and are being aided by those consumer organizations which are under the control of Communists."

Here we see the purpose of the "report." It is a direct attempt to influence, in an improper manner, pending litigation.

Several questions immediately arise. At whose behest, for whose benefit, has the Dies Committee undertaken this latest orgy of smearing?

Until this question is answered, Congress should refuse to give this irresponsible committee any more rope with which to hang itself.

"ENUF'S ENUF."
Arlington, Va., Dec. 11.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I used to be a Republican and have long hoped to find good reasons to return to that party. I loathe, of course, the Russian brand of communism but lately the Dies Committee has shown American communism working for all the finest ideals of American life so that I wonder if that is not, after all, the coming party.

Can it be true, as Mr. Dies claims, that the Communists dominate the only organization I know of fighting regularly to preserve American civil liberties? That the natural ferment and curiosity of youth is able to organize in this country only with Communist help?

According to Mr. Dies every youth organization in America which does not accept as gospel things as they are is "Communist-controlled." They seem, also, to be behind so many excellent relief organizations, peace groups, etc.

And now Mr. Dies tells us that practically all the consumer groups which have done real work to further honest advertising, expose dishonest frauds upon the purchasing public, and help keep prices reasonable are also "fellow-travelers" of the Communists. Verily, I begin to believe that in this country at least the Communists must be very worthy and idealistic people. Does anyone know where I can apply for membership?

C. P.
Washington, Dec. 11.

Another Version

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I must confess that in moments of weakness, I have in the past wondered, when hearing the American Reds speak of communism as twentieth century Americanism, whether they actually believed it themselves. Any doubts have been completely dispelled, thanks to C. Gilbert, educational director of the Communist Party.

The "facts" are that Czar Alexander in 1808 invaded Finland with an army, and from then on until March, 1917, Finland was enslaved by Russian imperialism. After the March revolution, the Finns saw their chance to escape the Russian yoke, but for some time to come the country was overrun with Red terrorists. The "war against the Soviets," to which Mr. Gilbert refers, was the heroic efforts of Mannerheim to chase the Red plunderers out of Finland.

Odious is his gibberish about "a government being formed by the people of Finland, the oppressed workers . . ." who, "with the help of the Red army, is giving Finland back to the workers . . ." The "people of Finland," to whom Mr. Gilbert here refers, is a handful of Red traitors, who for blood money are willing to betray the Finnish people into the hands of the Soviet army, into the hands of a foreign power in other words, the same as did the traitorous Nazis in Poland, Austria and Czecho-Slovakia. And, I should say, the same kind of traitors as the American Communists, who would do the same here, if given the opportunity.

I think Mr. Gilbert makes it quite clear in this paragraph that he would be equally anxious to "liberate" the American people into the hands of a foreign power, if that power happened to be Red Russia.

I spent many years in the Scandinavian countries immediately after the war, and I know of their struggles to keep out the Red spies and terrorists who were overrunning the country, fomenting revolt. The reply of the people was to found their own labor governments, free from the tyranny of the Reds, and they are today happy, peaceful and prosperous, minding their own business.

Many American Congressmen have in recent years gone to the Scandinavian countries to study their labor governments and cooperatives, the cooperatives that give the people ownership of industry, while still maintaining a democratic form of government.

There are only two things the clean-living Scandinavians are praying to be delivered from today: One is Nazi Germany, the other is Soviet Russia. And I pray that the bloody terror may stay away from our shores.

H. C. RUST.
Washington, Dec. 12.

Word And Deed

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: United States and Finland are two of the many democracies in this world. Why should the democracies not stand together for the right to govern themselves as they see fit?

The totalitarian systems have been fought within these countries. Then why is a nation of this system allowed by stronger countries to infringe on democracy?

Russia's act to destroy all smaller countries around it is making the world unsafe for anything but totalitarianism, and, if I am correct, the United States is supposed to make the world safe for democracy. There must be some way for us to protect our beliefs and not break the laws we have made to keep us neutral.

Since Finland is not a belligerent, because Russia has not declared war, it will not break our neutrality law to give Finland unlimited help. At the same time this would be making the world safe for peace and democracy in deed as well as word.

MIRIAM GRAY.
Beltsville, Md., Dec. 11.

The Post Impressionist

Boat Passer

Scooting over the Highway Bridge, I suddenly heard gongs, and saw a ruby eye winking its warning. I stopped the car; the safety gates swung across the roadway. Beyond the barrier, the floor of the bridge split apart, revealing a gulf of water.

Overhead, in a funny little house that perched on the girders as though deposited there by a tornado that specialized in doing tricky things, a man shifted levers and controllers that moved the section of steel and asphalt up and down river.

Thirty feet below, a tugboat hauled its queue of barges through the break. It coughed and grunted up the river to Georgetown. Its smokestack belched smoke and the heat waves made the cars on the opposite end of the bridge shimmer grotesquely.

Another boat, larger than the first, hooted a warning and came chugging at the bridge from the other side. Its smokestack towered over the bridge floor, but instead of heaving to until the first boat passed through the draw, the second vessel steamed full speed ahead for a rigid section between the stone pilings. Startled motorists leaned from their car windows, staring down, tensed for the scream of ripping steel.

But just as the large tug seemed about to crash into the bridge its smokestack sloped sharply backward and cleared the span, proceeding with an impudent "huh! huh! . . . huh! huh! huh!" down current, while the smaller vessel was still maneuvering through the narrow draw.

The gong sounded again when the vessels reached clear water on both sides of the cribbing. The bridge watchman stepped into the highway. "O. K. Let's go!" And he waved his red flag at the giant trucks, at buses and passenger cars. Motors whirred into action. The gates swung back against the girders and flashing red eyes changed to emerald.

I was curious to learn how this old water highway "did business." I parked my car at the airport and walked back. As I approached the watchman's shack on the center of the long bridge I saw him puffing on his pipe, sitting on a chair leaned against a girder, and watching the traffic flashing past while he awaited the next boat toot and the demand for action.

Engaging him in conversation, I learned that life often stages its dramas on the bridge, or beneath it. Taxis that stop in midbridge to discharge passengers are watched with suspicion. Several of the watchmen have seen occupants emerge "to admire the view," then suddenly swing over the guard rail and plunge, screaming, into the Potomac.

"But," commented the watchman, removing his pipe from his lips and spitting neatly over the rail, "the most of 'em change their minds the minute they hit water. Reminds me of the feller who was goin' to end it all, and after hoppin' into the river and splashing around a while, he screams for help. When he's pulled out he complains that the water's so cold he almost froze to death!"

These guardsmen also fish people out of the river when canoes or speedboats overturn near the bridge. In their capacity as "special police" they occasionally aid the regular force in trapping criminals or wanted persons in the center of the structure, where escape is impossible.

Sometimes motorists "beat the lights," the warning signals, the flag-waving watchman, and finally stop on the central portion just as it splits apart. Since it would require an extra two or three minutes to shoo off such daffy drivers, they get a free round trip on the drawbridge—and later an ear-frying scolding.

One freak accident occurred when watchmen were sent scurrying for safety on the pavements. An automobile, out of control, zig-zagged across the span and crashed through the safety gate. But it didn't clear the end of the opened bridge. It dangled over the river, suspended by its rear wheels, while the driver screamed for help.

After each bridge opening the operator descends to the highway, lowers himself through a trap door in the pavement and inspects, adjusts and oils the motors, gears and great rollers that revolve the turntable. One misstep on slippery stone or ice-sheathed metal—and he'll crumble on the girders below or be "in the drink."

Overhead he hears the throb of traffic; below him the Potomac laps and splashes against the cribbing. But he hooks a leg around a steel beam and aims a squirt of oil at the gate mechanism.

"Gotta hurry," he mutters, looking down river. "There comes another tug past Hains Point." And the wind brings the tooted command to "break it up and move along." And as the hurrying hundreds of motorists are about to chafe irritably behind their wheels, the operator scrambles aloft to his post, hurrying to sever and seal the great traffic artery between Washington and Dixieland.

'Horse And Buggy' Traffic

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I followed your series on "Horse and Buggy" traffic in the District, and I desire to compliment you for your crusading spirit. I hope that your series will for once wake up the District Traffic Bureau and prompt them to employ some foresight.

The lack of foresight of the policy-formers in the Traffic Bureaus is illustrated by the fact that where a District car owner moves from the District before his car is called up for inspection, and registers his car in one of the States, the inspection fee which he was obliged to pay months in advance, and before he could obtain his 1939 tags, cannot be refunded. Because, as the director of traffic and vehicles states, "The law does not provide for a refund of the fee." Not only is this a lack of foresight, but a lack of public interest.

Best of luck in your effort to rid the District of its present "horse and buggy" traffic. Very truly yours,

E. L. G.

Fair Enough

Comrade Oumansky

THE DIGNITY of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics is personified in the United States by Constantine Oumansky, a former journalist propagandist and press censor and occasional interpreter for Josef Stalin. He is small and may be described as prepossessing only at a ruthless sacrifice of candor. For contrast he may be compared to Hjalmar Procope, the Finnish minister—a tall, handsome man of around 40 years, with a brave, manly bearing and a following in Washington which amounts to a menace to American neutrality on the present stage of the second world war, they personify their respective countries so accurately.

Mr. Oumansky's personality is not endearing, and his reputation has been heightened not only by the memoirs of those who knew him as a pushful, opportunist clerk in Moscow when he was worming his way through the government bureaus but also by events parallel to his services here. The mere sight or mention of his excellency—a title which suggests more of sarcasm than of ceremony—stirs recollection of his former chief and predecessor, Alexander Troyanovsky, once an officer in the Czar's cavalry.

Troyanovsky Yanked Back Under Arrest

TROYANOVSKY was recalled to Russia, and, although he has not yet been shot, his status apparently amounts to open arrest. Doubtless Oumansky himself will be yanked back one day and, not unthinkably, stood against a wall, like so many of his late colleagues in the service of the new Czar. To say that such a routine move in the Moscow foreign office would wet a single eye in Washington, Moscow or anywhere else would be to venture into prophecy and irresponsible opinion. It is much less chancy, however, to predict that he, in his turn, will be recalled, undone by the spying and whispering of confidants in his own household in the big, rich embassy behind the red curtains, for that is the tradition of the corps which he adorns.

As for Troyanovsky, though he did have charm and something which, for lack of a more precise word, may be set down as decency, it can only be said that his removal and such further reverses as may have befallen him in Moscow serve him damn well right. A man of his intelligence and advantages must have known that he was slumming and that he must expect treachery.

Comrade Oumansky's Status Also Shaky

HE ONCE APPEARED at a formal dinner in white tie and tails, while Comrade Earl Browder, seated down the board, wore a common business suit and bounced out before the meal was over in exasperation over remarks flung at him by Norman Thomas, one chair removed. Comrade Browder's attire and conduct that evening seemed ominous for Comrade Troyanovsky. Good manners are a serious deviation from the party line, and Troyanovsky not only behaved acceptably in Washington but gave scandal by associating with the bourgeoisie in the little resort town of Sarasota, Fla., in winter.

The Soviet Ambassador should not make a mug of the first comrade of the American branch of the conspiracy, but no doubt Troyanovsky did find unbearable the company of his comrades in the U. S. A. and crossed the line in sheer desperation. Indeed, most of them do break out whenever other people will have them.

Comrade Oumansky runs less risk of deviation in the same manner, but there are other fields in which one may be guilty of grave—indeed, even fatal—error in the Soviet foreign service. One may be guilty of a racial fault, as the new German comrades of the Moscow government would put it, and many of those who have been liquidated in the last few years were guilty of that fault, whatever else they may have been accused of.

Reich, Soviet Envoys Now Fraternize

COMRADE OUMANSKY'S closest colleague, in the political sense, nowadays is Comrade Thomsen, of the Nazi Embassy, but if he should prove racially unacceptable to Comrade Thomsen no mere personal considerations or regard for distinguished service in the peculiar ways of Soviet diplomacy would be allowed to stand in the way of harmonious efficiency. Others in Oumansky's corps have been shot for fraternizing with the Nazis, but now that Stalin fraternizes with them a race-wrong diplomat might be picked for liquidation as a gesture of solidarity with Berlin.

Irresistibly the thought of his excellency Oumansky and Dr. Procope of Finland conjures the spectacle of Oumansky's country assaulting Procope's. And this, in turn, suggests a mental picture of a more intimate conflict—a personal one between Oumansky and the manly, honest, clean-scrubbed Finn. That is a beautiful picture, suitable for framing.

Businessmen See Continued Rise

Cleveland, Dec. 13 (AP).—Questionnaires from more than 500 businessmen showed today the overwhelming opinion that good business will continue. The Chamber of Commerce questioned executives who yesterday heard Col. Leonard P. Ayres, Cleveland economist, make his annual business forecast.

Out of 556 replies, 456 said that business would be better in the first quarter of 1940 compared with the same period a year ago. Eighty said it would be about the same and 16 said it would be worse.

Budget Magic

By Mark Sullivan

Taft Statement Nettles Roosevelt

AT THE PRESIDENT'S press conference, it was a slight incident, it occupied not over a minute or two. But as a reflection of Mr. Roosevelt's temperament, it may throw light on events ahead.

One of the newspapermen remarked that Republican Senator Robert A. Taft, in a speech at Boston, had said that the budget could be balanced in two years. Had the President any comment, the newspaperman asked.

Mr. Roosevelt could have passed it over lightly, as he does many questions. Always, against questions that might embarrass, or embroil, he has many armors of defense, many weapons of parry. He must have. For the fact that he performs at these press conferences twice weekly is an incredible achievement of self-confidence and versatility, and also perhaps valor, certainly daring.

He sits at his desk, facing a semi-circle of some hundred newspapermen—200 of the alertest and most penetrating eyes in the world fixed intently upon him. He holds himself ready to meet any question. How various those questions can be, how unexpected, how sometimes provocative; how sometimes subtle, designed to catch the President off guard; how sometimes charged with possibility of explosiveness—all that will be realized by those who understand the range of temperaments and interests in a hundred newspapermen and the papers they represent.

'Poker Face' Is One Of President's Qualities

MR. ROOSEVELT must face the questions, not necessarily answer all of them. Nine times out of ten he does answer, sometimes with what seems almost startling frankness and informality. For the tenth question, for the occasional avoidance of answer, he has many arts of defense—a disarming laugh, a smiling and deliberately cryptic equivocation which the newspapermen understand, sometimes a frank statement that he would prefer not to answer that question.

But as everyone knows, and newspapermen most of all, disinclination to answer a question is sometimes itself an answer. A response which says the responder has no information, sometimes contains all the information any newspaperman needs. And every newspaperman has learned, as every cross-examiner knows, that the most revealing answer in the world may be found in the very impact of an unexpected question upon the features of the person questioned. Consequently, Mr. Roosevelt's arts of self-defense include an expression that is sometimes on his countenance between questions, after he has answered one question and is awaiting the next. It is an expression of, so to speak, inexpressiveness, called in some quarters a "poker face."

Mr. Roosevelt is not by nature cautious; on the contrary, impetuous. This his associates know. They try, not always with complete success, to guard him against incaution. At his press conferences there is always present his loyal secretary, Mr. Stephen Early, zealous to guard his chief against misadventure. Mr. Early, his expression a curious compound of vigilance and anxiety, holds himself ready, one senses, to convey warning to his chief, if not in words, by his manner; to somehow psychically transmit a message: "Look out for that one, chief, there's dynamite in it."

Taft Statement Irritates Roosevelt

IN THE QUESTION about Senator Taft's statement on the budget, there was not necessarily any dynamite—unless Mr. Roosevelt himself, by his answer, put it in. He could have passed it off with a smile, or an "Indeed?" He could have genially wisecracked about it—he is good at that.

Be he did none of these things. He showed instant irritation. As automatically as reaction to a blow, he had the manner of suddenly encountering a challenge—and answering with counter-challenge. He put a snapping quality into his reply. If, he said, Senator Taft knows how to balance the budget, then will Mr. Taft furnish a bill of particulars? Mr. Roosevelt would, he said, give anything in the world for a bill of particulars showing how the budget could be balanced in two years.

Senator Taft's statement was, after all, just an ordinary commonplace of political controversy. One may guess the cause of Mr. Roosevelt's nettlement was in part within himself; that Mr. Taft's remark was merely the detonating occasion for an inner emotion that had long been brewing within Mr. Roosevelt's own mind. For it happens that precisely what Mr. Taft said—that the budget could be balanced in two years—is exactly what Mr. Roosevelt has himself said each year for seven years past. Even after he had abandoned his early policy of economy, after he had adopted the policy of prodigious borrowing and spending, he still sincerely entertained the hope, and confidently conveyed to Congress in his messages and speeches the expectation that the budget would be balanced the next year, or at most the year after next.

He Might Run Again To Spite His Critics

THAT MR. ROOSEVELT for seven years carried in his mind two policies that were at war with each other—enormous spending and balancing the budget; that he thought he could be successful with both; and that, as he came to the end of his time, he was forced to realize he must fail—all that composes a phase of Mr. Roosevelt's temperament which might explain his present irritability.

A good many times during the next ten months, Mr. Roosevelt is going to hear criticism of himself about the budget. Will his reaction continue to be one of irritation, perhaps grow to one of anger? Would it cause Mr. Roosevelt to try harder to balance the budget? Or would he feel that to do that would be doing what his critics demand, playing into his opponents' hands? What will be the effect on the third-term question? Mr. Roosevelt is one in whom the instinct of self-justification is strong. Almost one can imagine Mr. Roosevelt saying to his critics—"If you don't stop nagging me about the budget, I'll run again."

Wallace to Get Farm Credit Rule

sound, long-term basis," while the agriculture program was set up to meet a temporary emergency. The latter program had in it the elements of relief, Miller said, and was not required to insist on the soundness of its business.

Politics Feared

"The Congress saw clearly that if sound methods were adhered to," Miller said, "the funds of the Government (used by the Agriculture Department in its lending activity) could be supplemented by the sale of debentures to the public. This was only possible, however, if the FCA was kept free of both partisan and departmental politics. Up to this time that policy has been followed."

There were complaints in Congress last spring that the FCA was not as liberal as the emergency lending agencies, Miller added, but the farmers doing business with it have never felt it to be a "grasping creditor" and the agency has always kept in mind its function as a trustee of farmers' and public money invested in its bonds.

In Washington, Ezra Benson, the council's local representative, said he thought the sentiment of the organization's 1,600,000 farmer members accurately expressed the opinion of other farm and producers' groups.

From Denver, F. E. Mollin, secretary of the National Livestock Association, wired The Post that since the "partial emasculation" of the FCA under the reorganization order, the matter had been discussed at numerous Western livestock meetings.

"Invariably such meetings have expressed themselves as being opposed to elimination of the FCA as an independent agency, or to its even being partially submerged in the Department of Agriculture. It is felt that in the department it will become a mere political setup and that the chances of too liberal credit, detrimental in the long run to agricultural producers, will be thereby much enhanced."

Wallace Surprised

Assets in activities supervised and administered by the FCA amount to well above $5,000,000,000.

The reorganization order provision that shifted the FCA to Agriculture came as a surprise to officials involved, including Secretary Wallace.

In the face of an almost immediate "protest meeting" by farm group representatives and threats of the resignation of FCA Gov. F. F. Hill, the Wallace "hands off" order was issued.

Gov. Hill could not be reached for comment last night.

Farm Prices Rise On Drought, War

the face of heavy surpluses, would appear odd, it is said, if underlying forces were not examined.

American farmers, in the world competition for supplying the European market, it is pointed out, have an important advantage in a shorter route for ships. This advantage, of course, they must share with Canada. Not only are routes to other parts of the world two or three times as long, but the North Atlantic route is capable of convoy protection against submarines and other sea attacks.

Shipping considerations, it is said, may become more important and may affect particularly shipments of cotton from India. Shipping was a vital factor in World War No. 1, it was recalled.

Europe's Stocks Short

Another thing that may have a bearing on the demand for American cotton, as well as on the price, it is said, is that cotton stocks in Europe were abnormally small when war broke out.

Moreover, Government sources explained, there has been some shifting of textile orders to this country from neutral markets formerly supplied by European countries, making for an increase in the demand for American cotton. Substitution of cotton for jute, which has risen in price and is difficult to get, may account for several hundred thousand bales.

The carryover of corn on farms and in commercial hands as of October 1 was estimated by the department at 547,000,000 bushels. The latest estimate for the current year's crop is 2,591,000,000 bushels. Consumption normally has been around 2,300,000,000 bushels.

In consequence, the carryover appears likely to be more than 600,000,000 bushels. If conditions governing the production of winter crops turn out as bad as they now appear, a great burden may be thrown upon corn in supplying food requirements. And if business is better and employment improves, the normal consumption rate of 2,300,000,000 bushels may be increased.

Tufts Named to Board Of Central Mission

Col. W. O. Tufts, former president of Goodwill Industries, was elected last night to the board of directors of the Central Union Mission. He resigned as Goodwill head last year.

Another new member of the board is Dr. Wilson Compton, secretary-manager of the National Lumber Manufacturers Association. William H. Ramsey was named vice president to fill a vacancy caused by the death of James Trimble.

All other officers of the Mission were re-elected. They were E. H. DeGroot, jr., president; Harry Hoskinson, treasurer, and Austin M. Cooper, secertary.

'Life Begins at 9' Course Gives Tips to FCA Stenographers

Almost Entire Staff of Agency Are Alumnae Of After-Hour Study Which Solves Even Super-Insolent Messenger Problem

By Alfred Friendly

With an answer to every problem from the overamorous boss to the superinsolent messenger boy, the Farm Credit Administration's famous secretarial course is going into its third successful year.

Behind it is an alumnae list of almost the entire secretarial staff of the agency. The undergraduates are the FCA's stenographers, dreaming of better jobs to come.

The course has been given four times as an after-hour, voluntary affair. About 150 young ladies have graduated from it, having learned how to answer phones without saying "All righty" or "Bye-bye now," how to load the chief's brief case for a trip and how to take a bawling out without going into an emotional decline.

The course, familiarly subtitled "Life Begins at Nine o'Clock" or "How to Win Promotions and Influence the Boss to Go Home Early," includes instruction on the proper clothing, jewelry and make-up, how to get rid of a time-consuming caller and where to sit when taking dictation.

The perfect secretary is advised to study the executive's shortcomings and seek to remedy them. If he is inclined to be messy, however, don't try to reform him, the manual advises, because "his wife probably nags him at home for the same reason."

Out-of-hours relationships with the chief, the manual says, is a topic "the movies have covered generously, if not adequately." Don't get silly, romantic notions, and don't try to make up for inefficiency by charm, students are advised. Hollywood secretaries, the instruction books finds, "almost always show a very definite lack of poise, judgment and emotional control."

The instruction manual contains no specific instructions on how to keep your job, and at the same time, your "objective relationship" with the boss, if the boss is not himself "objective." Instructions on the subject, however, are given in class, it was learned.

The manual does warn, however, against the cardinal sin of developing a "mother complex." Since all the secretary's energies "are devoted to helping one man and saving his time, she may become overzealous in sheltering him," it is noted. "Loyalty to your chief is very fine and very necessary," the course advises, but there is such a thing as carrying it too far.

"If your chief is married," the instructions continue, "you should have no trouble in deciding how to act with his wife. When she comes into the office, treat her with the same friendly helpfulness that you use with any caller. In most cases she'll be cordial, but don't be hurt, if she's one of the two women in a hundred who seem resentful. After all, you spend seven hours a day with her husband. If the chief and she invite you out socially, accept if you want to but don't feel obliged to return the invitation. Don't talk to her about office matters; the chief probably tells her all he wants her to know about his business."

As for dates with a male coworker, the manual says it is permitted, provided the man is the sort that the secretary would go out with anyway. The rule book hints that on these dates it might be just as well not to take your office efficiency with you.

"The effective secretary is friendly, but in a rather impersonal way," the book concludes.

The secretary is warned not to be a vamp, and above all, to keep private emotional troubles out of the office. Hobbies and moderate exercises are prescribed as a means for keeping an "even keel."

"Emotional troubles should not be suppressed entirely," the instruction manual advises somewhat ambiguously, "but they may be balanced and brought under control if interests outside office hours are wholesome and satisfying."

The good secretary, the course instructs, will get the chief out of time-wasting interviews by reminding him of a fake engagement. She will not distract his attention while dictating by flashy jewelry, staring out the window, fixing her hair or biting her nails. In telephoning a superior officer, she will get her chief on the phone first; in telephoning a subordinate, she will get the subordinate on before she buzzes her boss.

In answering a phone she will not continue an office conversation after picking up the receiver. If she wants to say something that the person on the other end should not hear, she will place her hand firmly over the mouthpiece and hold it away from her; she will not put the mouthpiece against her chest.

In writing letters, she will correct obvious mistakes of her boss, but will not go too far, unless she has specific orders to "fix it up and make it read "o. k."

Ultimate objective of the course is to make each student the perfect secretary, defined as "A stenographer who knows so much about her employer's business he is afraid to fire her."

Hatch Plans Law To Cover District

drawing up such legislation."

Senator Hatch said earlier in the week that he would sponsor an amendment to the act barring political activities of State employes who are paid in part with Federal funds.

His objective is to cover such persons as State highway department employes, social security workers, and officeholders in other State agencies to which the Federal Government contributes funds.

As the Federal Government makes a lump-sum contribution to the operating cost of the District, Congress has a dual basis for broadening the act to cover all local municipal employes. The second basis is that Congress has exclusive legislative powers over the Capital.

Officials hinted that Congress might not be as willing to curb political activities of District employes as it often is to pass other local legislation.

Without the protection of such a law, it was pointed out, the District might become a "dumping ground" for political appointees of Congressmen who did not want to be hampered by the Federal act.

Chairman King of the Senate District Committee, and some municipal officials believe that enactment of a proper civil-service law for the District would prevent the unloading of political workers from the States on the local government.

This proposal is included in the Seal reorganization plan, but the whole legislative proposal faces many obstacles at the next session.

Belgian Senate Votes Funds for Defense

Brussels, Dec. 13 (AP).—The Belgian Senate voted 122 to 11 today for budgets for defense, air raid precautions and national police totaling 1,545,480,874 francs (about $51,516,029).

The measures were the first parts of a budget proposed by the government for 1940 totaling 11,650,000,000 francs (about $388,533,333). The two measures approved by the Senate now go to the Chamber of Deputies.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Bill Of Rights

FRIDAY of this week is the anniversary of the ratification of the first ten amendments to the Constitution. They are known as the Bill of Rights. Though in form these amendments are a part of the Constitution, and therefore in theory subject to repeal or amendment by the ordinary procedure, in fact the American tradition holds that the Bill of Rights rests upon self-evident, inalienable, eternal, and universal principles which no government, and no majority of people, may violate.

The rest of the Constitution is a framework of government designed to establish a federal union operated by representative democracy;" it is also the outline of a polity for the ordering of affairs. This constitutional system comes from the people, that is to say from majorities among the people, and in the course of history is subject to change by other majorities. But the Bill of Rights does not come from the people and is not subject to change by majorities. It comes from the nature of things. It declares the inalienable rights of man not only against all government but also against the people collectively.

Founders Believed Rights Are Divine

IT ESTABLISHES rights which no majority may abrogate, and as Jefferson put it in his First Inaugural "to violate would be oppression." Those words are pregnant, for in the philosophy of the American founders oppression was illegal even if it was done under the forms of law, and such men as Jefferson and Franklin were fond of saying that "rebellion to tyrants is obedience to God."

That was not a rhetorical phrase. They really believed that the rights of man came from his Creator and that they are derived from the laws of the universe itself. In defending these rights against all earthly powers, against kings or tyrants or popular majorities, they held that they were practicing obedience to God. In their view the framework of government and the form of the social order were the things of Caesar; but the rights of man were not Caesar's but the things of God.

This belief is outlawed in the lands where liberty has been crushed, and the ideas themselves are scornfully rejected as vapors from a dying social order. But even here, where the usages of freedom still persist, the multitude of men is no longer very sure why they believe in freedom. In the course of the nineteenth century it ceased to be intellectually respectable to affirm that any principle is self-evident, inalienable, eternal and universal. And thus there was cut away the ultimate ground on which liberty can alone be defended as against the argument from expediency and the prestige of power and success.

So on this anniversary it is useful to remember where our liberties originate, from what source come their irrepressible and enduring energies. For we shall need to re-discover what we had become too sophisticated to believe.

Love Of Freedom Rooted Deep In Man

THE SOPHISTS among modern historians like to tell us that our liberties come from the self-serving action of the barons who extracted Magna Carta from King John, and from successive classes of landowners, merchants, and working men. The explanation is inadequate. If the struggle for liberty is no more than the struggle of a special class at a special moment, then how does one explain the fact that millions have enlisted who had no special interest, or, if they had, were destined to die before they could enjoy it?

These struggles are at once too general and too passionate to be explained on the ground of calculated self-interest. Men respond to the cause of liberty who can never hope to enjoy its fruits. So it must be that the tree of liberty has its root in some deep and abiding need of man. The founders of our liberties knew this. They knew that the need to be free, once awakened in man, is as imperative a passion, and almost as universal a passion, as hunger and love.

In safety and comfort men who enjoy liberty may forget this. They may think that the language of liberty is rhetorical. In the security of their own liberties they will often be unable to comprehend how ordinary men like themselves can be so impractical as to leave their homes, their families, their careers, to go out to dwell in mud and darkness, and to be cold and bored and dirty, and to be exposed to death and mutilation, rather than live without the conviction that they are free.

It seems so silly, so incomprehensible to comfortable, sensible people. It is often equally difficult for those who are well-fed, never having missed their regular meals, to comprehend how they themselves would feel and behave if they were starving. They find it hard to imagine how men feel when they are starved for liberty.

Forefathers Paid In Blood For Liberty

WHAT THEN is this passion, apparently so abstract that many today think it is an invention of the propagandists, this passion which has moved ordinary selfish, sensual men like ourselves, the Greeks who stood at Thermopylae and the Frenchmen who stand on the Maginot line, the British who guard the infested seas, and the Finns who stand in the Karelian Isthmus,—has moved them to such deeds of bravery and self-sacrifice?

That is what needs to be explained when we read our own Bill of Rights, and marvel at the succession of brave men who paid with their blood for those rights, when we wonder if we, who are their heirs, are made of the same stuff.

The root of the passion which has moved such men is in some measure present in all men; it is the will to live, not as a thing and not as an animal, but as an inviolable, self-respecting and respected, human person. This is the indestructible cause of man's desire to be free. Man is so constituted that he has this passion. Because he is endowed with the faculty of reason, he is suffocated and strangled and literally done to death, if he is compelled for too long and too completely to submit to unreason, and irrational arbitrariness, and sheer brute circumstance. So far as we know, man alone is this kind of being. This is how his nature differs radically from that of other animals, even from the ants and the bees who also live in highly organized communities. For they do their collective and servile labors without having to be coerced by an Ogpu or a Gestapo. But man has to be coerced. Man has to be oppressed. Why? Because his passion to live as a human person is so indestructible that his oppressors can never for a moment relax their vigilance.

Precious Inheritance May Be Squandered

THIS ENERGY of the soul has been awakened,—and awakened has become insistent, and insistent it is irresistible,—by means of a progressive revelation which began in the Mediterranean world. On this revelation of man our civilization is founded. This revelation is the central belief of the enduring religion; it is the argument of the perennial philosophy; it is the beginning and the end of the developing science; it is the subject matter of the expressive arts; and it is the major premise of the laws and institutions of the civilized world.

Without a comprehension of this truth about the nature of man, nothing that we value is comprehensible.

Thus no one can explain the Bill of Rights to someone who does not believe that the soul is rational and, that, therefore, the human person is inviolable. If he has not grasped this truth, if he has not had this revelation, if he does not know the idea which these words express, how will you convince him that his religion shall not be prescribed by public officials, or that he has the right to speak and to listen, or that the powers not delegated to the government are reserved to the people?

How will you affirm that freedom is better than tyranny if you are not able to affirm that it is the destiny of man's nature that he should be free? No one can prove the value of liberty by drawing up a balance sheet of profits and losses. If men do not understand that the origin of their liberties is in the nature of man, they will not really understand their liberties, nor learn to value their liberties until they have let them be destroyed. And so, though they live in freedom, they will squander their inheritance, having forgotten how it was earned and accumulated.

Ohio Valley to Need 13% More Freight Cars

Cincinnati, Dec. 13 (AP).—At least 13 per cent more freight cars will be required to handle Ohio Valley business in the first quarter of 1940, than in the same period this year, reports submitted to the Ohio Valley Transportation Advisory Board indicated today.

Several hundred shippers of the area assembled for the one-day session. Estimates involve use of 678,725 cars, as against 599,103 for the first three months of 1939, they said.

Almas Temple of Shrine Inducts 31 Members; 1,200 Nobles Present at Fall Ceremonial Here

Potentates From Maryland, Virginia Units in Attendance

Before 1,200 nobles, Almas Temple of the Shrine last night received 31 new members at its fall ceremonial at the Mayflower Hotel. Of the new members, 22 were received by initiation and nine through affiliation.

Several temples in Maryland and Virginia were represented by their potentates. These included Acca Temple, Richmond, Walter E. Mossmiller, jr.; and Boumi Temple, Baltimore, E. Elmer Langrall. Other distinguished visitors included Leonard F. Steuart, imperial treasurer; E. W. Jacocks, assistant to the imperial recorder; Wythe D. Anderson, recorder of Acca Temple; Charles A. Overton, jr., Acca Temple, and Past Imperial Potentate Andrew A. D. Rahm.

Ritualistic work was under direction of Evan Jones and a team including Robert B. Bennett, Donald W. Graffius, Marvin E. Fowler, Earl W. Shinn, Joseph F. Lyvers, Louis Marks, Mishel G. Daoud, Sulaiman Daoud, William V. Carpenter, the Rev. John C. Palmer, Arthur G. Fessenden, Harry Gardner, William P. Amos and Harry J. Harth.

Candidates initiated were Roy C. Allan, Barney J. Berkes, John H. Bradley, William L. Bush, James Coker, George A. Ford, John J. Freeman, Albert E. Gill, Harry S. Glickman, Saul Fink Lewis, Joseph A. Lockie, Anastasios D. Marticos, Arnold B. McKee, Willard R. Memler, Abner C. Newworth, Dr. William K. Petty, Oliver F. Ramsey, Charles M. Rhodes, jr., Maurice A. Roe, Charles E. Stousland, Coy E. Strickland, George Ezra Weed, jr.

Affiliations were Arthur A. F. Aim, Curtis E. Bailey, Ray Blain, Edward H. Deets, Temple W. Hilliard, jr., Lee M. Johnson, Thomas A. Long, Ralph W. Peterson, Hector G. Spaulding.

3d Division Society Hears Col. Bliss

Col. Edward G. Bliss reminisced on experiences with the Sixth Engineers in the World War last night at a gathering of the Third Division Society, A. E. F., at the Camden Tavern. Capt. Frank J. Jerry presided.

The society granted its first life membership to a former Washington man, Pvt. James E. Wiley, who was wounded in the Argonne, and is at the Veteran's Hospital at Bay Pines, Fla. Plans were discussed for a barn dance February 3.

City News In Brief

Television Discussed

Clarence W. Farrier, television co-ordinator of the National Broadcasting Co., last night addressed 50 members of the American Society of Agricultural Engineers, Washington Section, in Wesley Hall on "Recent Developments in Television." Charles Gaspen, of the Bureau of Agricultural Chemistry and Engineering, presided.

Safety at Christmas

Fire Chief Porter yesterday listed some safety measures for Christmas. Here they are:

Lighted candles are hazardous and should not be used. Wrapping paper should not be permitted to accumulate. Mechanical toys that use alcohol or other liquid as a source of power never should be used except under supervision of an adult. Buy only fresh trees which have been stored outdoors. Throw away tree immediately after holidays.

Police Car Struck

Driving while intoxicated and traveling against one-way traffic in the 3600 block Thirteenth street northwest were the charges brought against Brevard D. Strohecker, 50, of 3403 Holmead p ce northwest, after he collided with police scout car 102 last night. No one was hurt.

Fire Boxes Out

Twenty-seven fire boxes were temporarily put out of commission last night after a taxicab knocked over a box at Fifteenth and N streets northwest. The driver reported to police that he had swerved to avoid striking another auto.

Zoning Action On Laundry Is Delayed

The Board of Zoning Adjustment yesterday approved three petitions for zoning variances, but delayed action on the application of the House of the Good Shepherd to erect a laundry building on its grounds at Thirty-sixth and R streets northwest.

It is expected the board will decide the laundry petition tomorrow. The application was fought by Georgetown civic groups at a recent hearing.

Permission was granted Rudolph B. Behrend to establish a sandpit at Forty-ninth and C streets southeast.

The appeal of Samuel J. Prescott Co. for permission to erect a three-story building on an alley lot in the rear of 1301-1307 W street northwest, was aproved, as was a plea for extension of a nonconforming gasoline service station at 101-103 Upshur street northwest.

Applications by Himmelfarb Properties to enlarge an existing gasoline station at 823 Pennsylvania avenue southeast, and of the Anacostia Masonic Lodge to establish bowling alleys on the east side of Nichols avenue, between U and V streets southeast, were not acted on.

The application to establish a gasoline station at 119 E street northwest, was denied.

3 Librarians Describe Work For Citizens

The Rhode Island Avenue Citizens Association, meeting last night at the Woodridge subbranch library, celebrated the library's tenth anniversary with talks by three women instrumental in its development.

Speakers were Miss Clara Herbert, assistant District librarian, whose subject was "The Place of the Library in the Community;" Mrs. Harry Bowman, branch librarian, and Miss Lorena G. Mondereau, librarian at its inception ten years ago.

The association adopted two resolutions looking to enforcement of deed covenants which prohibit sale of land for the sale or manufacture of alcoholic beverages. One resolution condemned action of the ABC Board in licensing two retail liquor dispensaries in the 2300 block of Rhode Island avenue northeast. The other approved action of the association's executive committee in lending financial support to pending court action to enforce the deed covenants, which goes before a pretrial judge today.

A third resolution protested the reported action of the Park and Planning Commission in authorizing a field house at Turkey Thicket after being asked some time ago to establish one at Langdon Park.

Next Congress May Wash Out Problem of Soiled Bedsheets

Washington's dirty linen may be washed in public view on Capitol Hill when Congress reconvenes.

Miss Mabel Heller, clerk of the House District Committee, yesterday discovered that the National Capital has no law, as have many States, requiring hotels and rooming houses to change the linen daily or at least every time the occupant changes.

Health department officials confessed that the District was lax in this regard, and Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger, assistant health officer, said the department thought a broader law covering all sanitary requirements for rooming houses would be advisable.

The discovery with regard to Washington's lack of sanitary regulation was made by an itinerant hotel steward. He told Miss Heller that most States in which he had worked had laws requiring daily change in linen and that the District was the first place he found that hadn't any such control.

Some States, the steward said, go so far as to stipulate the length of bed sheets so that guests will not stick their toes out in the cold.

Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal confessed he had never thought about the matter.

An inquiry at one of the leading hotels brought the indignant response that the housekeeper attends to such matters and of course the linen was changed daily.

Dr. Seckinger said the health department had been studying the problem of insanitary conditions in local rooming houses, but now does not have the staff of inspectors to enforce compulsory sanitation law were one enacted.

He said complaints have come to the department that beds in cheap rooming houses often are used on a 24-hour basis of two shifts. Disease, particularly tuberculosis, may be transmitted by bed linen, he said.

Auto Kills Printer, 66, Hurts Wife

Compositor Is 81st Victim of Capital Traffic in Year; Hit on 9th Street

Edgar T. Brown, 66, of 4707 Georgia avenue northwest, was killed last night as he crossed Ninth street at Taylor street northwest. His wife, Claudia M., 66, struck down at the same time and taken to Casualty Hospital with him, remained in a serious condition.

Brown was the eighty-first traffic victim of the year. He was a printer on the Times-Herald. The car striking the elderly couple was driven by Lacey N. Schumaker, 30, of 542 Shepherd street northwest.

Arthur Tyrell, 17, of 246 Park avenue, Takoma Park, Md., was treated at Walter Reed Hospital for head injuries after he had been knocked from his bicycle at Blair avenue and Butternut street northwest by an auto operated, police said, by Harold L. Walters, 32, of 422 Butternut street northwest.

Meters to Be Added

The installation of parking meters, pedestrian control regulations, and compulsory auto inspection were described by Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer yesterday as "Washington's most successful traffic improvements of the past year."

Speaking at a meeting of the American Business Clubs in the Hay-Adams House, Van Duzer said he is considering widespread expansion of the parking meter system. He said that 88 per cent of local businessmen advocate extension of the service.

In answer to a question, Van Duzer said revenue from the meters now goes into the District's general fund, but he hopes eventually to have it earmarked for traffic improvements and highway maintenance.

Success of pedestrian control regulations, he said, is due largely to promotion work by newspapers and radio stations. Studies show, he said, that the regulations are observed by 85 per cent of the pedestrians at crossings where policemen are not on duty and by 95 per cent when a policeman is within view.

The bulk of District cars, said Van Duzer, have already passed inspection and the remainder will bear green seals of approval by January 15. Next year's examinations will begin on April 15, he added.

Super-Road Action Seen

Special Dispatch to The Post

Oklahoma City, Okla., Dec. 13.—Representative Cartwright (Democrat), of Oklahoma, chairman of the House Roads Committee, predicted today that legislation for the proposed superhighway between Washington D. C., and Boston would be considered early in the next session of Congress.

Addressing the C. I. T. seminar of safety on the relationship of highways to traffic accidents, Cartwright evidenced strong interest in the proposed superhighway and said a recent report on the project by Bureau of Public Roads officials would receive "serious consideration" early in 1940.

Cartwright said he was convinced the road would be "self-supporting" and was gratified to find that traffic authorities are taking steps to meet future highway needs.

Although it is time to think of superhighway developments, Cartwright said, a national system of toll roads is not yet practical. New construction to meet heavy traffic loads in certain areas should be the first consideration, he added.

The seminar, under the direction of John W. Darr, vice president of the Commercial Investment Trust Corporation and a trustee of the C. I. T. Safety Foundation, drew newspaper editors and publishers from all sections of the State.

Burns Out Lights Of Hearse and Now Reposes in Jail

Robert Pittiford, colored, 23, was at the District Jail last night beginning a 30-day term all because he could not sleep in the dark. And the reason was that he slept in a hearse.

He was found early yesterday asleep in the funeral coach parked behind Griffith Stadium by C. C. Johnson, funeral director. Police charged Pittiford with being intoxicated.

Johnson said that the battery of the hearse was dead three mornings in a row. Each day he had it recharged, he stated, but each morning it was dead again. Deciding to find the reason, Johnson awakened early yesterday and went to the hearse. The interior lights were burning brightly and on the floor asleep was Pittiford.

The defendant pleaded guilty before Judge Curran in Police Court and stated he thought his slumbering place "was just a truck."

Air Corps Calls For College Men To Take Training

Secretary of War Woodring announced yesterday that the Army wanted applications from young men with college training for appointment in the air service.

Four hundred appointments will be made as flying cadets during February, March and April, he said, and applications are desired now. They must be more than 20 and less than 27 years old, be unmarried, have completed two years of college or its equivalent, and be in good physical trim. When college credits are lacking, examinations will be given applicants.

Those selected will receive a year's flight training during which they receive $75 a month, rations, quarters and clothing. If they earn their wings, they must agree to serve three years as an officer pilot in the Air Corps.

Applications are also desired from accredited clergymen for appointment in the Chaplain Corps.

'Oh Come All Ye Faithful, Joyful and Triumphant'

Symphony Well Received At Hartford

By John Chabot Smith,
A Staff Correspondent.

Kingston, N. Y., Dec. 13.—The National Symphony Orchestra entrained at Hartford with mounting spirits this morning, pleased by the glowing compliments of the Hartford newspapers and the thought that only two concerts stood between them and their homes and families.

The Hartford Courant praised each section of the orchestra individually and together, predicted the orchestra would elbow its way into the top ranks and called last night's performance the best it had yet given in Hartford.

The reviewer wrote, "hats off to an orchestra which in a handful of years can make such handsome vital music—and to the conductor who can hammer them into such discipline, at the same time fostering such fine, brave, young spirit.

As the train pulled all day through falling snow, stopping for breakfast at Springfield, Mass., and lunch at Albany, N. Y., the musicians talked about getting home. This trip has been neither as long nor as arduous as some, for most of the jumps have been short and only in the last few days have early morning starts been necessary. But 10 days are 10 days, and constant music is emotionally and physically exhausting.

One of the violinists, Jeno Sevely, who is also something of a collector, brought from Hartford something to delight his heart. He acquired there a beautiful and unique violin, newly-made, of all American materials by an American-born Italian, decorated with symbols of Americanism; yet its tone is hardly distinguished from that of the Italian instrument Sevely brought on the tour.

The scroll of the violin is carved in the likeness of George Washington, and on the back are the Capitol, the Statue of Liberty, and profiles of Presidents Jefferson, Lincoln, Wilson, Theodore and Franklin Roosevelt. It is made from spruce and maple woods seasoned 150 years in the beams of an old house. Around the side of the instrument is inscribed in Italian, "Alive I Am Silent, Dead I Sing," referring to the tree that gave the wood.

The maker, Michael Gozzo, is a little-known workman with a small, dark upstairs workshop on Hartford's Asylum street, whom Sevely met when the orchestra visited Hartford last year. Guzzo began life as a waiter in a restaurant at Los Angeles, but 15 years ago when in his twenties he discovered his talent for violin-making.

He began experimenting with woods and varnishes, with the help of a well-known violin-maker in Los Angeles, and made all his own tools. His master acknowledged that Gozzo's second violin was better than his own best work; and soon after that Gozzo gave up his job as a waiter to have more time for his art.

Later he moved to Hartford, where he has lived for seven or eight years on next to nothing, and grown in knowledge and love of his work. A little bald-headed man, he goes quietly over the bare floors of his shop, where the only furniture is a dilapidated chair and an old workbench.

Selling his creations is the last thing Gozzo thinks of. With some persuasion Sevely obtained the carved instrument for trial and appraisal, but with no mention of price. It is one of a set of four instruments—two violins, viola and 'cello—which Gozzo said he had made for exhibition at the New York World's Fair, but gave up the idea because "he didn't have the money." In the little shop at dawn this morning, before the train left, Sevely listended while other string players from the orchestra played alternately on the carved fiddle and Sevely's own, made by a modern Italian master. He couldn't tell which was which.

"So it cannot be the wood or the varnish that gives the tone; it must be something in the way the Italians make their fiddles," he said. That led to a long discussion of violin making, in which it was brought out that the secret of the famous Italian Stradivarius is held to be in the varnish he used, which no one today knows how to make.

And Gozzo is not entirely satisfied with his varnish. He is still experimenting. Beyond that he has other skills to perfect, in setting the bridge to make the tone fuller and applying the varnish so as to bring out the full beauty of the wood. It takes more than 15 years to become a violin maker, he admits.

McNutt Asks Education Aimed at Jobs

Shift to Vocational Teaching Urged to Help Four Million Unemployed Youths

A shift in emphasis in high school training from college preparation to vocational types of instruction may help answer the problem of 4,000,000 unemployed American youths, Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt said yesterday.

In opening a conference of industrialists and educators at the United States Chamber of Commerce, McNutt declared that youth unemployment still "is at a dangerously high level."

McNutt called the two-day conference to obtain recommendations on how the work of the National Youth Administration and the Civilian Conservation Corps might be improved.

Dr. Charles H. Judd, NYA education director, estimated that 60 per cent of high school graduates "must look forward to semiskilled or unskilled jobs."

Members of the conference include Henry I. Harriman, former president of the United States Chamber of Commerce; Dr. Edward C. Elliott, president of Purdue University; Chancellor O. G. Carmichael, Vanderbilt University; Henry S. Dennison, president, Dennison Manufacturing Co., Framingham, Mass.; H. M. Taliaferro, president, American Seating Co., and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr.

Indian Chief Goes On Warpath for Human Souls

Chief White Feather last night went on the warpath—for human souls.

Resplendent in his red, white and black headdress and suit, earrings and boar's tooth necklace, he opened a three-day speaking engagement at River Road United Presbyterian Church.

He told the congregation that Christian white men should pray for "bad Indians," and that Christian Indians should likewise pray for "bad white men."

After he spoke, Chief White Feather stepped down to sit at the organ console, playing Schubert's "Serenade" as an offertory. He then sang a sacred number, and gave a prayer. The Rev. Virgil Cosby, pastor, introduced him.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

Post's Actress-Columnist Headed for Washington

Louella Parsons and "Gang" Here Dec. 29; Christmas Drama Revived for Holidays; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

IT WON'T BE LONG now until she and her troupe of touring Hollywoodites will be here, in person, on the stage at Loew's Capitol Theater.

Reference, of course, is made to The Post's Hollywood columnist, Louella O. Parsons. Miss Parsons and her "gang," as everybody must know by now, are on a "barnstorming" tour of the country that already has included Chicago, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and this week has them playing in Baltimore. They will arrive at the Capitol to headline the stage bill the week of Friday, December 29.

BELL

It is hardly necessary or even pertinent at this time to go very much into detail regarding Miss Parsons. Long known as the "First Lady of Hollywood," she probably has "scooped" more West Coast correspondents oftener than any other writer on studios, their stars and the general goings-on in filmdom. Not only has she written about an amazing number of people, but an amazing number of people have written about her. One of the pioneers of her craft, she also has been radio star, has appeared in pictures and now is capping a full career by "going on the stage."

With the famous commentator and news reporter, on this jaunt, are a group of young magic-lantern luminaries whose careers should be more than ever worth watching after their current experience behind the footlights and face to face with their publics. From the Paramount lot, comes Susan Hayward; from Universal, Joy Hodges; June Preisser, last seen with Mickey Rooney and Judy Garland in "Babes in Arms," represents Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; Ronald Reagan and Jane Wyman are the Warner Brothers representatives, and from Twentieth Century-Fox is Arleen Whelan, already well known and happily remembered here from other recent visits.

The act written expressly for this tour by Edgar Allan Woolf, noted playwright, scenarist and formerly father of most of the sketches being presented in the old two-a-day vaudeville, gives every member of the company an opportunity to display talents that the screen more often than not has failed to emphasize. Miss Parsons' own "bit" has as one of its most interesting features her preparation of her daily press material right there on the stage—a sort of "going to press" idea that is reported to be highly effective.

This column's acquaintanceship with L. O. P. dates back to an earlier incarnation, when she was a motion picture editor in New York and we were a recurrent pest of such desks as cymbal-whanger for the circuit of theaters in Washington now bearing the name of Warner, but then a flourishin' development of the late Harry M. Crandall. It was always possible to get to first base with Miss Parsons because it was early discovered that we both had close relatives and many friends in Dixon, Ill.—even if she was born in Freeport and I over the line in Indiana. It will be pleasant to greet an old friend again, for the first time in goodness knows when.

Nice to receive cordial notes from Joe Cook, recent stage billtopper at the Earle, and Otis Peabody Swift, of the executive staff of Life. Among other things, Joe drops the following word from his Sleepless Hollow estate on Lake Hopatcong, which is in New Jersey: "Have no definite news about the show, but will drop you a line when, and if, anything exciting happens." Mr. Swift's note riddles something that appeared here to the effect that it was odd that Clare Booth didn't call her anti-Nazi comedy, "Margin for Error," by its right name, "Outward Bund." That's what you get for sticking your chin out!

A new pseudo-theatrical organization has recently popped into being in the Capital. It is the Film Salesmen's Club and last Monday held its first luncheon session in the Annapolis Hotel. Out of "Film Row's" 38 gelatin peddlers eligible to belong, the new organization already boasts a membership of 34, with Vincent Daugherty, of Paramount, president; Joseph B. Walsh, Columbia Pictures, first vice president; Jack Goldberg, M-G-M, second vice president; Phil Bobys, of the same company, secretary-treasurer, and Frank Scully, another "Le-," assistant treasurer. The club is a "protective" organization, with sidelines of co-operative welfare. It is in no sense an offshoot of the Variety Club, most of the Salesmen's members already belonging to the older showmen's club, which has humanitarian service as its chief object.

Once again, in the week between Christmas and New Year's Day, the Capital City's Christmas drama, "The Other Wise Man," will be offered for four evening performances in Luther Place Memorial Church, beginning Tuesday night, December 26, at 8:30. As has been true for many recent seasons, Denis E. Connell, foremost of Washington's resident actors, will be seen in the title role of this beloved drama-legend by Dr. Henry Van Dyke, with Katherine Riggs in the dual assignment of Narrator and Harpist. And again, according to custom, the free-will offerings of the attending public will be devoted to making New Year's a little happier for the poor and needy of the District. With well-known local players in the principal roles of Bess Davis Schreiner's dramatization of the Van Dyke story, the large ensemble is filled by volunteers. The invitation to those wishing to appear will be open through tonight's rehearsal, scheduled for 7:30.

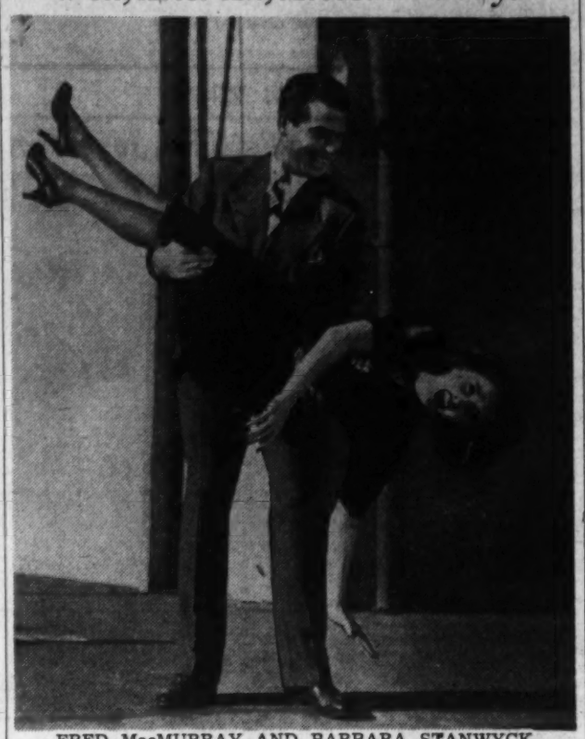
Football is still in the air-tight film cans. The Paramount News, currently on view at the Earle and Metropolitan theaters, pictures the game between the Green Bay Packers and New York Giants, for the professional world's championship, as well as shots of Southern California and Tennessee winding up their regular schedules. They are the two that will meet in the Rose Bowl on January 1, in case you had forgotten.

Signs-of-the-Times Note

They must all have been mud-runners. I mean this is the double bill announced for the Atlas Theater next Sunday and Monday:

"THE RAINS CAME"
"THE BOOKIES WEPT"

Well, After All, Mr. MacMurray!



FRED MacMURRAY AND BARBARA STANWYCK, friends for years, but never before teamed on the screen, go in for a little topsy-turvy foolishness during the filming of "Remember the Night," a new Paramount production. From all indications, Miss Stanwyck probably will!

Joseph Schildkraut Admits He Was a "Bad Boy"—Once

By Frederick C. Othman

United Press Hollywood Correspondent

Hollywood, Dec. 13. — Joseph Schildkraut, one of the really fine actors now wearing grease paint, turned down all offers today to return to Broadway and announced his hope of staying in Hollywood, where the roses bloom in January.

"And that's just the reason," he said. "All these reports about my going back to New York to play on the stage are untrue. I don't like to live in New York. It's too noisy and too cold and too wet."

He said his friends had argued with him about this idea and pointed out that New York was one of the world's gayest and most stimulating cities. He retorted that the gaiety didn't start until after dark—and by then he was in bed. He never has been in a nightclub in his life.

"And I never have learned to dance," he said. "Except when I had to do the minuet with Norma Shearer in 'Marie Antoinette' and I died 10,000 deaths while doing it."

For the last two years Schildkraut has been under contract to Twentieth Century-Fox. When his option came up for renewal the day the European war was declared, the studio said it could not raise his salary, because of unsettled world conditions. Schildkraut quit.

"And I immediately went to work at Metro at three times the salary I'd been earning," he said. "I went into 'The Shop Around the Corner,' which Ernst Lubitsch was directing, and that was a surprise to me.

"Lubitsch and I got our first acting jobs together in 1913 when we appeared in 'The Prodigal Son' in Berlin. And our paths never crossed until I went into his picture."

Schildkraut is the only actor we ever met who admitted frankly that he used to be an arrogant, overbearing and unreasonable man.

"I was a louse," he said. That needs a little explaining.

When he came to America from Vienna with his late father, Rudolph Schildkraut, in 1921, he could not speak a work of English. He did bring with him a reputation as a continental actor.

"It was the last of January when I was asked to read 'Liliom' to the Theater Guild producers," he said. "I had to read it in German. Some of them could understand the language. They asked me if I could learn to do the play in English by April 15. I said I could.

"And on April 15 we opened in 'Liliom' in English. The show was a great success. And after our opening performance, Alexander Woolcott, then a theatrical reviewer, came back stage to talk to me.

"I couldn't understand a word he said. And he couldn't understand me. I had learned my part in 'Liliom' by rote and I still didn't understand any English. I had to call in an interpreter so I could talk to Woolcott and when the interview was finished, I remember he walked out, shaking his head.

"I was very young then. And my success went to my head. I don't think any young man should be too successful. It ruins him. It ruined me. I was naturally bashful, inhibited, really, and I began to talk tough. I knew too many woman."

The New Yorker

New York, Dec. 13.

THE RECENTLY organized National Professional Indoor Baseball League, whose officials include Tris Speaker and Tack Hardwicke, will wash its linen on the front pages next week. It involves a mixup in the filing of a certificate authorizing bank signatures . . . Eric Maria Remarque, author of "All Quiet on the Western Front," has received a permit to reside in Mexico for one year and will move there shortly . . . All police stations in New York received the photos of William Dudley Pelley, the Fascist, who has become a fugitive . . . Gov. Lehman will name Associate Justice Haggerty of Brooklyn to the Court of Appeals vacancy in Albany.

GOV. STASSEN of Minnesota was one of the honored guests who sat on the dais at the Gridiron dinner in Washington last week-end. . . . Stassen, who is 32 and, so, ineligible, looked up and down the dais—at the Cabinet members, Supreme Court Justices, Senators, Governors and other prominent men—and said: "With the possible exception of the President, I'm the only man at this table who can honestly say: 'I am not a candidate for the Presidency in 1940.'"

THE NEW YORK TIMES is so positive that Canada will assume the burdens of the British Empire while the war continues that Frederick Birchall, one of its best correspondents, is being sent across the border to organize an enlarged staff for the added news coverage. Ed Stanley, who retired as one of the founders of the new tabloid, P. M., has a new job now. He is publicity director for Paul V. McNutt's campaign . . . William Saroyan has turned to song writing. He's written a song called "Come On to My House (I'm Gonna Give You Candy)." The music is Armenian, "evolved out of speed and the Arizona sunset."

AN AMERICAN correspondent in London received a newspaper clipping concerning a visit to the front made by King George . . . He immediately phoned the Ministry of Information and asked: "What's this I read about His Majesty's visit to Strasbourg three days ago?" . . . "Please, sir," cautioned the Britisher, "over the public telephone system are you possibly referring to a certain visit made by a certain gentleman at a certain place at a certain period of time ago?"

THE ST. NICHOLAS SOCIETY, whose members are descended from New York's earliest settlers, held their annual dinner a few days ago. As is their custom, they first toasted the President of the United States—who, incidentally, is a member of the society. Then the first speaker, Fred Bontecou—who was the Republican candidate for Lieutenant Governor—made a 45-minute speech attacking Roosevelt.

BILLY WILKERSON, who owns the Hollywood Reporter, will reopen Lamaze's Restaurant in Hollywood . . . Marie de L. Welch has written a new book of poems about California's migratory workers. It will be published in February. Her father is a director of the Matson Lines, one of the strongest opponents of Harry Bridges in the State . . . Martin Flavin is in town now, with a new play—about St. Paul.

HARRY GANNES, whose indictment was announced for having used a fictitious name in securing a passport, will be unable to appear in court for quite some time . . . Gannes is the foreign affairs expert for the Daily Worker. The unfortunate man was stricken with a nervous disorder shortly after the signing of the Nazi-Soviet pact and has been under the care of physicians.

FOR THE FIRST TIME in almost 20 years Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean will tender no New Year's Eve party for the Washington socialites. This, however, is no economic index. Mrs. McLean explains that she canceled the party because the date falls on a Sunday . . . Larry Adler, the harmonica player, will work in two New York cafes at the same time. He'll open at Fefe's Monte Carlo on the 20th and five days later will start doubling at Lew Brown's Casa Manana. Billy Rose has purchased a town house in the Beekman Hill section. Frankie Hyers of the 18 Club was discovered by Raymond Paige last week and, so, has been signed by C. B. S. for five years.

SATURDAY NIGHT, in Washington, Jim Farley saw Frank McHale, campaign manager for Paul V. McNutt, conferring with Louis Ruppel, the former editor of the Chicago Times, who now is publicity director for the Columbia Broadcasting System . . . "Just one bit of practical advice," Farley told McHale. "Don't hang out with Ruppel" . . . "Why not?" asked McNutt's manager . . . "Because," explained Farley, "he can't get you any delegates."

Car Birthday Gift Of Star's Mother

When Eleanor Powell arrived home late from work one evening, she found a new blue car parked in her driveway with a searchlight playing over its shiny new surface. The car was a birthday gift from her mother, a bit early, since the star's birthday doesn't occur until November 21.

STARTS FRIDAY AT LOEW'S PALACE

LAST TIMES TODAY "THE Housekeeper's Daughter"

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Dec. 13.

I wonder why it is that strong, virile, athletic men like Doug Fairbanks die so young? When I think of Doug, Fred Thompson, George Hill, Bill Russell —all of them so alive it made you tired just watching their antics —and now all of them are gone. I wonder if perhaps the lazy ones aren't better off in the end?

HOPPER

A great deal of the glory of the motion picture industry could be written around Douglas. He was the very first of the stage stars to be captured by the old Triangle Co. And through him practically every established star of the stage was signed up for pictures. That was the year they had Raymond Hitchcock, Weber and Fields, Sir Herbert Tree, De Wolf Hopper, Sam Bernard, Joe Jackson and the Dolly sisters.

And that's the year we got to know Doug so well. It was his first wife, Beth Sully, who found a house for us and my two Japanese servants, who were friends of her servants. When they entertained for dinner, we went there, and vice versa. And where we went our servants went. So instead of having two, we always had four.

Instead of going to church on Sunday morning, he'd be out with a group of cowboys learning to swing a lariat, and scale a stone wall by catching on the top of a young Eucalyptus tree. I know, because I used to try it with him. Then the first big change in his life occurred when he and Beth were divorced.

And Mary Pickford was so in love with him that she risked being ostracized by the Catholic Church to marry him. Theirs was the ideal Hollywood marriage, and should have remained that way. When they were first wed, people used to call him "Mary Pickford's husband." And I'll never forget hearing him say: "That's all right, because in a year from now she'll be known as Mrs. Douglas Fairbanks"—and she was! It was during these years that he and Mary knew their greatest success. Always podigal with his money, Mary started him saving his first million. And it was she who got him to put $3,000,000 in a trust fund so that he'd have no monetary problems in his old age.

But Doug loved to travel, always did. When he was married to Beth and they had little money, she'd pawn her pearls and the whole family would go abroad. Then when Doug got a job, they'd get them out of pawn. So when he and Mary went over together, they were received almost as we received the King and Queen of England last year.

There's no doubt about it—Pickfair was the White House of the West, and should have remained so. Something happened to the whole industry—and I'm not just sentimental—when their marriage failed. Now I'll tell you, because I believe it's never been told before, how they missed by a few hours being reunited. Douglas was practically kidnaped in Europe and brought back home by Joe Schenck. Came out here, made many attempts at a reconciliation with Mary. They had meeting after meeting, and Mary wouldn't say yes. Douglas, discouraged, went on to New York. He was anything but happy, went to dine and the theater with two friends and young Douglas.

After the theater, young Doug went on his way, but Doug and his friends sat down to discuss his situation. What to do? Mary wouldn't reconcile; Sylvia was waiting for him in London. And at last one of his friends said: "Well, you've tried everything else. Why don't you go back and marry Sylvia?" So, at 3 o'clock he left them and went home to think it over. At ten, he was on the phone saying: "You must help me get boat reservations. I don't want anyone to know I'm going. I want to sail at noon today." So they put him on the boat, and at 2 o'clock young Douglas was on the phone saying Mary had been trying to get him on the long distance telephone from 10 o'clock the night before, but wouldn't leave her name. And when told that his father had sailed, young Doug collapsed. And thus the King and Queen of Hollywood became but a memory.

Good-by to the romantic age of motion pictures and a farewell salute to the man who first gave us Fantasy on the screen.

"Ninotchka" at Palace; Other New Bills Coming to Theater

"NINOTCHKA." Greta Garbo makes her bow as a comedienne in this widely-acclaimed film, under the direction of Ernst Lubitsch. The great Swedish actress deserts her more somber characterizations to appear as a grim lady commissar from Moscow who arrives in Paris on an important diplomatic mission. Her seriousness gives way to laughter. Costarred with her is Melvyn Douglas, as a French count who sweeps her away from seriousness with champagne, wise-cracks and dashing romance. When the lady from Russia finds herself in a night club for the first time, she imbibes well and engages in a battle of wits with a sleek countess, played by Ina Claire. Bela Lugosi, Richard Carle and Gregory Gaye are others involved in the smart banter. Opens tomorrow morning.

Earle

"THE AMAZING MR. WILLIAMS." Melvyn Douglas and Joan Blondell appear again in a mystery-comedy, but their latest venture finds them as competing detectives rather than as help-mates. Ruth Donnelly, Clarence Kolb, Edward Brophy and John Wray have the other principal parts. On the stage, the Milt Herth Trio, network favorites, offer a program of swing and the Earle Roxyettes return from a vacation of six weeks to present three new routines. Others on the stage include Ross and LaPierre, radio comics; Nash and Evans, "Dude Wranglers;" Jack Dalton, an Earle-WJSV "Find of the Month," and the Three Arnolds. Opens tomorrow morning.

Capitol

"BARRICADE." Warner Baxter and Alice Faye are starred in this adventure story of an American entertainer and a newspaper correspondent in Northern China. She has witnessed the murder of a government official and the two have an exciting chase to the safety of a remote American consulate. Charles Winninger, Arthur Treacher, Keye Luke and Willie Fung are in the cast. On the stage, Ted Mack continues into a second week as master of ceremonies. Cynda Glenn returns with her roisterous laughter and Franklyn D'Amore, a newcomer to Washington, presents a novel comedy act. Everett West, radio singer, and Charles Troy and Marlene Lynn are others on a bill that boasts as added attraction the psychic services of Rinaldo, "Mental Marvel." Opens tomorrow morning.

RKO-Keith's

"DESTRY RIDES AGAIN." Marlene Dietrich and James Stewart continue at the Fifteenth street house in the rollicking story of the old West. The inhabitants of lawless Bottleneck include Charles Winninger, Mischa Auer, Brian Donlevy, Irene Hervey, Una Merkel, Allen Jenkins, Warren Hymer, Billy Gilbert and Samuel S. Hinds. The latest "March of Time," "Newsfronts of War—1940," is also held over.

Metropolitan

"BEWARE, SPOOKS." Joe E. Brown and Mary Carlisle join forces in this farce of a young bridegroom who seeks to prove himself as good a policeman as his father was. When a bandit robs the bank on his beat, the wide-mouthed comic traces the crook to a spook house at a seaside resort, in which crazy setting the climax of the film takes place. Marc Lawrence, Clarence Kolb, Frank Thomas, Don Beddoe and Lorna Gray are in the cast. Opens tomorrow morning.

Columbia

"DRUMS ALONG THE MOHAWK." Claudette Colbert and Henry Fonda play a youthful pioneer couple who settle in the Mohawk Valley of Revolutionary days and find themselves assailed by the savage Iroquois. Adapted from the novel by Walter D. Edmonds, the film is in Technicolor and Edna May Oliver, Eddie Collins and John Carradine are in the cast. Opens tomorrow morning.

Little

THE INTERNATIONAL FILM FESTIVAL continues with "The Lady Vanishes" and "The Life and Loves of Beethoven" sharing the screen through Saturday evening. The current European embroglio only increases the fascination of the Hitchcock espionage story. Dame May Whitty, Margaret Lockwood, Michael Redgrave and Paul Lukas are the principals. The Beethoven musical film depicts the stress which blindness and despair brought upon the composer. Harry Baur is the star.

Trans-Lux

"JAMAICA." A Technicolor trip to the sun-baked island in the British West Indies forms the leading short subject at the newsreel theater for the incoming week. "Pack Trip" is the sports short, "Donald's Lucky Day," the cartoon. The second in the series of "Unusual Occupations" completes a program that will be dominated by newsreel flashes from all of the studios. Opens tomorrow morning.

Civic Theater

"AWAKE AND SING." The Civic Theater's notable production of the Clifford Odets play, the first time this drama has been seen in the Capital, will continue at the Wardman Park Theater through Saturday evening. It is a story of Jewish life in the Bronx. Marian Carroll Conway, Norman Rose, Betty Linda Burko, Arnold Ostrow, Abe Alan Fischler, William F. Zuckert, Arthur Scharff, Paul Keyes and Milton Freedman are the players.

Gayety

"FRISKY FROLICS OF 1940." Margie Hart, one of burlesque's most widely-known stars, heads the cast of the Gayety's new production, opening Sunday afternoon. The beauty parade winner will offer her latest creations and will be supported by two featured comedians, Harry J. Conley, the original "Elmer," and Frank X. Silk, who returns to burlesque with a wealth of new material.

Louella O. Parsons

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Baltimore, Md., Dec. 13 (INS).—Harry Cohn isn't leaving a stone unturned to make Irene Dunne's next picture, "The First Woman Doctor," one of the biggest pictures ever produced at Columbia. None other than Lloyd C. Douglas is being approached to write the original screen treatment from an idea based on the life of Dr. Elizabeth Blackwell. The history of the triumphs and tribulations, while striving to establish woman's place in the medical world, is fascinating.

LOUELLA PARSONS

She first came to this country from England in 1832 and attempted to enter medical schools in both Philadelphia and New York. When she was flatly refused permission to study because she was a woman, she found a small college in upper New York State that would take her. In 1857 Elizabeth Blackwell founded the first hospital ever completely staffed by women. What a role for Irene, who is just as interested in medicine as she is in her own career, since her husband is a well-known doctor.

John Garfield, who is being a very good boy lately, had nothing to do with "Mother Ravioli" being called off at the last minute. True, Garfield had not particularly liked the script but he was willing to do it because he's tired of being accused of being temperamental. However, after two directors turned it down Warners decided to leave it on the shelf. There's a chance that "Julie's" (that's Garfield's real name) next may be "Saturday's Children," first announced for Jimmy Stewart.

Speaking of Jimmy, I hear he's not a very happy boy. He's due at Warner's right after the holidays for "Married, Pretty and Poor," with Jane Bryan, which is a simple little human interest story about a young married couple. After sensational hits in "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" and "Destry Rides Again," the picture might seem unpretentious to Jimmy. Far be it from me to get in the middle, but Jimmy, who is one of my favorite actors, might remember that he has had exceptional luck on loan-outs to other studios. With their own interests at heart, Warners aren't likely to hand him a script that doesn't measure up.

Shocking beyond words is the passing of Douglas Fairbanks, whom I have known ever since both of us started watching the movies we loved so much grow up from "flickers" to a great industry. There never was and never will be anyone to take Doug's place. Youngsters worshiped him as "Zorro" and "D'Artagnan" and it was his boast he never made a picture children couldn't see. In all the years I knew him I never heard Doug, the great athlete, complain of heart trouble, which makes his sudden death all the more shocking. Now that he is gone many great people and many unimportant people in the movie world are poorer in the only way it matters to gain or lose in this life—the loss of a true friend.

Snapshots of Hollywood and Baltimore collected at Random: Wonder if Al Jolson and Ruby Keeler each knows that the other has put in a reservation for the opening of the new Arrowhead Springs this week-end? Fans who have been asking about Estelle Taylor will be interested to know that she appears with James ("Tobacco Road") Barton, at Loew's State the week before we do our stint; Francesca Winsome, 6-year-old daughter of Al Santoro, Los Angeles Examiner editor, rode in Santa Clause lane with his majesty, Santa Clause, last night. She is playing with Chaplin in "The Dictator."

Stepin Fetchit hasn't forgotten any of his temperament. He's still the same Step—and keeps things moving in "Three After Three." Mitzi Green, in the same show, has been very sick and missed several performances with an understudy ready to go on if her appendix acts up; the three lovely daughters of Bill Baskervill, publisher of the Baltimore News-Post, paid me a visit back stage and took me on an ice cream soda spree; what will they think of next in Hollywood? Gladys Parker is staging a fashion show at Westmore's Thursday, while the invited movie stars get manicures and waves; Zasu Pitts wears a flaming red wig in "And It All Came True."

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Play Center At Buchanan Is Approved

Planners Also Back Landscaping Scheme for New Federal Buildings

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission yesterday ended its two-day December meeting by approving a development program for the Buchanan school recreation center, indorsing a landscaping scheme for new Federal buildings under construction in the southwest section, and discussing the proposed improvement of Alexandria Circle.

Provision of two softball diamonds, a tennis court, playground apparatus and other recreational facilities to serve children living in the vicinity of Buchanan School, Fourteenth and E streets southeast, was recommended by T. C. Jeffers, of the commission staff, and approved.

Conventional landscaping treatment will be adopted for the Social Security, Railroad Retirement and Census Bureau buildings, all located in the "southwest rectangle," according to plans approved yesterday.

Thomas S. Settle, secretary, said further conferences would be held with Alexandria officials and residents on a scheme to beautify Alexandria Circle.

Tentative plans, said Settle, call for the creation of a monumental portal at the approach, from Washington, to the first President's home town. Several Alexandria property owners were heard by the commission yesterday and further discussions will be held with city officials, according to Settle.

Adm. George Meyers Buried in Arlington

Funeral services for Rear Admiral George J. Meyers, who died Thursday aboard his flagship at San Pedro, were held yesterday in Fort Myer chapel, conducted by Capt. Robert D. Workman, Chaplain Corps. Burial was in Arlington Cemetery.

Honorary pallbearers were Rear Admirals Emory S. Land and G. J. Rowcliff and Capts. E. A. Baldridge, D. C. Byngham, J. P. Lannon, R. C. Davis, W. D. Puleston and E. G. Kintner.

U. S. Releases 5 Ships Sold To French

Paris Assures They'll Be in Commercial, Not War, Service

By the Associated Press

The Coast Guard released yesterday five old American trawlers sold to the French government, the delivery of which had been delayed pending a determination of legal questions involved.

Although original reports indicated these five, as well as three other trawlers which already have sailed to France, might be used for minesweeping, the French gave official assurance they would be employed strictly for commercial purposes.

This cleared away legal barriers and the Treasury, State and Justice department then agreed there was no reason for further delay. The five ships have been held at Boston, Portsmouth, N. Hamp., Charleston, S. C., and New Orleans.

Bailey Urges Ship Sales

Chairman Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina, of the Senate Commerce Committee, said yesterday foreign purchases of a portion of the American Merchant Marine may help solve the problem created by the laying up of American ships under the neutrality act.

Bailey said he could see no objection to the sale to shipping interests in Canada and other nations of the older vessels. He explained he was informed ship owners had received a number of offers.

"Because of the sinkings that have been taking place in sea warfare, three is going to be an increasing demand for tonnage," Bailey said. "I think we have a good chance, because of this demand, to get rid of some of the old ships which the Government soon would have had to take in any way under the terms of the merchant marine act."

50 Ships Available

Bailey said he thought that possibly 50 of the 88 American flagships affected by the neutrality act were in this latter classification.

Bailey said it might be possible to transfer the registry of nonsubsidized ships to other nations, particularly Canada.

Atlanta in Circus Atmosphere For 'Gone With Wind' Premiere

By the Associated Press

Atlanta, Dec. 13.—Scarlett O'Hara rode the sky from Hollywood today and flustered Atlanta laced on its antebellum stays in final primping for a hoopskirted jamboree to welcome the marathon movie "Gone With The Wind."

Smartly clad—and slightly fagged—junior leaguers dodged carpenters, electricians, laborers in the cavernous city auditorium while they rushed preparations for Atlanta's most ambitious charity ball tomorrow night.

Already on the stage was the 40-by-30-foot facade of an ionic columned Greek revival mansion of the kind favored on the great plantations of the middle nineteenth century, flanked by blooming magnolia trees, draped with wistaria.

Some 5,000 of the 15,000 who sought seats will be serving charity at $3.50 to $10 a head, while Clark Howell, publisher of the Atlanta Constitution, in the movie costume of Dr. Meade, marshals the program, opening with the moonlit entrance of half a hundred junior leaguers in vast hoops, tight basques.

A stately polka and colored plantation singing will precede costume judging and dancing to the music of Bandsman Kay Kyser.

Still unsolved was the problem of dancing with Clark Gable-Rhett Butler and Scarlett-Vivien Leigh. Worried movie men fought shy of having the so-valuable ones risk too enthusiastic reception.

Missing from the ball will be Miss Mitchell, husbanding her strength after a recent attack of influenza.

Holding the scene in typical Hollywood fashion, press agents brought Producer David O. Selznick, Miss Leigh, Olivia DeHavilland (Melanie Wilkes), Ona Munson (Belle Watling), Evelyn Keyes (Suellen O'Hara) and Ann Rutherford (Careen O'Hara) here in relays today. Delayed until just before tomorrow's parade was the plane arrival of Clark Gable and wife, Carole Lombard.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Reich Strong On Defensive, Says Economist

Predictions on War Needs Upset, Asserts Dr. Bonn in Talk Here

Nazi Germany may continue indefinitely under an economy of "barrack-room socialism" if defensive warfare holds down consumption of war goods, an eminent economist of pre-Hitler Germany, predicted last night.

BONN

Dr. Moritz J. Bonn, former rector of the Berlin Institute for Commercial Study, and now a lecturer at the London School of Economics, said the strain on the German economy would be "enormously increased" with the opening of a major offensive.

Speculation on the question, "How long can Germany last?" is futile, he pointed out, without exact information on current consumption within the Reich.

"All we know is that the rate of consumption is very different from what we had expected," Dr. Bonn told an audience of 100 at the Brookings Institution.

Prewar predictions were based on the assumption of an immediate opening of large scale hostilities on land, with 7 to 15 men at work behind the lines to supply the needs of each soldier at the front," he said.

"Money Wages" Stay Up

Dr. Bonn described Nazi economics as "revolving around exchange control and the concentration camp." Through exchange control, sooner or later, the government reaches every phase of Germany's economic life, he said. The business man is forced to hold prices down to a level "where he makes just enough money to live—or else go to a concentration camp."

"You see, the concentration camp can be quite an effective substitute for the profit motive," he observed.

The German workman's money wages have not declined appreciably, he said, but his real wages have dropped because of the inferior quality of goods he is able to purchase and the longer hours he must work to buy these goods.

Little Aid From Russia

"Property has not been abolished in Nazi Germany," he continued, "except for 'politically undesirable' classes. But no one is allowed to enjoy his property. The owner merely manages the property for the government."

German officials "do not really anticipate any important economic assistance from Russia," he contended. "With Russia at war, she must accumulate her own reserves—and she is not so enamored of Germany as to risk her own safety for Herr Hitler's success."

Dr. Bonn, who is now a British subject, is on a six-week lecture tour in this country.

Mary J. Armour, Retired Federal Worker, Dies

Miss Mary J. Armour, retired employe of the solicitor's office Department of Agriculture, died Tuesday in an ambulance en route to Emergency Hospital for treatment of an ailment which caused her retirement last year.

She had been secretary to Solicitor Mastin G. White and had served as secretary to the four preceding solicitors, having joined the Agriculture Department in 1918 after four years with a Spokane law firm. She was a native of Stillman Valley, Ill.

Funeral arrangements will be completed upon arrival here today of her sister, Mrs. Jennie Van Briesen, of Stillman Valley, where Miss Armour will be buried.

Santa's Understudies—IV

Unusual Requests Stump Ex-Policeman Who Was Shot Twice in Battles With Bandits

Little Girl Tells Him To 'Remove Whiskers And I'll Talk to You'

Don't breathe a word of this to the children, lest Santa's understudy at S. Kann Sons Co. be deluged with pleas to tell exciting cops-and-robbers tales; but he used to be a policeman.

Indeed, Santa Claus Jacob Tennant was not one of those officers who go for years without even making an arrest. He was shot twice while frustrating holdups and was injured twice in police car collisions.

With all his 25 years on the Cleveland police force, however, a quarter century filled with hair-raising thrills, Santa Tennant today is a mellow, peaceful citizen of 57 who enjoys listening to the Christmas wishes of his thousands of clients.

Not a sophisticated Santa, as none should be, he is stumped every now and then by an unusual demand or request. For example, there was the little girl, about 6 or 7, who walked up to him the other day with enviable nonchalance and coolly said, "If you remove your whiskers, I'll talk to you."

He recalls, also, the girl—it seems it's always a little girl who is trying to pull his beard or asking an embarrassing question—who stood back at a distance and announced: "I'll stand here and give you my list, if you don't mind, and I'd prefer not to shake hands."

But the vast majority, of course, are wide-eyed youngsters who are almost too overcome with wonderment and joy to stammer out their toy lists.

Santa Tennant has made Washington his home for the past four years, living at 3521 Fourteenth street northwest.

Fred H. Brown, U. S. Comptroller, Suffers Apoplexy

Comptroller General Fred H. Brown was in Casualty Hospital last night, suffering from what is believed to be apoplexy.

BROWN

Brown a former Senator from New Hampshire, who began his 15-year term as Comptroller General of the United States last April, was leaving his automobile and preparing to go to his office when he collapsed shortly before noon. Holland Thomas, his chauffer, saved him from falling to the pavement.

An ambulance removed him to Casualty Hospital and he was placed under the care of Dr. O. H. Fulcher.

Mr. Brown, a former major league baseball player, is of stout build. He is 60 years old. His position as head of the General Accountinig Office and overseer of all appropriations made by Congress is perhaps the most independent in the Federal Government. The Comptroller General is responsible only to Congress and may serve no more than one term.

A bulletin issued at 7 p. m., signed by Drs. O. H. Mulcher and Wallace M. Yater, said Brown is resting quietly and his "general condition, including temperature, pulse, respiration and blood pressure, is satisfactory."

Rites in Grand Rapids Today for Rep. Mapes

Funeral services for Representative Carl E. Mapes (Republican), of Michigan, who died Tuesday in New Orleans, will be held at 2 p. m. today in the Park Congregational Church of Grand Rapids, Mich. Grand Rapids was his home.

Representative Celler (Democrat), of New York, yesterday issued this statement: "In the death of the Honorable Carl Mapes Congress has lost one of its ablest members. In the 18 years I served with him I never heard a harsh word cross his lips. He was persevering, highly intelligent and most patriotic."

Trade Board To Hear of D. C. Air Importance

Ryan, of CAA, to Speak; Col. Smith Will Tell Of Gravelly Point Work

Washington's importance in the aeronautical field will be described for members and guests of the Washington Board of Trade tonight at 8 o'clock in the ballroom of the Willard Hotel.

Oswald Ryan, a member of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, will speak on "Washington's Role in American Aviation."

Col. Sumpter Smith, chairman of the Inter-departmental Engineering Commission in charge of the Washington National Airport, will talk about the big, $10,000,000 air terminal now being built at Gravelly Point. He will illustrate his talk with slides.

Capt. Tate to Talk

Capt. William J. Tate, of the Coast Guard Service, will tell about the days when the Wright brothers were making their epochal experiments at Kitty Hawk, N. C., birthplace of aviation. The Wright brothers were living at Capt. Tate's home.

Orville Wright will be in Washington today. He is returning here from Langley Field, where he has been consulting with the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics.

Wright was invited to attend tonight's meeting of the Board of Trade, but was unable to accept.

Fire Report Is Due

The Washington Board of Trade has long taken an interest in developing the city as an air center. It was a pioneer advocate of Gravelly Point as the site for a national airport, and continued to advocate it when other sites were being urged.

Tonight's program will include a report on the Board of Trade's fire survey, conducted by the public order committee under the chairmanship of Odell S. Smith.

Self-Styled Vagrant Asks for Jail Term

A vagrant by his own admission, Grover Cleveland Davis, 63, pleaded with Police Court Judge Edward M. Curran yesterday for a six-month jail term on an intoxication charge.

"I haven't a home and I'm a vag, judge. Can't you send me away for six months?" he asked after admitting being drunk. He was arrested at Ninth and E streets northwest by Policeman Horace Carmichael. Judge Curran compromised, giving him 30 days with a recommendation that he be hospitalized.

Black Tom Blast Awards Fought in Suit

Claimants Who Got $50,000,000 Decision Opposed by Others

Holders of awards against Germany totaling $50,000,000 will defend today before Justice Bailey in District Court their right to share in $26,000,000 held by the Treasury.

The awards were made this summer by the German-American Mixed Claims Commission for damages in the munition explosions at Black Tom Island and Kingsland, N. J., before America entered the World War. The commission blamed German agents.

Holders of previous awards, which totaled $18,000,000, saw their expected payment whittled down by the allowances and filed a suit to prevent the awards being paid by Secretary Morgenthau. They argued the commission acted unlawfully in making the awards this year, because its authority had expired.

Opposing the new awards is the Zimmerman & Forshay Assets Realization Corporation, New York, which told the court it acted in behalf of hundreds of claimants. Asserting their right to share in the money on hand were 150 winners of awards in this summer's decision, including Bethlehem Steel Co., Lehigh Valley Railroad Co. and Canada Car & Foundry Co.

Give a Book for Christmas

Some Christmas Book Suggestions From the Publishers' Offerings for 1939

By the Book Editor.

This seasonal survey of the year's more notabl books is submitted with due qualification. It can not, of course, pretend to be all niclusive. After all, considerably more than 8,000 new books have appeared since January 1, and it is more than probable that among these some works of high merit have been overlooked. At the same time it has seemed advisable to omit many works which, while of manifest importance, are too specialized to be of much popular interest.

Biography

It is probably in the field of biography that the year's most distinguished accomplishements are to be found. Standing over apart from all others, is Carl Sandburg's heroic and monumental "Abraham Lincoln: The War Years" (Harcourt Brace, $20). Out of all the welter of detail collected by previous biographers and in Mr. Sandburg's own researches, the real Lincoln emerges for perhaps the first time. The work comprises four enormous volumes, but don't let that freighten you.

The price, however, may be beyond your Christmas budget, in which case you can find an admirable compromise in the earlier section of Mr. Sandburg's work, "Abraham Lincoln: The Prarie Years," now reissued in the two volume Harbrace edition at $4.75.

Next to this, the most widely discussed biography of year is probably "Stalin" by Boris Souvarine, which sweeps away much of the mystery from the career and the personality of that dreaded and hitherto inscrutable man. Mr. Souvarine is not, to be sure, a distinterested biographer, and it might be well to bear in mind that the author and his subject are intense political enemies. Nevertheless, this is a book that greatly helps to explain the more recent history of this unhappy world.

Two other biographies to be devoutly and unreservedly recommended are Mr. Henry F. Pringle's two-volume "Life and Times of William Howard Taft" (Farrar and Rinehart, $7.50). Mr. Henry Seidel Canby's "Thoreau" (Houghton, Mifflin, $3.75). Both are very solid works Another work, not merely solid, but altogether fascinating and superbly written is Lord David Cecil's study of "The Young Melbourne" and of all that that great statesman had to endure from his erratic wife and the picaresque Lord Byron. (Bobbs, Merrill, $3.)

Herr Hitler's "Mein Kampf" (Reynal & itchcock, $3), is tremendously important, of course, as the Koran of a strange new world religion. But it will scarcely make for a comfortable Christmas. For more in the spirit of the occasion would be the "Autobiography" of the genial and voluable Dr. William Lyon Phelps (Oxford, $3.50) whose special virtue is that he was never bored by anything and never bored anybody.

Fiction

On the whole the year's crop of novels has been rather disappointing.

Certainly the most successful novel of the year, from the standpoint of sales and popularity, has been Mr. Steinbeck's novel of the migrant Okies, "The Grapes of Wrath." A certain suspicion, to be sure, has begun to creep into the minds of the critics that this may not be, after all, one of the greatest works of literature. There are even a few who have grown bold enough to suggest that the book conceals a lot of pretty dreadful sentimentalism beneath some very tough language. However, as a sociological polemic, the work nas caused almost as much stir as did, in its day, "Uncle Tom's Cabin." For that reason you are cordially advised to read it—if you haven't already.

At almost the opposite pole is Elizabeth Bowen's "Death of the Heart." This is a fine psychological study in the best Henry James tradition, of various neurasthenic personalities and in particular of a girl who loves with great enthusiasm and very little wisdom. Another fine anatomizing of a female personality occurs in Mr. Christopher Morley's "Kitty Foyle." This has been compared to Miss Bowen at her best and, even more enthusiastically, to Mrs. Bloom, in James Joyce's "Ulysses." Kitty is an intelligent Irish-American girl of Philadelphia, who has the bad luck to lose her heart somewhere along the Main Line but the sense to keep her wits where they belong, in Frankford—or is it Bridesburg?

Now that I've mentioned Mr. Joyce, I may as well mention "Finegans Wake" (Viking Press, $5), which, in the next half dozen decades, is likely to have a great influence, not merely on the English novel, but on the English language itself. There is some dispute among the critics as to precisely what "Finegans Wake" is all about, but we're agreed that, whatever it is, it's pretty important.

Another book that has caused a good deal of commotion lately is "The Nazarine," by Sholom Asch and a very ambitious and audacious novel it is, an effort, no less, to rewrite the Gospels, and not an entirely successful one. All the same, there is a great deal of passionate and powerful writing in it, (which seems to have lost nothing in translation from the Yiddish), and sometimes a grandeur comparable to Dostoievski. But the reader had best be warned that it presents an interpretation of Jesus Christ which, while tender and sympathetic, is strikingly at variance with the Christian tradition.

The year has produced two fine melodramas, and Messrs. Little, Brown & Co. have had the good fortune to publish them both. One is "Escape," by Ethel Vance, wherein a great many highly implausible doings inside Nazi Germany are made to seem plausible, and even natural, by dint of skillful writing. The other is, of course, "Capt. Horatio Hornblower," by C. S. Forester. Capt. Horatio's vicissitudes, partly amatory but mostly sanguinary, in the Napoleonic wars make the pleasantest possible armchair adventures.

Other novels that certainly need mention in any such list as this are Thomas Wolfe's posthumously published, "The Web and the Rock" (Harper, $3), which exhibits all the power and all the weaknesses of "Look Homeward Angel" and "Of Time and the River;" Lin Yutang's "Moment in Peking," (John Day, $3), very recently reviewed in The Post; Vardis Fisher's "Children of God," (Harper $3), an absorbing and admirably managed account of the great Westward migration of the Mormons; "Wine of Good Hope," a too leisurely but still vastly interesting story of a South African family, and "The Sword in the Stone," by T. H. White (Putnam, $2.50), a fanciful and ingeniously humorous version of an Arthurian myth.

Mr. White's other new book, "The Witch in the Wood," a continuation of the Arthurian story, is not quite as good as "The Sword in the Stone," but good, nevertheless. Beneath his farcical treatment of the legends, Mr. White evinces an astonishing erudition. Separately or together, these two books make a most acceptable gift for almost anybody.

One of the finest novels of the year is an importation, "The Thibaults," translated from the French of Roger Martin du Gard, Nobel Prize winner in literature. This shrewd and touching history of bourgeois family is already something of a classic. Assuming the recipient to be a person of taste, you will make no mistake in choosing "The Thibaults."

Brave New World

So great is the preoccupation nowadays with current affairs that books having to do with the world crisis have poured all year in streams from the presses. So rapid is the passage of events that most of them are already sadly out of date.

Hermann Rauschning's "The Revolution of Nihilism" (Alliance, $3), essays to uncover the vital principle behind the Nazi politics. It turns out to be no principle at all—merely an amoral opportunism, sans any program save the consolidation of power in the hands of an irresponsible elite. It might be well, however, to read this book in conjunction with another which has got far less attention than it deserves. This is Peter Drucker's "The End of Economic Man" (John Day, $3), which argues that the dictator states have not arisen in vacuo, but are to a considerable degree the product of a deep-seated spiritual revolt.

"Inside Asia," by John Gunther is journalism but journalism of a brilliant kind. This, with Mr. Gunther's earlier book, "Inside Europe," affords a pretty complete guide to the whole surface of world events and to the divers personalities who appear to influence them.

"In Defense of Britain," by the distinguished military critic, Capt. B. H. Liddell-Hart (Random House, $2.50), might well be the handbook used by those who are directing the French and British strategy in the European war. Certainly it explains many of the apparent incongruities of the war. Fritz Sternberg's "From Nazi Sources: Why Hitler Can't Win" (Alliance, $1.75) seems to confirm the virtue of most of Capt. Liddell-Hart's theories.

Poetry

It has been a pretty slim year for poetry, too. Miss Edna St. Vincent Millay's new volume, "Huntsman, What Quarry?" (Harper, $3), was something of a disappointment. Even so Miss Millay is still our most distinguished poet of either sex and no book of hers is without interest to her many admirers.

Several new volumes of collected verse have appeared during the year. Among these must certainly be mentioned Mark Van Doren's (Holt, $3.50), the Englishhman, Robert Graves', (Random House, $2.50) and the New Englander, Robert Frost's, (Holt, $5).

History, Criticism

The most important event in this field is the appearance of the fourth, fifth and sixth volumes of Arnold J. Toynbee's "A Study of History" (Oxford University Press, $23). This is a work which may one day influence our children as much as Buckle influenced our grandfathers or as Oswald Spengler has influenced ourselves. If you have a studious friend by whom you would like to do something very handsome, you might give him all six volumes.

With "America in Midpassage" (Macmillan), Charles and Mary Beard have brought their study of American civilization pretty much up to date. Perhaps, because of its narrower perspectives, this new volume seems to lack some of the fine intellectual detachment which characterized its predecessors. Nevertheless, it is a valuable and interesting book.

The fact that Dr. Will Durant's "The Life of Greece" (Simon & Schuster, $3.95) is, like most of the author's work, somewhat sweetened to the popular taste is at once its principal virtue and its principal defect. If you want a deeper and more authoratative study of the Greek genius, try Werner Jaeger's "Paideia" (Oxford University Press, $3.75).

"The American Theatre Since 1918," by Joseph Wood Krutch (Random House, $2.50), is a sound and serious analysis of our contemporary playwrights and their weaknesses. "The Novel and the Modern World," by David Daiches (University of Chicago, $2.50), skillfully depicts the influences of Proust, Joyce, Dorothy Richardson and others. Mark Van Doren's "Shakespeare" (Holt, $3) certainly is the most interesting book on the bard since the one by Logan Pearsall Smith about a decade ago.

Reprints, Anthologies

In the matter of new editions the publishers have done themselves proud. You can hardly spend $5 to better advantage than on the handsome new Heritage Press edition of Hendrick Willem Van Loon's biography of Rembrandt) "R. v. R.," or than on the new Random House edition of Tolstoi's "Anna Karenina."

Among less expensive reprints your attention is commended to the new edition of Clare Leighton's tender and earthy "Country Matters" and "Four Hedges" with all her fine woodcut illustrations (Macmillan, $1 each). The new Harbrace edition of "Paradise," by Esther Forbes, should help to widen the public of a highly gifted American novelist, whose work has not yet had the wide appreciation it deserves.

Among short story anthologies we have, besides the annual O. Henry and O'Brien collections, Somerset Maugham's gallery of special favorites under the title of "Tellers of Tales." "The Bible of the World" (Viking Press, $5) includes the Old Testaments, the Koran, the Vedas, the Confucian Analects and all the other sacred books of all the world's great religions—a great deal of wisdom to gather under one pair of covers. And speaking of wisdom, we direct your attention also to the new Living Thoughts Library (Longman's Green, $1 each), wherein distinguished editors have assembled kernels of the thought philosophers such as Voltaire, Montaigne, Spinoza, Schopenhauer and Thoreaux.

Art

Not often are so many fine art books issued in a single year. There is not room here to mention them all, but it is impossible to omit "The Treasury of Art Masterpieces," edited by Thomas Craven (Simon & Schuster, $10) or the two new publications, one on Rubens, the other on Rodin, of the celebrated Phaidon Press. (Published in America by the Oxford University Press, $5 each) or Forbes Watson's survey of "American Painting Today" (Oxford, $4.50).

Children's Books

There have been so many fine new children's books that it would take half the page to mention them all. However, we should like to mention "Francie on the Run," by Hilda van Stockum, a rather old-fashioned and delightfully illustrated tale about a young Irish runaway; "Mike Milligan and his Steam Shovel," by Virginia Lee Burton, an original and engaging excursion into animism; "Piccoloni," by Marian King, a touching little tale of a Neapolitan boy and his donkey; "The Little French Farm," by Lida (more, however, for the fine robust illustrations than the somewhat insipid text); "Abraham" Lincoln," by Ingri and Edgar Parin d'Aulaire, with some startlingly fine lithographs and illustrations; "Lucio and his Nuong," about a little Filipino and his lazy carabao. It has some fine pictures.

And with that we wish you Merry Christmas!

Mary Haworth's Mail

Small Town Girl's Profound Love of Married Man Leads to Illegitimate Pregnancy; What to Do?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: At the most crucial period in my life, I am coming to you for advice. For the past three years, I have been going with a man whom I have learned to love very deeply. At first, I made a break, because I learned he was married. But fate threw us together again after a year and from that time we continued a friendship that has grown into a deep, sincere love.

Now, I find that I am going to have a baby. I have a dear, sweet mother who would stand by me through thick and thin, but I shall never give her the name of the man. I am 25 years old and have a job paying a small salary. I live in a small town.

Please believe me when I say that I am not a coward, and that what I have done is because I love this man with my whole heart and soul, to the fullest extent of my being, and because having his child would make my life complete. Yet, having Heaven within my very reach, I dare not even dream of it, mainly because of the empty future which lies before this baby that I could love so dearly.

Just a little over a month has passed, yet there will be questions asked that I shall be unable to answer. Please, please help me find the solution of this problem now staring me in the face. I cannot bear uncertainty any longer. Sincerely, BARBARA.

Society Offers One Approved Solution

DEAR BARBARA: One infers from the general tenor of your letter that the idea of interrupting the pregnancy is before your mind. If such is your thought, I am powerless to help you, for reasons too obvious to review. But if you are willing to put your shoulder to the wheel and have the baby, in circumstances and surroundings designed to minimize embarrassment, then I suggest that you communicate with Miss Anne Rogers, at the Florence Crittenton Home, located at 4759 Reservoir road northwest, in Washington, D. C. The telephone is EMerson 4300. While you may not be eligible for admittance there, because of your out-of-town residence, I am sure that Miss Rogers can and gladly will advise and guide you in finding the proper refuge.

Believe me when I say that it is not easy to maintain a dispassionate attitude when considering dilemmas such as yours, but the possibilities of direct personal service, in a department such as this, are necessarily limited. In recommending that you get in touch with Miss Rogers, I am consoled by the knowledge that you could not possibly meet with a person of greater kindliness, understanding and practicality than she, when it comes to working out the socially-approved solution of this particular type of problem. M. H.

Snob Seduces Girl, Who Expects His Child

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: It is to ask your advice about the gravest of problems any young person must face that I am writing you this letter. I am a girl 17 years of age . . . About eight months ago I met a boy at a dance with whom I fell deeply in love. He is now attending a prep school for the United States Military Academy. Although he never told me he loved me, I felt that this must be true because of the attention he paid me.

We could hardly be called a proper match, even after his graduation from the Academy, because of the gap in our social levels. His father is a successful banker and he is accustomed to having anything he wants. I never knew who my father was. I am at present living here in Washington with my uncle, a small shopkeeper, because of my mother's inability to support me. She is living in the Bronx in New York City, keeping house for a brother. I have mentioned these things in order that you might more fully understand the situation.

Bill and I started going "steady" from the time we met. As I loved him, I never resisted his advances, which grew more serious as time went on. All this time he never professed any love for me, which at the time I thought strange, but accepted as part of his nature. Once I completely succumbed to his demands, and shall regret it for the rest of my life.

After that, I never saw much of him again, and finally he stopped coming to see me altogether. I have written him several letters asking why he has forgotten me, but have never received an answer. I have heard that he is running around with other girls now, and has forgotten me completely.

I expect my baby within the next two months and I don't know what to do. I have told my uncle of the whole unfortunate affair, but he refuses to give me any advice in the matter. He says he will see to it that my baby is sent to a home as soon as it is born, which I shall never permit while I still breathe. Naturally, I couldn't tell Bill about it, because it would ruin his whole career. I am afraid to write my mother about it, because I know she wouldn't understand. She and I never have completely understood each other as long as I can remember. I don't know which way to turn and implore your help as soon as possible. VIOLA G.

Boy Should Meet His Proper Responsibility

DEAR VIOLA G.: The answer which I have made to the letter at the top of this column contains the only specific and potentially helpful recommendation which I could give to you—namely is to enlist the cooperation of Miss Anne Rogers, of the Florence Crittenton Home. You may get in touch with her either by letter or by telephone, as the address and telephone number are given above. She will give you an appointment for a confidential, plan-making conference. Since you wish to keep the baby, this desire will be encouraged by the home.

I might say in passing that, despite the so-called "gap in social levels," between yourself and the boy who is the father of your expected child, you are obviously a much finer character than he. You are willing to bear a cross for a lifetime, unaided, rather than ruin his stuffed-shirt career; whereas he thinks nothing of despoiling your girlhood, as a means of gratifying transient desire.

There is gallantry of a high order in your intention to spare him all knowledge of the fact that a child is to be borne of his philandering, but I wonder if that is an altogether wise decision? After all, the child will be his child, quite as much as yours, with inalienable claims to his financial protection. Also, if confronted with tangible evidence of the fruits of wanton behavior, he may be somewhat more circumspect in future. But on this aspect of the situation, as upon all others, Miss Rogers will prove to be a competent adviser. M. H.

New Simplicity in Felts

Here are two hats for old, young and in-between ages in the easily-wearable styles suitable to both town and country. Both these sensibly styled felts fit and "stay put" on the head and both have comfortable brims which frame the face in appealing frankness. The brightly hued Dobbs above has a crown of intricately manipulated belting ribbon. The cloche at right, by Knox, has only a crown and hat band for contrast in color and trim

Head-Fitting Cloche Hat Comes Back

By Marshall Adams,
The Post Fashion Editor.

AT LAST there's a hat that really sits and fits on the head. It's the cloche, the French of which means "bell," because originally the cloche took the shape of a bell snuggled close to the head and neck. With an eye to a long and useful life, the neat little cloche has returned to fashion after a period of retirement.

Marshall Adams

The fact that the cloche is now being boosted by both conservative and high-style stores in town comes as the death knell to the Lilliputian hat women have affected during the past two years. In fact, our New York sleuths report that the peanut-sized hat will not be among those present by next season, possibly to the relief of many a man with no sense of humor. A more clean-cut common sense in styles is predicted for spring and, although picture hats, postilion shapes and halos promise to be popular silhouettes, the cloche will probably prove as big a favorite as the turban turned out to be this season.

Cloche Has Many Forms

The cloche has led a checkered career, yet remains the most popular single hat style in the world. It has been worn by every well-groomed English woman and every other American for the last 20 years. In some form or other the cloche is the foundation of every millinery wardrobe, since it has many guises. They are all based on a head-conforming crown with a mere lip for a brim, as in Queen Mary's famous aigrette-topped ones, or with snap or mushroom brims, which active sportswomen swear by.

The cloche originally was the product of the World War. More directly it was the brain child of Irene Castle, who, while in France at the close of the war, bobbed her hair short, thus setting a style for cropped hair and, consequently, the necessity for a head covering to conceal those shorn locks. The cloche then lookad like nothing more glamorous than a pot—in fact, it was called the "Tommy's tin can." During the next 20 years the cloche became a neat "little round hat," worshiped by college girls who started another style by wearing their cloches far back on their heads with elaborate nonchalance.

Kinder Shapes Introduced

Technical millinery experts, like Knox, Stetson and Dobbs, all famous men's hatters, have taken the impersonalization out of the cloches they've been selling for two decades. They have given softer, kinder flares to the brims a wider variety of slope or contour to the crowns. Often the detailing of both crown and brim is fanciful, with smocking, shirring, pleating or belting ribbon touches adding a dressmaker finish—in keeping with the trim but dressmakery clothes promised for spring.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

New York, Dec. 13.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Alma Archer, the girl who writes about charm and beauty, gave the girls quite a turn the other day by turning up at a classy fashion show without a hat. Alma's hair is platinum white, worn short, and uncurled. Don't see many thatches like that, these days.

I suppose that in order to see a really beautifully set table you should dine with a designer of fine table linen, which is what I did. Her name is Marguerite Mergentime, and that dinner table, at which six of us sat, was something to see. The cloth was dark green linen, printed with white leaves and some rather fantastic designs. She lives in an all-white penthouse overlooking Central Park—those are about the loveliest locations on Manhattan Island. But Marguerite has been, and is, at the mercy of her interior decorator, who has done a good job—except that he has insisted on three-legged chairs. Those are very tricky affairs—in fact, one of the dinner guests fell completely out of his. Naturally, we all laughed gaily. People always do, when somebody falls down. The fall is the foundation of all slapstick stage and movie comedy.

ALWAYS ON THE watch for a good new party tid-bit, and the nicest I've found this fall is a canape made of small shortbread shells filled with curried chicken. Believe me, hostesses, that is something!

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

Couple of Exercises Daily Stave Off Foot Trouble, Says Ellen Ballon, Pianist

IF THERE is a bright side to misfortune, we like to look on it! Ellen Ballon, the brilliant Canadian pianist, says a broken ankle was the reason she learned to walk correctly, for until she did, her career was at a standstill.

It happened like this. Miss Mallon slipped and twisted her right ankle, the pedal one, and broke several bones in the foot. And within four short weeks, she was walking again, under her own power. And now, two years later, she doesn't just walk—she walks beautifully, and that pedal foot is stronger than it was before the injury!

That is a miracle which took courage, determination and exercise. Miss Ballon credits the exercise—she learned quite a bit about it in two years! And she is convinced that "if women would only keep their muscles in tone, and get plenty of fresh air and enough sleep, they wouldn't have to worry about having themselves made beautiful."

Stave Off Foot Troubles

But this is about feet, and posture. Your career probably does not depend on your feet, even though you do. And it's unlikely you give them a thought until they hurt. Also, feet are the very foundation of your posture (which makes the figure!) so why not give them a little consideration? If you would do a couple of Miss Ballón's exercises every day, you could stave off foot troubles—barring accidents—forever.

One of the first and best is this: While still lying in bed in the morning, flex the knees and turn them outward, then place the soles of the feet together, with toes curling under. Hold, and see if you can't feel a strong pull on all the foot and ankle muscles. Relax, rest, and repeat four times. Later you may do six.

Here's another: Stand on a telephone book with the toes just over the edge, then curl the toes under. Relax, repeat six times. And a third is to stand on the floor on the outer borders of the feet and pigeon-toed.

If you were learning to walk, you would acquire the habit of placing one foot directly ahead of the other. And you would be surprised to find that you had also acquired the smooth, graceful glide that distinguishes smart actresses and mannequins! That is the correct way to walk. The gracefulness is a by-product!

Posture Improves Outlook

Miss Ballon thinks a good posture improves your outlook on life—"It gives one a better perspective."

Her favorite posture exercise is to stand with the back to a wall, the heels a few inches out, and flatten the back against the wall. Then let the trunk droop forward, head, arms and shoulders dangling toward the floor, and slowly—as if you were lifting a tremendous weight—bring yourself erect. In this erect position, have the arms overhead, elbows slightly bent, but the entire arm against the wall. The shoulders, small of back and hips should also be touching the wall. The knees will be slightly flexed in order to do this. You can vary the exercise by placing the hands on the shoulder tips, flattening the back against the wall, and sliding down until the knees are acutely flexed. Keep the arms against the wall as you slide down, then up.

Luncheon Guests Polled On 1940 Candidates

Second in Series of Prognostical Parties Finds Many Choices Qualified by 'Only in Case Roosevelt Isn't Drafted'

By Hope Ridings Miller,

NO PLACE LIKE a ladies' luncheon to gather political prognostications that may not mean much but make good table talk just the same. Take the small get-together yesterday, for example. It was the second in a series given by a hostess, who shall be nameless but who, last year, hit on the idea of giving a "Gallup Poll" luncheon to determine who her friends thought would be the Democratic and Republican nominees for 1940.

HOPE R. MILLER

Exactly a year after the initial get-together, the same hostess yesterday gathered in the group again, and by way of diversion guests were given another chance to change their "votes" or make the same selections. Well, the party went merrily along from soup to salad, with several women insisting that some rather significant qualifications should precede their ballots.

Two wanted it definitely understood that their choices would be indicated "only in case Roosevelt isn't drafted." Two others were certain there wasn't the remotest possibility of anything else. Another fervently agreed to this; a couple more were noncommittal; and one was brave enough to say, point blank, "If Roosevelt is drafted and does run, we'll have a Republican President, come November, 1940—sure as the world!"

The company represented about as congenial a cross-section of Capital life as you can gather under one roof. Mrs. William O. Douglas, who never speaks out of turn, was there; also, politically astute Mrs. Henry F. Grady, who never misses a trick, and like Mrs. Douglas, is loyal to the last notch.

The luncheon group also included Mrs. Donald Richberg, Mrs. Edgar Goodrich, Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson, Mrs. J. Fred Essary, Mrs. Raymond Clapper, Mrs. John O. Herrick, and several others.

Ballots Cast Over Dessert

When dessert was served and coffee was on its way in, the "vote" was taken—not on the basis of personal choice but rather as opinions of which candidates would come away from the two conventions carrying the banner. Three women in the group cast the same ballots they did last year—Roosevelt running against Vandenberg. Two put their names down as selecting Hull and Dewey; one came through for Hull and Vandenberg; two mentioned McNutt and Vandenberg; and one raised a flag for Wheeler and Vandenberg; one mentioned Stark and Vandenberg; and one said there was no doubt about it—the tickets would be headed by Roosevelt and Dewey.

In the round-up at last year's luncheon, three in the company mentioned Taft (whose name didn't so much as come up yesterday); and two others came to the fore for Clark and Hopkins.

Well, the luncheon series is to continue; the next session is to take place a month before the election; there will be a final one a month afterward when prizes for those who guessed best will be duly awarded.

Kulikovsky Story Of Interest Here

A story appearing in the news section yesterday was avidly read by scores of Washingtonites who knew Edward Kulikovsky when he was formerly attached to the Polish Embassy and one of Washington's most popular diplomats. Four or five years ago, you saw him at many an important and exclusive get-together, and when he left here to take up his duties as press officer of the foreign office in Warsaw, there was wild wailing and gnashing of teeth around these parts—as is usually the case when an attractive bachelor departs.

When news circulated that he was killed in Rumania in the latter part of September, his career here was recalled by a number of friends who, up to that time, were still cherishing the hope he would eventually return to Washington. Well, who knows? Perhaps he will yet. After being reported dead in Europe and then turning up very much alive in New York—anything can happen. Particularly for a man who has been fortunate enough to escape from both Soviet and German concentration camps.

DEBUTANTE DATA: Popular Marilynn Himes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hendrix Himes, of Prospect Hall, Frederick, Md., is being as widely feted as any deb I know of, and her calendar is growing more crowded each day. Latest party to go on her schedule is the dinner-dance being planned by Mrs. Thomas Richard Cowell on Thursday, January 11. It will take place at the 1925 F Street Club . . . Lucky, indeed, are the dozens of social and official notables who are being invited to the dance on January 2, when Senator and Mrs. Millard Tydings will entertain at the Sulgrave Club in honor of Miss Patricia Hurley, of Washington, and Miss Ellen Bruce.

SOCIETY-GO-ROUND: Back in town for a second visit this season is Sir Anthony Jenkinson, who is a guest of George Abell and will accompany the latter to the John Caswells' party tonight following the White House diplomatic reception . . . Some time soon Sir Anthony will be off for Mexico, Central and South America for an extended stay . . . Mme. Ertegun, wife of the Turkish Ambassador, has invitations out for a luncheon on December 20 . . . Senorit. Mercedes Madrazo, of Havana, who has been visiting the Grant Masons for several days, is now in New York for a few days. On December 21 she will sail for her homeland.

Rep. and Mrs. Harter Leave for Ohio

Representative and Mrs. Dow W. Harter left their apartment at the Shoreham yesterday for their home in Akron, Ohio, where they will spend the Christmas holidays.

Representative and Mrs. Harter's son, Jack, who is a student at Kentucky Military Institute, has been with his parents at their apartment for the last few days before going on to Ohio with them.

Miss Betty Nash, whose engagement to Joseph A. Hoskins, of Kansas City and Washington, has just been announced by her mother, Mrs. George Erwin Nash. Mr. Hoskins is the son of Mrs. C. Louise Hoskins, of Kansas City. The betrothal was made known recently at a party given by the bride-elect's brother, Frank C. Nash. Miss Nash was graduated from Nazareth College in Rochester, N. Y., and has made her home in Washington for the last five years. Mr. Hoskins is a graduate of Rockhurst College, Kansas City, and of the Georgetown University School of Law. He is a member of the University Club, and is regional attorney in charge of the Kansas City office of the National Labor Relations Board. The wedding will take place in June

About The Town

Diplomats of Warring Nations Remain Polite To Each Other, but Try to Avoid Meeting

MOST DRAMATIC social event of the season is tonight's diplomatic reception at the White House, which this year, for obvious reasons, is fraught with interest other than just the gorgeous trappings of the men and the beautiful gowns and jewels of their wives.

What happens when diplomats of a belligerent country meet face to face? Alas, for lovers of the dramatic, nothing exciting. Rumors have been flying that they are forbidden by their governments to speak to one another, but on checking with the embassy secretary of one of the warring European countries we find this is not true.

"If our enemies bow to us, we bow," said the "spokesman." "War or no war, the one rule is still politeness." But he did not expect that there would be the occasion for any mutual bowing; instead, that enemy diplomats would politely try to keep from meeting each other.

THE LIST has been scaled down practically in half for the party this year, but some American officials will be in the crowd. The Federal Security Administrator and Mrs. Paul V. McNutt have been invited, and Representative Edith Nourse Rogers will be present. Though an ardent Republican, Mrs. Rogers is liked by the Roosevelts and is invited to many White House parties.

Mrs. Rogers, one of the few Congressionals still in Washington, recently was returned from London, marked "unable to locate," a letter mailed last summer. The person to whom it was addressed was Capt. Gainard, of the City of Flint

The Stoneham Independent, newspaper in Stoneham, Mass., one of Mrs. Rogers' constituencies, recently had an editorial about her which said, "It's a mighty hard problem to always act just as the other person wants you to, but we truly believe that Representative Edith Nourse Rogers comes as close to perfection as anyone we have ever known in history." Split infinitive or no, this clipping is now among Mrs. Rogers' favorite possessions.

MRS. WILLIAM LAUGHLIN, of New York, one of Robert Coe's numerous cousins, will be here for the week-end, accompanied by Mr. Laughlin. They will stay with Mr. Coe at his residence on Foxhall road. The Laughlins have many friends in Washington, where they frequently visit.

THE 1925 F STREET CLUB, scene of many an important party in the early days of the New Deal, has recaptured its brilliance and is being used for entertaining constantly this year. Lunching there yesterday was a whole roomful, among them Mrs. Harry Black with Mme. van Kaathoven, and another party which included Mrs. Randall Hagner, Mrs. Hiram Bingham and Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock.

MR. AND MRS. Jouett Shouse will entertain December 20 at their annual carol singing party. This is always one of the most pleasant events of the holiday season, with guests gathering in the holly-and-mistletoe trimmed living room to sing around the piano and an old organ which the Shouses bring down from the attic every year. After everyone has sung their heads off, they adjourn to the dining room for a buffet supper.

WHEN YOU LIVE in the Philippines, you mail your Christmas cards in October or November to be sure they will get to the United States in time. We have just received our first card of the season, from the United States High Commissioner and Mrs. Francis B. Sayre, who, in the midst of getting settled out there, found time to pick out a greeting with an interesting picture of a Philippine village scene.

DEBUTANTE FOOTNOTES: Rose Chatfield-Taylor is majoring in art at progressive Bennington College, where the students take six weeks every winter to work at a job as part of their course. She has already found one at the Corcoran Art Gallery, which means that she will be in Washington through January . . . The dance to be given for Marilynn Himes next Thursday at the Sulgrave Club promises to be one of the most elaborate in years. Two orchestras, one for rhumbas, will be imported from New York, and the decorations will include concealed pink lights. Marilynn, by the way, has named her new horse "Glamour Girl" . . . Deborah Kirk is studying drawing at Vassar and hopes one day to be an illustrator.

Fetes Planned After Reception At White House

Mrs. Beale, Simses And Caswells Among Those to Entertain

Although tonight's diplomatic reception at the White House has been very much curtailed this year because of the war, Mrs. Truxtun Beale will entertain at her annual party afterward. She has asked leading diplomats and their friends to drop in for conversation and a glass of champagne at historic Decatur House, her home on Jackson place.

Members of the British Embassy staff will gather after the White House party in the apartment of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Sims, of the British Embassy. Since they are in court mourning for Princess Louise, last of Queen Victoria's daughters, the British diplomats are avoiding large parties.

Mr. and Mrs. John Caswell will also entertain at a pleasant supper tonight after the reception at their home on Twenty-fourth street. They have made this an annual event for the past few years.

Miss Mabel Boardman and her sister, Mrs. Frederick Keep, whose party after the diplomatic reception also has been an outstanding event, have canceled plans for one this year.

Col. Donovan To Aid Benefit

Back in the days when Col. William J. Donovan was Assistant Attorney General and one of the most colorful figures in public life, he won hosts of friends who always referred to him as "Wild Bill" Donovan. Many of those friends are still in Washington, and they and others will have the opportunity of welcoming him back to town when he comes, at the invitation of Mrs. Frank H. Simonds, to make a brief talk between curtains at the performance with Ruth Draper is contributing at the National Theater next Wednesday evening, December 20, for the benefit of Polish refugees.

Col. Donovan is chairman of the New York Committee of the Commission for Polish Relief, giving generously of his time in helping to raise funds for the immediate relief of Polish war victims, regardless of race or creed.

Christmas plans are taking second place with the members of Mrs. Simonds' committee, all of whom are busy selling tickets among their friends, giving a good share of each day to this work. Mrs. Mahlon Pitney has secured a brilliant list of patronesses and patrons for the benefit, all of whom are planning to attend Miss Draper's famous "One Woman Show."

The National Theater has but 10 boxes, and of these Robert Woods Bliss, a member of the local committee, and Mrs. Bliss, a member of the Commission for Polish Relief, have taken two. Miss Mabel T. Boardman has a box, also Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean, and Col. and Mrs. Robert M. Guggenheim. Princess Boncompagni, having filled one box, phoned committee headquarters for a second, and will entertain a group of her friends.

Miss Crompton Married to Gustavo Duran

Of interest here is news of the marriage on December 4 at Totnes, Devonshire, England, of Miss Bonte Romilly Crompton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Henry Crompton, of Rye, N. Y., and Wilton, N. H., to Gustavo Duran, of Madrid Spain.

The bride is a sister of Mrs. Michael Straight, of Alexandria, the former Miss Belinda Crompton, and the marriage took place at the home of Mr. Straight's mother, Mrs. Leonard K. Elmhirst, and Mr. Elmhirst. The couple will live in England.

The bride attended the Rye Country Day School, Barnard College and Oxford University. Mr. Duran studied in Madrid and also in Paris, where he attended the Ecole Normale de Musique. When 21 years old he composed and conducted a ballet which was performed in Paris and Brussels as well as in Germany and Italy.

Taft, Vanderbilt To Be Guests

Senator Robert A. Taft and Gov. William H. Vanderbilt of Rhode Island will share honors today at a luncheon to be given by Francis Taylor at the Providence-Biltmore in Newport.

Mrs. Paul FitzSimmons, mother of Gov. Vanderbilt, will be hostess at a luncheon today for women members of the Republican State committee, following which event Senator Taft will deliver an address. Mrs. FitzSimmons is a member of the Republican National Committee.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

The Argentine Ambassador and Senora de Espil will entertain at dinner on Saturday.

Gabriel Turbay, Colombian Ambassador, who has been at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York with Esteban Jaramillo, former Minister of Finance of Colombia, has returned to Washington.

The Norwegian Minister and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne entertained informally at dinner last night when the ranking guests were the Canadian Minister, Loring Christie, and the Swiss Minister and Mme. Bruggmann.

Representative Paul Brown, of Elberton, Ga., is in town for several days and is at the Wardman Park.

Commissioner George E. Allen and Mr. and Mrs. James J. Pelley were dinner guests on Tuesday evening of Mr. and Mrs. Berthold A. Clement, who entertained at the Biltmore in New York.

Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose entertained at dinner last evening in her apartment at the Shoreham.

Drew Pearson Feted on Birthday

Mrs. Drew Pearson and George C. Vournas entertained at a surprise supper party last night in honor of Mr. Pearson, whose birthday it was. The dinner took place in a private dining-room at the Westchester.

The other guests included Mr. and Mrs. Leon Pearson, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Allen, Mr. and Mrs. W. Royce Powell, Mrs. Eleanor Patterson, Harold Horan, Kempsser Simpson, Miss Betty Beale and Mr. and Mrs. Gardner Jackson.

1925 F Street Club Dances Chalk Up Another Success

Dinners and Parties Precede Second In Series Arranged by Secret Committee Of Six; Dunns Join Subscription Affairs

The "secret committee" behind the three dances being given this winter at the 1925 F Street Club chalked up another success last night when the second of the series was held. Composed of half a dozen young matrons, the committee desires for various reasons to keep its identity secret, though that is a difficult feat in gossipy Washington.

The guests drifted in for dinner at the club about 8:30, many of them meeting in groups for cocktails beforehand. Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse had some friends in, as did Mrs. Gwynn Turnure. Mrs. Lloyd Moore entertained a group, among them Mrs. Hugh O'Donnell, and Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Clark were others who rounded up a congenial party for cocktails.

Supper was served buffet style in the drawing room. Small tables had been set on the inclosed porch. Dancing stopped at 12:30 so the tired businessmen could get up early the next morning without too much of a struggle.

Mrs. George T. Summerlin, jr., and her fiance, Maj. Horace Smith, whose engagement was announced yesterday, were receiving congratulations and best wishes. They came for dinner but left early, as Mrs. Summerlin is very busy arranging details for her wedding on Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. James Clement Dunn have recently joined the subscripition dances. Other members present last night included Mrs. George Pulver, who is here from Southern Pines, N. C., for a visit; Mr. and Mrs. Donald Downs, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Page, Mrs. Kurt Hetzel, Alfons Landa.

Mr. and Mrs. Brinkley Smithers motored over from their home in Reistertown, Md., to attend the party. Benjamin Plunket and Christopher Bramwell of the British Embassy, were present for dinner, but left early as they are in court mourning for Princess Louise.

Bowens Give Dinner Dance

Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Henry F. Grady were guests of honor at a dinner dance given last evening by Rear Admiral and Mrs. Harold G. Bowen at the Army-Navy Country Club. About 50 guests were present.

Among them were Rear Admiral and Mrs. Chester Nimitz, Capt. and Mrs. Martin Deyo, Capt. and Mrs. Lybrand Smith, Commander and Mrs. Louis Dreller, Commander and Mrs. John E. Wood, Miss Minnie Mae Fleming, Mr. and Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Cabell Brown and Dr. and Mrs. Dudley Roberts, of New York.

The party was one of a number being given at the regular midweek dinner dance at the club. Dr. and Mrs. Grady will be feted again on December 21, when Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Brand will entertain for them at a dinner dance at the Chevy Chase Club.

Costa Rica's Envoy, Wife Dinner Guests

Honduran Minister Host to the de Castros, Soon Going Home

Another of the parties honoring the Minister from Costa Rica and Senora de Castro Beeche, who will return to their homeland on January 5, was held last evening in the Shoreham Blue Room, when the Minister from Honduras and Senora de Caceres entertained a company of 26.

In the company were Miss Rosie Castro, Dr. and Mrs. Tomas Cajigas and their daughter, Miss Anita Cajigas, the Counselor of the Venezuelan Embassy and Senor de Fombona-Pachano, the Minister of Guatemala and Senora de Recinos, the Ambassador of Panama and Senora de Boyd, the Minister of El Salvador and Senora de Castro, the Minister of Nicaragua and Senora De Bayle, the Military Attache of the Cuban Embassy and Senora de Munilla, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wyatt, Dr. Augusto Rodriquez, attache of the Honduran legation, Mr. and Mrs. Alex Castro and Richard Castro.

The E. M. Murphys Announce Son

Mr. and Mrs. Edward M. Murphy announe the birth of a son December 7 at Columbia Hospital.

Mrs. Murphy is the former Miss Geraldine Asmuth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Asmuth, of 3301 Warder street.

Women Urged to More Dynamic Social Action by Mrs. Beard

Historian Stresses Their Part in Talk To Democratic Club

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

Women will perform a more realistic and dynamic part in social progress if they realized that they have helped make constructive history through the ages, Mrs. Mary Beard, distinguished historian and president of the World Center for Women's Archives, declared last night. She spoke before the Woman's National Democratic Club, discussing "Feminine Determination of Feminine Destiny."

Mrs. Beard who came to Washington from New York to view the current exhibitions of archival material relating to women at the Library of Congress and National Archives, was also guest of honor yesterday afternoon at the tea given by the Washington Unit of the World Center at the clubhouse of the American Association of University Women, 1634 Eye street.

Mrs. Roosevelt attended the tea, talked with Mrs. Beard of the project and expressed interest in the special loan exhibit which had been arranged for the occasion.

Among the interesting papers on display were letters and articles relating to the woman suffrage campaign by Belle Case LaFollette, mother of Senator Robert LaFollette and Fola LaFollette, who was present yesterday to point out some of the interesting details of this collection. It included a letter from Ellen Terry, another from Jane Addams, description of plans for a reception here in the interests of the suffrage amendment, the manuscript of a talk on Vinnie Ream Hoxie, the sculptor, given by Mrs. LaFollette before a woman's club in Madison, Wis.

Nina Allender, whose cartoons were credited with having a large share in the success of the suffrage campaign, was among the guests at the tea. "I didn't know I was an archive," she remarked when she discovered an original of one of her famous drawings, "Spirit of '76," in the exhibit. There are 175 of her cartoons in the archives of the woman's movement at the Library of Congress.

Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes had loaned a collection of rare papers and photographs, and others had come from the Library of Congress. Camp Fire Girls and Girl Scouts were in uniform to assist.

Mrs. Roosevelt discussing women's archives with Mrs. Mary Beard, president of the World Center for Women's Archives, at the tea given yesterday by the Washington unit at the A. A. U. W. clubhouse. The affair was in Mrs. Beard's honor

Even to the casual observer, the world appeared a place in which women played an important part. Many of those who attended the tea went to the dinner of the Democratic Club to hear Mrs. Beard later.

Women have always played a major role in determining what shall be done in crises, she said, but, unless they are acquainted with history and aware of this fact, they are liable to exalt what they do today beyond its social value.

Despite the claim of feminists that women have been a subject sex, they have always been comakers of history, she said. They have operated with varied purposes, with courage, sometimes with intelligence and sometimes with intense emotions, but certainly not as women in the shadow.

Women have accepted men's history as their own, she said—one in which war, diplomacy, politics and church movements have been predominant. They have tried to carry on in this pattern whereas their own contribution has been the more constructive. For this reason, Mrs. Beard declared it was imperative that women's archives be preserved and that their accomplishments in the past give inspiration and direction for future efforts.

She was introduced by Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, Director of the Mint.

Receiving with Mrs. Beard yesterday afternoon at the tea were the directors of the Washington unit, Mrs. Emil Hurja, the president; Dr. Irene A. Wright, Mrs. Grace Heller Cooper, who was in charge of arrangements for the affair; Mrs. Emily Newell Blair, Miss Gyladys Jones, Miss La Follette, Mrs. Lester Schoene, Judge Lucy Howorth and Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward.

At the tea tables were Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, Mrs. Robert Bruere, Mrs. Ross, Mrs. David Cushman Coyle and Mrs. Lucille Foster McMillin.

Zontas to Honor Miss Boardman

Miss Mabel Boardman will be guest of honor next Wednesday at the luncheon meeting of the Zonta Club and will accept for the American Red Cross a bronze plaque the club is presenting in memory of Miss I. Malinda Havey. Miss Havey, a former member and past president of the club, was also a national director of the Red Cross.

The guest speaker at yesterday's luncheon was Mrs. Constance Albright Snow, well known pianist, a representative of the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra. Mrs. Snow discussed "America's Place in the World of Music." She stated that it is the ambition of artists all over the world to appear on program in the United States; that Hollywood is a fine medium for producing fine music and excellent opportunity for education of the taste of the general public for higher type music. Mrs. Snow declared Stokowski was outstanding in his improvement of the mechanics of sound reception and transmission.

Dr. Mildred Dickerson and Mrs. Frances Gutelius Smith, members of the club, are giving a silver tea at the home of Mrs. Smith, 3835 North Upland street, Arlington, Sunday, for Zontians and their friends for the benefit of the Hazel Hurst Foundation for the Blind. The work of the foundation is the training of guide dogs and the rehabilitation of the visually handicapped. Hazel Hurst is a member of the Pasedena, Calif., Zonta Club.

Dorothy Rutherford To Be Honored By Arts Club

The Arts Club will have as guest of honor at its dinner tonight Dorothy Anne Rutherford, whose original three-act Christmas play, "Life for the Living," will be given its first performance. Other guests will be Col. H. K. Rutherford, Col. John Burr and Miss Marion Halsted, who has designed costumes for the play. Mrs. Maud Howell Smith and Walter Studdiford are hosts for the club dinner.

A large number of Arts Club members will be at the dinner and attend the play afterward, among them Frank B. Steele, president, and Mrs. Steele; Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Leisenring, Mrs. Caroline McKinley Ashbrook, who is directing the production; Mrs. Carlton Van Valkenburg, Mrs. E. P. Knorr, Mrs. Carl Casey, Miss Edith M. Pyles, Mrs. Elizabeth Northrop, the Misses Hobart, Miss Edith Blinston Lowe.

Far East Study Before Town Hall

Panel discussion of "America and the Far East—What is the Solution?" at the Town Hall meeting at the Jewish Community Center, Sixteenth and Q streets, tonight will supplement a national radio program on the same subject in which three persons well known to Washington will participate.

Dr. Walter J. McComb, professor of history at the Washington Missionary College, is to speak prior to the radio broadcast from New York between 9:30 and 10:30 p. m., and will lead the local discussion after the broadcast.

Rubin Borasky, conductor of the Town Hall meetings sponsored by the Service Council of the Jewish Community Center, will read a statement from the Japanese Embassy, in which Japan's views on the subject will be given.

Daughters of 1812 To Have Party Tonight

The District Society of the Daughters of 1812 tonight will have its Christmas party at the headquarters, 1461 Rhode Island avenue. Mrs. Lane Schofield, the president, who has recovered from her recent illness, will receive the guests. Mrs. Theodore Tiller, chairman of program, will present Ella Fullmore Harllee, who will introduce Mary Fulton, a student of the Harllee Studio of Speech, in a scene from Dickens' "Christmas Carol."

Woman's Party to Open Conference and Hold Banquet

Senator George L. Radcliffe, of Maryland, and Representative Patrick J. Boland, of Pennsylvania, will speak at the banquet tomorrow night at the Cosmos Club which will mark the opening of the national conference of the National Woman's Party. The business sessions will be held tomorrow and Saturday at the national headquarters in Alvah Belmont House. Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, newly appointed national chairman, will preside at the banquet.

Also on the banquet program will be Mrs. Emma Guffey Miller, Democratic national committeewoman from Pennsylvania and a member of the Congressional committee of the Woman's Party; Miss Laura M. Berrien, national treasurer of the party, and Mrs. Burnita Shelton Matthews, prominent attorney, past president of the National Association of Women Lawyers.

Climaxing the program, Mrs. Linda Littlejohn, of Australia, president of Equal Rights International, will speak on "Equal Rights Throughout the World."

Equal rights progress in the States and the rapidly growing sentiment for the equal rights amendment will be discussed by leaders of the party at the Saturday morning meeting, presided over by Mrs. Rebekah Scandrett Greathouse, practicing attorney and recording secretary of the Woman's Party, whose family has long been prominent in the Republican Party.

Presiding at the afternoon session will be Mrs. Horace Pote, vice chairman of the District branch. Among the speakers will be Mrs. Marie Moore Forrest, chairman of processions and pageants for the World Woman's Party, who recently returned from Geneva, where she officiated at the opening of the world party headquarters.

Another speaker will be Mrs. George Mesta, Republican national committeewoman from Oklahoma and a member of the Glenn Frank committee of 100. Mrs. Mesta is likewise a member of the Woman's Party national executive council.

Soroptimists Giving Library

Tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock the Soroptimist Club will dedicate the first unit of a library it is providing for Central Union Mission. Each year it gives a library to a Washington institution, but this will be the first available to men. The others have been either for women or children.

Miss Estelle Zirkin is chairman of the civic committee under which the project is being carried out. Mrs. Jean Bennett, superintendent of the mission, is retiring president of the club.

The slate announced last week was elected yesterday at the regular luncheon meeting at the Willard Hotel. Headed by Miss Mary Bourke, who succeeds Mrs. Bennett as president, it includes first vice president, Mrs. Lorraine Good; Second vice president, Mrs. Ella Hildebrand; recording secretary, Miss Edna Connolly; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Cynthia Warner; treasurer, Miss Emma Karst; members of the board of directors, Miss Elva McNamara and Miss Mary Turner.

The banquet for the installation of the officers will be held at the Washington Hotel on January 4 at 7 p. m. The banquet committee comprises Mrs. Elinor Lee, chairman; Mrs. Mary Lewis, Miss Mary Turner, Mrs. Betsy Fisher, Mrs. Jewell Downs, Miss Grace Goodpasture, Mrs. Laura Waters, Mrs. Marie Rogers, Miss Betty Jones and Mrs. Eva Turner.

Miss Switzer Speaks at Dinner Of Radcliffe Club

Miss Mary Switzer, assistant to the Federal Security Administrator, last night was guest of honor and speaker at a dinner meeting of the Radcliffe Alumnae Club at the Admiral. Miss Switzer, who was a member of the class of '21, described the liaison work she does between the administrator and the division of public health, the Office of Education and the National Youth Administration.

She explained the reorganization and the broad program of the agencies classified under the Federal Security Administration, all with the common aim of promoting welfare, education and health.

Miss Switzer was previously in the Treasury Department as assistant to Josephine Roach, then Assistant Secretary of the Treasury in charge of public health. This, with similar experience, led to her recent appointment, she said.

Miss Jean Simmons, president of the Radcliffe Club, opened the meeting. Mrs. James C. Nelson, program chairman, presented Miss Switzer.

Ida Pruitt, of Hongkong Committee of Chinese Co-ops, Honored at Tea

MISS IDA PRUITT, of the Hongkong Promotion Committee of the Chinese Industrial Cooperatives, was guest of honor at a tea given yesterday afternoon by Miss Edna Lonigan at her apartment, 601 Nineteenth street. Miss Pruitt, just returned from New York, will be in Washington for several days.

Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Victor Kwong, of the Chinese Embassy; Miss Helen Loomis, of the China Information Service; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hibben, Mr. and Mrs. Ney Evans, Mr. and Mrs. Udo Rall, Tilford Dudley, Miss Christine Sadler, Miss Mary Switzer, Miss Isabella Diamond, George Galloway, Mrs. Frank L. Hess, Mr. and Mrs. David Scull and Mrs. William C. Johnstone.

CONSUMER NEWS—Mrs. Harriett Rinaker Howe, head of the Consumer Education Service of the American Home Economics Association, has been nominated by Consumer Education, monthly publication of the Institute for Consumer Education, as "an outstanding consumer educator in the United States." The institute is a project of the Alfred P. Sloan Foundation at Stephens College, Columbia, Mo.

The December issue of the magazine, just published, devotes a full column to a biography of Mrs. Howe. In addition to her work as head of the Consumer Education Service, she is author of articles for various educational journals, editor of the Newsletter and Miscellany, both of which are published by the American Home Economics Association, and is a trustee of the National Consumer Retailer Council. She is the wife of Dr. Paul Howe, of the United States Department of Agriculture, and the mother of two college-age daughters.

REMAINS IN GENEVA—Mrs. Benjamin Howes has just had word that her sister, Mrs. Laura Puffer Morgan, who has been in Geneva since August, expects to remain until late spring. She will continue her work with the Geneva Research Center, for which she has edited two bulletins and also with the International Consultative Group and the Women's Peace and Disarmament Committee.

EQUAL RIGHTS PARTY—Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, chairman of the National Woman's Party, yesterday entertained at luncheon at the Cosmos Club in honor of Mrs. George Mesta, of Oklahoma City and New York.

Other guests were Mrs. Linda Littlejohn, of Australia, president of Equal Rights International; Mrs. Charles McNary, Mrs. George M. Morris, Mrs. Emma Guffey Miller, Mrs. James G. Wentz, Mrs. Virginia E. Jenckes, Mrs. Marie Moore Forrest, and Mrs. Helen Hunt West.

The Cosmos Club has special interest for the Woman's Party because it was the organization's headquarters from which its leaders went to picket the White House during the suffrage campaign.

Veterans to Get Christmas Party

The Committee on War Veterans under the Department of American Citizenship of the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs, of which Mrs. Lloyd A. Morrison is chairman, will give a Christmas party for the veterans at Mount Alto Hospital, Saturday evening, from 7 to 9.

The committee includes Mrs. R. King Stone, chairman; Mrs. Otto Hammerlund, vice chairman, and Mrs. John L. McGrew, Mrs. Wintemute W. Sloan, Mrs. Harry J. Landrus, Mrs. Richard L. Spire, Mrs. Johan C. Kondrup, Mrs. M. H. Uelsmann, Mrs. Lillian Pine and Mrs. Henry Van Arsdale.

This is the first party of the holiday season. It is expected more than 100 guests will be entertained. Prizes of cigarettes, socks and shirts will be awarded and refreshments of home made cake and ice cream will be served.

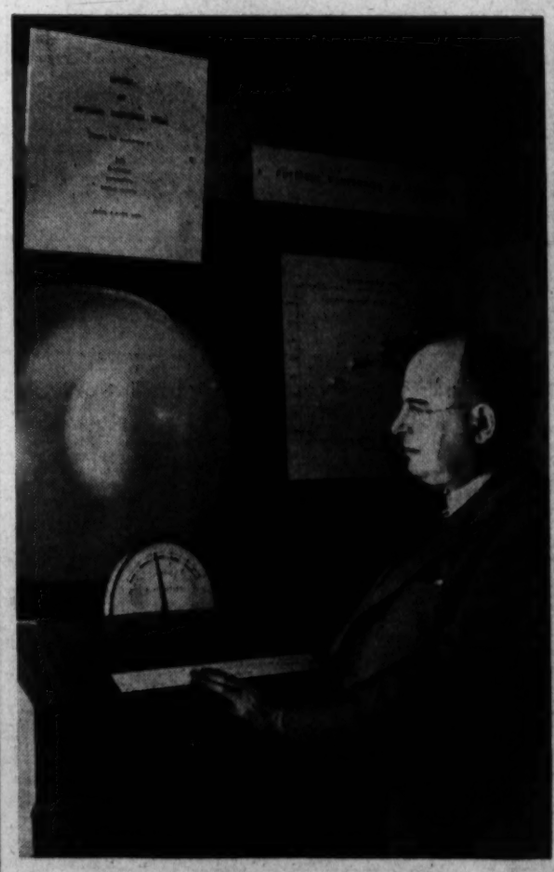
Carnegie Institute Presents:

Results of Recent Research

1. Dr. E. H. Vestine, of the department of terrestrial magnetism of Carnegie Institution, turns a coil of wire mounted on a rotor, cutting the lines of the field of earth's magnetism, causing a current to flow which is registered in the meter above

2. A. G. McNish, of the Carnegie Institute, points out a model of the world. The little projections shown on the globe are magnets, which, together with the large magnet at the center of the globe, represent the magnetic field of the earth



3. This exhibit, shown by the Mount Wilson Observatory, is a model of a Cepheid Variable Star. The model operates in such a way as to show the size, brightness, temperature and surface velocity of a variable star, a star whose size and brightness change as shown by telescopic and photographic observation. The model consists of a balloon-like arrangement with an air pump that varies its size. Back of the balloon is an arrangement of lights that change the color of the sphere to either red, yellow, or white, according to the changes of temperature. Yanks Easily Voted Outstanding '39 Team

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

As if these United States did not have their full quota of official worries, Mr. Ambrose J. Kennedy, Congressman from Maryland, announces that he will introduce a bill to set up a National Boxing Commission for regulation of the prize fight industry.

POVICH

That is equivalent to borrowing trouble.

Maybe we're wrong and everything is just lovely in the United States. Perhaps we're safely past the danger of sticking our nose in Europe's current wars, and the national budget is already nicely balanced. Maybe the national defense is all set and there's no more worry about espionage. Those Cleveland food riots, perhaps, are just a myth and Congress can now turn its attention to saving the vanishing dogwood.

Just what is the great urgency for a National Boxing Commission we do not quite understand, unless it is a genius stroke to solve the unemployment problem. That would appear to be its chief charm, because Federal regulation of the prize fight industry would require no less than an army of employs to enforce respect for any fight laws that were passed.

Simply Spoiling for a Scandal

The Government had to call in the G-Men to take over the spy situation, but even the G-Men have never had to deal with such artistic connivers and phenaglers as inhabit the prize ring industry. Attempting to regulate professional boxing is like attempting to regulate the machinations of a lunatic. The emblem of the prize fight industry is the double cross mounted on a hammer and a chisel.

If it's an attempt to save the prize fight industry, whoever said the prize fight industry was worth saving? What does it contribute to progress and civilization except too many bashed noses, scrambled craniums and false heroes? For every fighter who wins a title and gets rich, there are dozens stumbling about on round heels, bashing out their senses for a pittance and punching each other into a heavy mental fog.

If the Federal Government believes it has its troubles with unemployment, grafting politicians and public enemies, wait until it tangles with the prize fight mob. They don't want to be regulated. They are doing very nicely and would resent any interference. They know how to bribe and phenagle, and they are no strangers to gun-play. The United States is simply spoiling for a scandal if it attempts to regulate professional boxing.

Something New About Which to Prattle

For a dozen years now, the N. B. A., a cooperative union of State boxing commissions, has been attempting to regulate the prize fight industry and has reiterated that it is an authoritative controlling body. The N. B. A. has pointed to its affiliation with 40 States, but at best its regulation of boxing apparently was only a pretense. This week the N. B. A. virtually gave up the ghost in indorsing the program of Congressman Kennedy whose first point is:

"The inability of an organization such as the N. B. A., due to the fact that some States are not members, to bring about an immediate return match when decisions are obviously in error."

Mr. Kennedy cites under subhead "C" that one of the evils of boxing at this time is "The practice of champions holding out for exorbitant guarantees when their records indicate their drawing power is not worth the financial demands advanced."

Now what? Is the United States Government going to turn matchmaker, and tell Joe Louis, perhaps, just how much he may ask and receive for defending his title? Uncle Sam may not have any more urgent matters in his lap at this time, but we were thinking he has.

If Mr. Kennedy's bill becomes law, it will be something for Presidential candidates to think about. They can prattle on about their platform planks, about foreign policy, their stand on the Supreme Court, farm relief, national defense, unemployment, and a balanced budget, but no Presidential candidate would be squarely before the Nation until he declared how he stood on a return battle between Ambers and Armstrong.

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

New York, Dec. 13.—Every American who ever saw Georgia Coleman knife down through the air and hit that water with only a faint, gurgling splash must have felt a pang over that story out of Los Angeles. The reports from the hospital are that this sunny girl, as nice a kid as you could ever know, is dying of a liver ailment which only an expensive operation can cure.

CONSIDINE

We can't let a gal like that go, without at least helping her take a punch at the thing that is killing her.

Some other people must feel the same way, because when we opened our mail today there was a check for a buck in it, from Cliff Evans, of the Brooklyn Eagle, and two crumpled dollar bills from an anonymous kid whose letter is worth printing. He had read a little item in the New York Daily Mirror, stating that the once-beautiful Olympic diving girl, who stood up and licked infantile paralysis, is now down to 80 pounds—45 pounds underweight—and that she is broke.

A Different Sort of Benefit Letter

"Dear Bob," the kid writes. "I imagine you fellows receive no end of letters from parasites and cranks, trying in some way to extract a few undeserved dollars which, strangely enough to them, you had to work for. But this isn't one of those letters. And if you can give it a little time and attention you'd make a swell girl very happy.

"People run benefits for different causes, many of which a lot of us don't approve. We give to this and that, at home and across the sea, but the people who like sports couldn't think of anything much better than helping Georgia Coleman. She sure did thrill us, when she was winning all those medals.

"I'm 22 years old, and I make 17 bucks a week as an office boy. But I won two bucks on the Packers last Sunday and I'm sending it to you to send on to Georgia Coleman. Her operation seems to be very urgently needed. Will you see that she gets the dough?"

I certainly will.

And if anybody else wants to invest a buck in a fund to cure Georgia Coleman you can send it to me at International News Service, 235 East Forty-fifth street, New York City, or to Georgia herself at the Hollywood Presbyterian Hospital, in California.

Series of Woes Hit Georgia

Georgia Coleman grew up and learned to swim and dive like a young seal. Her father was a carpenter. When she was quite young the family moved to Florida where she gained some early fame as an aquatic star and came to the attention of Fred Cady, the Los Angeles A. C.'s swimming coach. She won all the diving honors that were to be had, including the 1932 Olympic championship.

But shortly thereafter she suffered the first of a long series of breakdowns. The first, I believe, was some kind of thyroid trouble, then infantile paralysis, and now this thing that is threatening to make her cash in her chips.

In her time she must have made a quarter of a million dollars for various A. A. U. swimming groups. But as far as we know, none of them has stepped forward to give the girl a hand. The Olympic Committee alone must have spent thousands convincing people that Nellie Holm drank champagne.

What do you say, pal? One buck.

Fetzer's Teams at North Carolina Have .720 Average for 18 Years

When Athletic Director Started Coaching He Had One Assistant; Now There Are 35

By the Associated Press.

Chapel Hill, N. C., Dec. 13.—It's the losing coach the public generally associates with character-building talks, but here's a real top-notcher who claims that "winning isn't everything."

He's R. A. Fetzer, director of athletics since 1921 at the University of North Carolina, whose teams during those 18 years have batted .720 against strong competition and have rolled up one of the most impressive all-sports records in the country.

"Look at it this way," said the grand old man of Southern sports today. "We had only a handful of major unbeaten football teams in the country this fall, but I can't think of all those other several hundred college teams as failures.

"No, the real measure is how much each team and its individual members gave in ability, how well they mastered themselves, and how well they practiced real sportsmanship.

And sport and athletics, as fine as they are, still are a part in the broader and greater scheme of liberal education, which, in turn, is part of the bigger task of building character and manhood."

When Coach Bob came here in 1921, he and his brother Bill were the entire coaching staff. North Carolina had fewer than 200 boys out for five sports, a single field for all five, and no intramural or physical education courses.

Today the Tarheels have 35 coaches, separate stadiums for football, baseball and track, a new $550,000 gymnasium and pool, and one of the broadest physical education and athletic programs in the South. Eighty-two and one-half per cent of male undergraduates take part in some form of athletics.

This is a far cry from 1921, when basketball and tennis had no coaches, although Coach Bill Fetzer traveled with the basketballers. Coach Bob also took the court squad to New York on one occasion in the old days, but once the game had started, the now "dean of Southern track" sneaked off to watch great Paavo Nurmi run in another part of town.

It was a breach of duty for which Coach Bob still is kidded, but, as he explained: That team didn't need a coach to win, and besides there wasn't anything I could do for them after they took the floor."

Iowa Second, Trojans, Vols Trail in Poll

Most One-Sided Vote in History Gives Yankees Top Post for 4th Year

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 13.—The Cincinnati Reds should feel better now. The team which took four straight World Series games from them was the No. 1 team of all sports for 1939 in the opinion of a vast majority of experts in the ninth annual Associated Press poll.

In winning the honor for the fourth straight year the New York Yankees rolled up the huge total of 211½ points, based on 3 points for first place, 2 for second and 1 for third. It was the most one-sided margin in the history of the poll.

The overwhelming choice of the Yankees left second place the real bone of contention among the experts, with four football teams in a tight race for the honor. Iowa, with 37½ points, including 7½ first-place votes, finally won the runner-up position, with Southern California third with 34, Tennessee fourth with 33, and Cornell fifth with 26.

As a sport, football led the list in nominations, with nine college or professional teams named. Basketball, with the University of Oregon topping the list, drew six votes, baseball four and crew three.

The Yankees drew 61 of the 79 votes for undisputed first place, with one expert splitting his ballot between them and the Hawkeyes. Thirteen others placed the Yanks seconds, and only four voters failed to mention them.

The Voting:

Team and sport	Firsts	Points
N. Y. Yankees, baseball	61½	211½
U. of Iowa, football	7½	37½
S. Calif, football	2	34
Tennessee, football	3	33
Cornell, football	2	26
Texas A. & M., football	—	18
U. of Oregon, basketball	1	12
Cincinnati Reds, baseball	—	9
Boston Bruins, hockey	—	8
Southern Calif., track	—	7
Gr. Bay Packs., football	—	7
N. Y. Giants, football	—	7
Long Island U., b'sk'tball	—	6
Denver Nug'ts, b'sk'tball	—	5
Harvard, crew	—	5
Ohio State U., basketball	1	4
California U., crew	—	4

Three points each—Penn State, football (1 first); St. Louis Cardinals, baseball; Brooklyn Dodgers, baseball; United States Internationalists, polo.

Two points—Oklahoma A. & M., wrestling.

One point—Tulane, football; Washington U., crew; Marquette U., basketball; Frankfort, Ind., High School, basketball.

Two Redskins Named on UP All-Pro Eleven

By the United Press

New York, Dec. 13.—The best eleven football players in the fastest football league in the land were named today by the United Press on the 1939 all-professional team.

Green Bay, which won the National football league championship, had to take a back seat to the vanquished New York Giants, Eastern champions, and the Chicago Bears, runners-up to the Western title, on the all-star team. The Packers landed only one man—Don Hutson, the greatest pass catcher of the era—on the first team while the Bears and Giants each placed three. The Washington Redskins, runners-up for the Eastern crown, placed two men, and the Detroit Lions and Cleveland Rams one each.

Eight of the league's ten teams were represented on the second team, with Green Bay, New York and Brooklyn placing two men each. The Chicago Bears, Chicago Cardinals, Philadelphia, Washington and Cleveland each landed one man.

Orioles Defeat River Vale, 9-2; Tie Eagles for 2d

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Dec. 13.—The Baltimore Orioles walloped their way to a 9-to-2 foul-bestrewn victory tonight over River Vale, N. J., in an Eastern amateur hockey game.

The victory placed Baltimore in a 16-point tie for second place with Washington. New York, league leader, has 17.

River Vale held Baltimore with ease in the first ten minutes, but the Orioles wound up their attack in the next two periods and scored almost at will. The last period was interspersed with numerous fights.

Arlington Hall Wins College Jumping Title

By Anne Hagner

Fort Myer, Va., Dec. 13.—For the first time in two years, Arlington Hall College's team won the intercollegiate team jumping trophy last night in Fort Myer's opening indoor horse show.

The four young riders, Sally Seward on Red Rebel, Ellie Leh on King Rock, Jean Holden on Jolly Duke and Susan Rinehart on Apple Jack, scored the most popular victory of the evening as the entire student body of the nearby girls' school gave a long ovation of feminine shrieks.

Surprising Performance

Instructor Fritz Kleemann, chiefly responsible for the innovation of student jumping classes in Fort Myer shows four years ago, has been unable to win better than second place in the past two seasons of steady showing at the post, but last night's victory was enough to convince spectators that the Arlington girls will be high in the running when the championship ribbons for the series are given out in March.

Most surprising performance to local horsemen was put up by Susan Rinehart on Apple Jack, one of the best horses in the vicinity three years ago when he won every major jumping award on the circuit. However, the tremendous black gelding went sour and could not be convinced to jump a 2-foot fence for several years. Kleemann bought him more than a year ago and, after patient work, the 10-year-old horse is now performing like clockwork under Miss Rinehart's handling.

Only 5½ Faults

The Arlington team scored only 5½ faults to defeat their nearest rivals, Maryland University's contingent, by half a fault. The Maryland boys won the second award after a jump-off with Landon School's team, which ultimately took third place. Fourth went to Alice Deale's quartet of 13-year-olds, who had seven faults.

The working hunters event, which counts in the cumulative awards for the hunter championship in March, was won by a dark horse in the dope sheets, the Government's High Spade, ridden by Capt. Lawrence R. Dewey, a small black mare who performed smoothly over the winding course. The Army also placed second and third with Bumper and Scamp, respectively. Only civilian

Hockey Franchise In Buffalo Protested

New York, Dec. 13 (AP).—Connie Smythe, manager of the Toronto Maple Leafs, today protested to his fellow National Hockey League governors the recent granting of an International-American League franchise for Buffalo to a corporation headed by S. Edgar Danahy, who operated the old Buffalo team.

Smythe insisted the Toronto Club had first claim on the franchise under a decision by the National League last year which put Buffalo within the Toronto Hockey area for minor league purposes.

Four D. C. Pros Play In Miami Open Today

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., Dec. 13.—Either Henry Picard or Bryon Nelson will emerge from the $10,000 Miami Open as the "man-of-the-year" in professional golf, but there was no assurance today that either of the leaders would win 1939's final 72-hole tournament.

As a record field of 220 wound up practice for the start of play tomorrow, Picard and Nelson were installed as cofavorites with four others who are as hot as the proverbial firecracker.

Four Washington, D. C., professionals are in the starting field, including Bob Barnett winter pro at the Indian Creek Club here, and summer mentor at the Chevy Chase Club in the District. He is one of the first off the tee, playing at 8:54 with Earl Christianson, Miami, and Bill Henlein, Indianapolis.

Cliff Spencer, the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. champion who is making his first winter tour, is paired with Charles Schneider, Wilmington, and Walter Work, of West Palm Beach, at 11:48. Spencer is from the Beaver Dam Club.

Leo Walper, the two time M. A. P. G. A. champ, recently recovered from a pair of broken thumbs, will

2 G. U. Cage Teams to Face Eagles Tonight

Two teams will be alternated by Coach Elmer Ripley tonight when his Georgetown University basketball club meets American University's Eagles in the first 1939-40 all-District collegiate basketball feature at American University's gymnasium, 8:15 o'clock.

In a preliminary scheduled for 7 o'clock American University's Jayvees are to oppose Georgetown's freshmen.

Best Team in Years

The Eagles, defeated by powerful Bucknell in their debut last Tuesday night, nevertheless are boasting their finest representation in years and are picked to possibly upset the Hoyas. Last season a supposedly inferior Eagle combination desperately extended a favored Georgetown team most of the way.

Ripley said combination No. 1, probably his starting team, will be

Jack Hagerty Makes It Official for Three More Years

Assistants Named With Hoya Coach

Maurice Dubofsky, George Murtagh Also Signed for Same Term at G. U.

By Jack Munhall.

In testimony to his leadership in guiding Georgetown University elevens to two successive undefeated seasons, Jack Hagerty yesterday was tendered a vote of complete confidence in form of a new three-year contract as head football coach.

With him were signed Line Coach Maurice (Mush) Dubofsky, and End Coach George Murtagh, for a similar period of time. This is believed to be the first time a local college ever has simultaneously signed its entire coaching staff for more than a single season.

Terms of the new contracts were not divulged, but H. Gabriel Murphy, graduate manager of athletics, said all called for "substantial" increases.

The signing of Hagerty, himself one of the greatest quarterbacks in Hilltop history, sets at rest rumors of the past few weeks which placed him first with Syracuse University and then with the Brooklyn Dodgers.

First Unbeaten Season

Hagerty, Dubofsky and Murtagh, "The Three Musketeers," are credited with having directed Georgetown to its first unbeaten, untied season in history. That record was accomplished last year. This season Georgetown again was undefeated, but tied, 13-13, by Syracuse.

Hagerty next year will be starting his eighth season as head coach. He assumed the grid reins for the Hilltop in the middle of the 1932 campaign, succeeding Tommy Mills. With him was appointed "Mush" Dubofsky, who had been a great guard for Georgetown. "The Three Musketeers" were completed the following year, in 1933, when Murtagh, another Georgetown man and a star with the New York Giants professional eleven, was added to the staff.

Hagerty and Murtagh had been teammates with the Giants. Hagerty played at quarterback and Murtagh at center.

On the Upgrade Now

Football was at low ebb at Georgetown when this trio started to pull together. Athletic budgets had been cut to a minimum. Reemphasis was on in earnest. Thus Hagerty & Co. achieved but scant success and at times were bitterly and unjustly criticized for their failure to immediately turn out winning teams.

Finally, in 1937, the rebuilding process, which started from the ground up, began to show results and Georgetown began the hard uphill climb to the top spot it once enjoyed among the country's football powers.

Now on the heels of two straight undefeated seasons and 17 victories and 18 games, Georgetown definitely is a feared and respected grid name. And under the coaching of men like Hagerty, Dufosky and Murtagh, and with material such as was on the 1939 frosh squad, Georgetown promises to continue its splendid rise.

G. W. Quint Plays Host to Missourians

George Washington University's basketball team, kingpin of District clubs for the past several years, opens its season tonight with Culver-Sstockton College, of Canton, Mo. The game is scheduled at Tech High gym and will start at 8:30.

Culver-Stockton has a strong team in its class and may harass the inexperienced Colonials a bit, since this is their first game, and Culver has played four. Coach Bill Reinhart, starting his fifth basketball season at George Washington, has a green but talented squad and will take several games for the Colonials to find themselves.

Pep Guaranteed

The Colonials also will turn out their new cheering squad, supervised by the Rousers Club, and they guarantee plenty of pep. At the half, a short program of student talent will be presented.

The Buff line-up will be topped by two familiar figures, George Garbe, and Reds Auerbach, both seniors, who have played important roles in the past two Colonial fives. They will set the pace for three newcomers in the starting line-up, Joe Comer, a Roosevelt High product; Lud Urick, of football fame, and Matt Zunic, a talented sophomore of 6 feet 3 inches, who has shown great promise.

Garber Best Prospect

Garber is a brilliant player and before the season closes he should take his place with the Colonial stars of recent years. He and Zunic are counted on to handle the bulk of the scoring, although Auerbach frequently finds time from his confining defensive duties to bombard the basket.

Comer has shown marked improvement since practice started and Reinhart feels he has come into his own. Joe stands about 6-1 now and he is becoming more consistent daily in his shooting and passing.

Lou Salica Fights On Coast Tonight

San Francisco, Dec. 13 (AP).—Lou Salica, of Brooklyn and Tony Olivera, of San Francisco, meet here tomorrow night in a 10-round fight, the winner of which the California Athletic Commission had agreed to recognize as world's bantamweight champion.

Possibly to appease the National Boxing Association, which controls boxing in 46 States and recognizes Georgie Pace, of Cleveland, as champion in every one of them, the commission stipulated the winner must take on Pace for the undisputed title.

Eagles Face Golfers, Gulls Before Crucial Rover Game

Play for Post Needy Fund Tuesday

Meet River Vale Here Tomorrow, Invade Atlantic City Next Day in 'Prelims'

The Washington Eagles, having won four straight matches in one of the hottest streaks of the Eastern League season, face three tests in five days, starting tomorrow night at Riverside.

Two points ahead of the third place Baltimore Orioles and three points behind the league leading New York Rovers, the second place Eagles meet the cellar dwelling River Vale Golfers here at 8:30 tomorrow night. Saturday they invade Atlantic City to play the Sea Gulls. Then on Tuesday night Washington returns home for the most important game of its season to date—a battle with the Rovers.

This match, which might be directly for the league lead, is to be a benefit for The Post Needy Family Fund and one of the largest crowds of the season is expected and hoped for to help along a worthwhile cause.

The suddenness with which the Eagles started to click after floundering around in the lower half of the standings for a couple weeks is surprising to many, but not to Coach Red Mackenzie.

Saw Reversal Coming

The popular young Washington mentor, whose astute knowledge of ice hockey and ability to teach it is mainly responsible for the Eagles' success, has been predicting a reversal of form.

The addition of Len Burrage, veteran defenseman and one of the smartest players in amateur hockey, provided the spark and balance the young Eagles' squad needed.

Another contributing factor to their winning streak is the forsight of Coach Mackenzie, who has made two important changes in lineup, both of which proved of great advantage. He shifted Leslie Ramsey from wing to center and Paul Courtreau from center to wing. Each player immediately showed improvement and lately there hasn't been a more potent pair of Eagles than the little blond Ramsay and the stocky dark Courtreau.

Eagles Rated Even

Courtreau scored two goals to pace his team's powerful attack which buried Baltimore, 8-2, Tuesday night. Ramsay, one of the squad's fastest skaters and cleverest poke checkers, is completely at home in the roving assignment of center. He worries the opposing wings relentless sly and often steals the puck near the enemy nets and sets up scores for his teammates.

Playing as they have for the last ten days or so, the Eagles must be given at least an even chance to dethrone the champion Rovers. If they do so, Washington will arise to acclaim another sports representative which won a title its first year in the District. The Redskins accomplished that rare feat in 1936, winning first the Eastern Division crown and then the world's professional championship.

Baugh to Greet C. U. Players

Sammy Baugh, Redskin star, will be in the greeting party at Fort Worth, Tex., when Catholic University stops off en route for its Sun Bowl game with Arizona State Teachers at El Paso on New Year's Day.

Baugh has more than a passing (no pun intended) interest in the Cardinals because he spent several afternoons tutoring the C. U. tossers earlier in the season. One of Sammy's prize pupils was Pete Sachon, little Cardinal quarterback, who injected some of his master's magic in throwing six touchdown passes during the season.

As long as Baugh will be in Fort Worth, Coach Dutch Bergman and Wayne Millner, Sammy's pro teammate who coaches the C. U. ends, will invite the Texan to go on with the team to El Paso.

Itinerary Changing

While the Cardinals were kept indoors by the heavy rain, Bergman mapped out the itinerary which is undergoing daily changes because of all the invitations received from the hospitable Southwesterners.

Dutch announced the squad's first stop would be St. Louis, where C. E. Muellerleile, Billikin coach, will be host to the Cardinals. The Washintonians will work out at Walsh Stadium and, after a 4-hour stopoff, proceed to Fort Worth. In the latter city, the Redbirds will be guests of the local chamber of commerce. Another host was added to the list when it was announced that the Fort Worth Knights of Columbus will transport the Cards to and from the T. C. U. Stadium, where the squad will drill, and also entertain the boys at a luncheon.

Still another luncheon is planned in El Paso by the K. of C. there. This should be exciting for the boys since this luncheon will be held across the border at Juarez Mexico. Then the boys will take time out from the dinner table long enough to play a little football after which they will be entertained by the Sun carnival committee the day after the game.

A.B.C.'S OF HOCKEY—XII

The Late 'Babe' Siebert Ranked With Hockey's Colorful Stars

Attempted to Play With a Fractured Skull; Was a Member of the Maroons Big "S" Line

This is the twelfth in a series on ice hockey by Redvers (Red) Mackenzie, coach of the Washington Eagles and former Canadian newspaper sports writer. Other articles will follow from time to time.

By "Red" Mackenzie.

When the cold water of Lake Huron closed over the body of Albert (Babe) Seibert on an August day last summer, a great athlete and a fine man was lost to hockey. The Babe came from Zurich, a small town in Ontario, and played senior hockey for the Niagara Falls team. Bought by the Maroons in 1926 he went to left wing with Stewart and Smith to make up the Big "S" line and the roughest, toughest trio of the ice lanes.

One hundred and ninety pounds of brawn and muscle, Seibert was a terrific skater and his whistling shots rang up plenty of goals. He was a consistent and dogged back checker, probably the best in the league, and the punishment he meted out was terrific. He used to say, "I don't hit 'em, just skate into 'em."

Mackenzie

Not a brilliant thinker or nimble ice strategist, the powerful Babe never led the league in scoring, but he was a force to be reckoned with and there was much consternation among the Maroon fans when he was sold to the Rangers. He never fitted into the Ranger system of play and was shunted off to Boston and that was the greatest "break" that Seibert could have received.

Best In the League

The astute Art Ross converted the broad-shouldered giant into a defense man and the following season was selected with Eddie Shore as the all-star guardsmen in the league. It was certainly one of the greatest comebacks in the history of any sport as Seibert was pretty far down in the ruck when he went to Boston. He was sold back to Canadiens, for what reason I was never able to fathom, though the Bruins managed to develop another couple of defense men who soon took the Babe's place. With the Flying Frenchmen he again racked up all-star honors for himself and during the past summer was appointed playing coach of the French club.

A few incidents in the playing life of this stalwart might bear repeating here. There was the sad ending to Jocko Anderson, who attempted to block a headlong rush by Seibert down the ice. Jocko put out one leg to try and trip the Dutchman, but instead his own leg was fractured in several places and he never played again. Then there was the night during a torrid game with the Ottawa Senators when Babe was carrying the puck around his own net preparatory to rushing up the ice. He leaned too far to one side and struck the iron goal post with his head, zoomed through the air for at least 30 feet and when he arose he was bleeding from a gaping wound. He picked up his stick and one glove and had to be forced off the ice to the dressing room where the club doctor stopped the flow. Leaving Seibert on a table for a few minutes to get something from the medicine cupboard he returned to the larger room to find his patient gone. Rushing out the door the medico caught up to him in the passageway leading to the rink. He had his glove and stick and was prepared for further action. He was not easily dissuaded but finally gave in and had to spend a week in the hospital with a fractured skull and was the first hockey player to play the game with a helmet when he was released.

His Wrist was "Sore"

I've mentioned previously that I was close to the Maroon Club and so it was that I was in their dressing room following a practice session about a month after the season opened in a certain year. I had noticed that in every game, Seibert's usually blistering shots had dropped down to puny efforts that rarely even left the ice. I wondered about that because he seemed to be bearing down just as hard as formerly. In a quiet corner of the room I asked Babe about it. Said I, "What's the matter with your shot. My grandmother could stop it without oatting an eye. Have you got a sore hand or something?" He said, "My wrist is sore sometimes and I don't seem to have any strength in it." I left him and quietly asked the doctor if he would mind looking at Babe some time. He did, found a broken bone in the wrist and finally two cracked ribs which the Babe had not bothered mentioning.

While swimming not 50 yards from shore in the cold water of Huron, he chased after a toy belonging to his little daughter and suddenly sank from view and his body was not recovered for several days. His wife, a cripple since the birth of their second child, was left without a husband or provider because most of his hockey earnings had been spent on her care and comfort. Hockey, always generous to its deserving sons, planned a gigantic benefit game between stars from each club who were pitted against the team that Seibert would have coached. Thirty thousand dollars or very close to it will be given to Bernie Seibert to educate and care for the children and thus hockey has rewarded one of its greatest thrill makers. He was a tremendous competitor, a fine father and a credit to sport. As a friend, I will miss his booming voice and swaggering stride.

R.-M., Terps Clash Tonight

Ashland, Va., Dec. 13.—The Randolph-Macon college basketball team will meet Maryland tomorrow night at College Park in the first game of a three day trip that finds them playing Blue Ridge College, at New Windsor, Md. Friday night and American University in Washington on Saturday night.

The Yellow Jackets from Ashland lost their first game to a sharpshooting William and Mary five last Saturday night. The Jackets stayed on even terms until the last few minutes when the Indians found the range. While not figuring to defeat Maryland, they have high hopes of making it a real contest. The Randolph-Macon squad is short on height but makes up for this deficiency by aggressiveness and speed. They have only one man on the squad over six foot mark.

They will carry ten men on the trip and this group includes six letter men, namely Capt. Everett Welch, George Sawyer, Bill Phelps, Bob Golubic, Howard Luce, and Billy Fox. The remaining four members of the squad are Ed Derowski, Tom Leggett, Harold Smith, and Hugh Stephens.

Heurich Five Defeats Troy In League Tilt

Brewers Win, 23-21; Dubilier, Boardman In 2 Fist Fights

Special Dispatch to The Post

Troy, N. Y., Dec. 13.—The Heurich Brewers, of Washington, D. C., won their fourth start in their last five games here tonight when Moe Dubilier's field goal in the last minute of play nosed out the Troy Haymakers in an American Basketball League game here, 23 to 21.

The game was enlivened by 1 fist fights involving Dubilier, ne acquired Washington guard, a Si Boardman, veteran Troy guard. These players, formerly teammates with Troy, had to be separated by players of both teams on both occasions.

Dick Lee, Washington forward, retired from the game with an injured knee in the late stages of the contest. Tonight's victory sent the Brewers nito undisputed possession of third place.

Brewers Seeking To Beat Troy Here

The biggest upset of the current American League basketball season will be the goal of the Heurich Brewers tonight when they entertain the Philadelphia Sphas at Heurich gym.

On nine successive occasions since the Brewers joined the league last year, the Sphas have emerged victorious from clashes between the two clubs. In addition, the colorful Quaker City five, headed by Eddie Gottlieb, has a new star on its roster in Phil Rabin, last year a standout with the Jersey Reds.

comprised of George Pajak and Dick Dieckelman, forwards; Jim Giebel, center, and Irving Rizzi and Capt. Johnny Schmitt, guards.

The second combination, on a par with the first, will be comprised of Al Matuza and Francis Daily, forwards; Al Lujack, center, and Russ Miller and Buddy O'Grady, guards.

The Hoyas were defeated in their seasonal debut by the University of Baltimore recently, but came back strong to score handily over Western Maryland last week.

American U. tonight will center its offense around Carl Byham, 6-foot-5-inch sophomore, who scored six field goals against Bucknell last Tuesday night. Byham, though still in the process of development, is one of the best-looking college centers in this vicinity.

Washington-Lee Cagers Beat Falmouth, 43-26, in Opener

Jim Mahoney Sparks Victors' Attack With 10 Points; Alexander, McNabb Also Star

Washington-Lee High, with nine players chipping in toward the final score, launched its season last night on the home floor with a 43-26 shellacking of Falmouth High. More than 200 fans were on hand for the contest.

Jim Mahoney, forward, sparked the victors with 10 points, and Shorty Alexander and George McNabb ran him a close second and third with 8 and 7. Best point-maker for the losers was Gray, who managed for 6.

The four points Falmouth registered in the first quarter proved to be its total for the half. The Arlington five led, 12-4, at the first period and 18-4 at the half. A torrent of baskets came Washington-Lee's way in the third period to give it a 35-13 edge and from there in it was easy. In all 12 men were used by the winners.

Wilson Upsets Baltimore City College

Its prospective interhigh opponents were given something serious to think about yesterday afternoon when Woodrow Wilson High, with the third basketball team in its existence, toyed with Baltimore City College to win as it pleased, 37-21. The clash at Wilson gym furnished the host club its second victory in as many days, the Presidents having smashed American U. jayvees 41-20, Tuesday night.

Bart Fugler, lightning-like forward, turned in the best scoring performance of the game, 13 points, 5 of them on foul goals. His running mate, Bentley, also had 5 foul points to his credit as well as a field goal. "Moke" MacDonald, star of two years ago, was second high with 8 points.

The fast exhibition was featured by the 22 penalty shots allowed Wilson at the Baltimoreans' expense, 15 of which the Presidents made good. Guard Klein, however, was the only City College player ousted via the four-foul rule.

The defensive strength of Coach Tony Kupka's club was best displayed in the first quarter. Baltimore C. C. got exactly no points out of the initial tangle, while Wilson managed for 14. It was turnabout to a certain extent in the second period, Wilson getting but two points while the opposition rang up seven to trail, 16-7, at halftime. The visitors' most productive period was the last, when eight points were scored.

Stiesel and Patz, forward and guard, respectively, paced the attack of the surprisingly inadequate Baltimore five. The Oriole City school annually turns out one of the best scholastic teams in this section.

New Haven Beats Pittsburgh, 4-2, For 1st Place Tie

Pittsburgh, Dec. 13 (AP).—New Haven's high-flying Eagles drove into a tie with Providence for first place in the Eastern division of the International - American Hockey League tonight by beating Pittsburgh's Hornets, 4 to 2, for their fifth straight triumph.

The Hornets even used their road uniforms in an effort to shake a jinx which has prevented their winning a home game since November 11, while they have lost five.

Goals by McCully, Wilson and Mondou in the third period clinched the game for the visitors. Aurie and Tapin had scored for Pittsburgh earlier and Summerhill had made one for the Eagles.

National League Sets Fines for 'Hopping Boards'

New York, Dec. 13 (AP).—The board of governors of the National Hockey League today adopted a rule intended to stop players, coaches and manager from "hopping the boards to mix in any arguments on the ire—either verbal or fistic."

The rule set an automatic fine of $25 for players' infractions of the rule, $50 for coaches' and $100 for managers.

Expected fireworks concerning the incident involving James Norris, sr., owner of the Detroit Red Wings and Referee Zill Stewart failed to materialize. Norris was reported to have objected to several of Stewart's decisions in a game at Chicago and to have threatened to have the referee removed from the league's roster of officials.

However, Norris, himself a governor, was at the meeting and failed to make any complaint against Stewart.

Central Cagers Rally in Last Period, Beat Hyattsville, 29-24

Cullen High Scorer With 14 Points

Rangy Center Almost Upsets Favored Quint Second Team Starts For Mt. Pleasanters

In its first regularly scheduled game this season, Central High's cage team was forced to rally strongly yesterday to defeat a fighting Hyattsville High five, 29-24, at the Mount Pleasant gym.

Trailing into the third quarter, 14-8, and into the final quarter, 24-22, the Mount Pleasanters turned on the steam in the final period to win fairly handily. Hyattsville was unable to score a solitary point in the final stanza as Moe Bisker tied the count with a clever bank shot, and Harry Martin, Lou Apostolakas and Charley Kligman rang up the winning points.

Experimenting with a starting team of second-stringers almost cost Coach "Woody" Woodward the decision in his first game at the head of Central's basketball forces. Bob Cullen, Hyattsville's stringy center, ran circles around the reserves and even continued his hot pace when the first team rushed to the rescue in the second quarter. Cullen won high scoring honors of the game with 14 points.

Central gradually drew abreast as the third period progressed. Despite five points in succession by young Johnny Freyder, and Cullen's four, the Blue was but two points behind as the session ended due to the consistent point-making of Kligman, Martin and Apostolakas. That trio eventually won scoring honors for the winners with nine, seven and six points respectively.

Va.; 11, Detroit at Portsmouth, Ohio; 12, Detroit at Dayton, Ohio; 13, Detroit at Cincinnati; 14, Detroit at Cincinnati.

Londos-Sonnenberg 'Title' Bout Expected to Draw Full House

Two of Biggest Names in Wrestling To Meet at Arena

On the theory that it's better late than never, two of wrestling's oldest "big names" still in circulation, Jim Londos and Gus Sonnenberg, will clash tonight at Turner's Arena in a headline match that calls up memories of those "easy come-easy go" days of the 1920's, and which is billed as a battle for the "world's championship."

If Promoter Joe Turner could have signed the two for a match during the days when the country was on the road back to normalcy," he would have been made" financially.

Even now, the Fourteenth and W street areana will be sold out for the first time in years, but the sellout" is something like 2,200 fans—whereas, back in the '20's, when Jim and Gus were rolling up their fortune in wrestling, the match would have packed them in at Griffith Stadium.

Turner is advertising the show as a title match on the grounds that Londos, the original Gorgeous Greek,' is the current champion, and Sonnenberg the contender for the "crown."

It will be Londos' famed "airplane spin," which somehow has survived charges that its operation requires cooperation of the opponent, against the flying tackle tactics of Sonnenberg, who returned from the World War to become an all-American football player at Dartmouth College.

JIM LONDOS

The preliminaries, starting at 8:30 p. m., bring out all the usual faces—Bibber McCoy against Rudy Dusek, another old-timer; Jack Hader versus Abe Yourist, Bob Wagner and Rudy Strongberg, and Chief White Feather versus a newcomer, Wendy Black, who claims Georgia Tech as his origin.

Ice Hockey Heads Are Luncheon Guests

Owner Severine G. Loeffler and Manager-Coach Redvers ("Red") Mackenzie, of the Washington Eagles, will be guests of honor today at a luncheon to be tendered in their honor by the Junior Chamber of Commerce at the Hotel Annapolis at 12:30 o'clock.

Mackenzie will address Chamber members

Royal Business, With Obert Up, Wins Charles Town Feature

Veteran Rides Three Victors On Day's Card

Bans Boo Obert When Mount Is Left At Post in 7th Race; 6,000 Fans on Hand

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 13.—Jockey Willie Obert, who admits riding his first winner in 1906, heard both applause and booes during a busy day in the saddle here. Among the Laurel veteran's three winners for the day was Royal Business, which took down the feature event of the midweek program. Obert, leading rider at the meeting here, gave Royal Business one last push which was enough for the filly to defeat Charming Herod by a nose. The race was the Retreat Purse. Third money to Wage Earner.

But in the seventh and last race, Obert and his mount, Air Eddy, were left at the post. The gelding trailed the field far back all the way.

Obert's victory aboard Royal Business was a popular one. The crowd of 6,000 played and replayed the filly and she finally paid a $3.80 mutuel. So close was the finish that the majority of fans near the line believed that Charming Herod had won.

Frank Brooke and Ebony Boy were in front as a team as the field began the journey of a mile and a sixteenth. Royal Business at this stage was being steadied along close up. Charming Herod was fifth. Along the backstretch, Obert clucked to Royal Business and the filly forged to the front. However, she could not shake off Frank Brooke and Wage Earner, the latter having moved to contention on the outside.

Going into the stretch turn, Royal Business swung out, carrying Wage Earner with her. Frank Brooke quit but a new threat loomed in Charming Herod, who cut the rail. Approaching the finish line, Charming Herod got a head in front of his rival and appeared headed for victory. It was at this point that Royal Business gave a lunge. The picture showed Royal Business the winner.

Obert began the program with a $16.40 victory aboard Ethel's Choice. He drove this mare home ahead of Habit and Square Play. Obert was astride a winner in the third race when he completed a $49.80 payoff in the daily double with George Perry's Little Mowlee.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ETHEL'S CHOICE, $16.40, $9.20, $6.00; HABIT, $18.40, $9.20; SQUARE PLAY, $6.40.

ETHEL'S CHOICE, off in first flight, came through on inside to take command and drew out gradually in stretch run. HABIT saved ground from beginning and closed with good energy. SQUARE PLAY, off alertly, dropped back and came with rush at close. TODY WEST raced forwardly on outside and weakened. ADHELMAR set and forced early pace and stopped. HASTY HANNA had some early foot.

WEATHER, DRIZZLING. TRACK, SLOPPY.

SECOND RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:06½. Off 2:07½. Winner, Mrs. I. K. Two-dollar mutuels paid—REIGH TETRARCH, $13.40, $7.80, $4.00; LOCHALINE, $20.80, $10.20; STAND BY, $3.20.

REIGH TETRARCH saved ground while keen forward factor in early racing, came through on rail to take command over STAND BY and lasted under drive. LOCHALINE raced on own courage for 3 furlongs, improved position gradually to stretch and closed boldly. STAND BY shook off ANN STAR to take command, could not draw out and weakened when caught. GENGIS KHAN II closed a gap. ANN STAR quit. STRAPOL had early speed while racing wide and weakened.

THIRD RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $400. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:34. Off 2:36. Winner, George Perry's b. g. (2), by Mowlee—Honesty. Trained by R. Pending. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:30.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LITTLE MOWLEE, $6.60, $4.00, $3.40; WHOOSH, $4.40, $3.00; CAFFEINE, $3.80.

LITTLE MOWLEE, first away, shook off NOMINAL to draw into good lead and held away thereafter under drive. WHOOSH lacked early speed, came to contention willingly and closed with good energy. CAFFEINE, forced wide going to first turn, came around horses and closed full of run on outside. NOMINAL pressed early pace and weakened. CONNOMISTA went well placed to stretch and weakened.

Daily Double, REIGH TETRARCH and LITTLE MOWLEE, Paid $49.80.

FOURTH RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $500; allowances. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:58½. Off 3:00. Winner, Mrs. E. A. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GAY AMAZON, $4.00, $2.80, $2.40; ROYAL TEDDY, $3.40, $3.00; CLAPAIR, $3.60.

GAY AMAZON, sent to front at once, opened a long lead and weakened suddenly approaching end. ROYAL TEDDY, steadied during early stages, gained gradually to midstretch and closed with bold rush to be going fastest at close. CLAPAIR made up ground, but was held safe. CHANCE QUEEN went evenly. MARGIE WRACK had early speed and stopped. INTELLIGENTSIA had good speed to stretch and stopped. PROTEUS showed early speed.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800. The Retreat. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:28½. Off 3:30. Winner, O. S. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROYAL BUSINESS, $3.80, $3.00, $2.60; CHARMING HEROD, $5.00, $3.20; WAGE EARNER (field), $3.80.

ROYAL BUSINESS, close up from start, took command on backstretch, swung wide entering stretch, carrying WAGE EARNER out and came again after losing command to CHARMING HEROD. ROYAL BUSINESS did not appear to have gotten up. CHARMING HEROD was hard ridden to keep within striking distance, came through on rail entering stretch to get to front and appeared to have lasted. WAGE EARNER moved up boldly on outside at far turn and came willingly after being carried out by winner. FRANK BROOKE set pace accompanied by EBONY BOY and weakened in final eighth. EBONY BOY stopped after pressing pace. TWILIGHT STAR had early speed.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SONGSTOP (dead heat), $4.40, $4.80, $3.00; HOWARD (dead heat), $2.80, $2.80, $2.40; BRIGHT CHANCE, $2.60.

SONGSTOP, first away, shook off LAST SCAMP going to backstretch, withstood repeated challenges of HOWARD and just failed to last. HOWARD, slow to begin, moved up on outside of pacemaker and came gamely at close. BRIGHT CHANCE gained gradually, but was held safe. WHICH BLOND dropped far out of it early and closed with good energy. LAST SCAMP had good speed to press pace and weakened.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:31½. Off 4:32½. Winner, A. S. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ASTERISK, $75.80, $31.60, $14.60; ANN MOWLEE, $7.80, $4.60; GEODESIAN, $4.00.

ASTERISK came over on ANN MOWLEE leaving gate, was hard ridden throughout, came to outside of ANN MOWLEE and held on willingly. ANN MOWLEE, shut off by winner soon after break, came to outside to take command, opened good lead, but weakened in closing test. GEODESIAN rallied mildly. BERRY PATCH closed with good energy. KISSIN KID had good early speed and stopped.

At The Post

Selections at Charles Town:

Dear Al:

Only a few days left in which to send your dime for the Christmas fund I'm raising for little Dick Machado whose daddy was killed last summer at Marlboro. Get 'em in, friends. Racing here strikes a new low today when the Art Brown WOL Purse is the name of the feature race. I wouldn't be surprised if the horses don't run away and hide before the event comes up. And to make matters worse, I understand the Browns will ride up in their old family car to see the action. Trainer Charlie Reilly reports that O. S. Jennings' good sprinter Blablah spread a hoof in Tuesday's race. Reilly has decided to pass up winter racing and will stable Royal Business, Blablah and Scarlet O at Pimlico until next spring. The first eight days racing here saw 50 different trainers saddle winners. Twenty-seven boys have ridden winners since the meeting opened, with Willie Obert clinging to the lead with nine victories. All signs point to a new record for filing entries being established here. No less than 2,878 were filed the first nine days, an average of 319 per day. Nominations for the $1,000 Waterford Handicap, Saturdays' getaway feature, close today with Race Secretary Fred Burton. Trainer Everett Brining reports that E. A. Nicodemus' Fernbrake broke down during the running of yesterday's race. Eddie Brennan, race secretary on all Maryland half-mile tracks, Gil Haus and Henry Carroll, patrol judges on the Old Line State's smaller ovals, all motored up from Baltimore for a day's outing. General Manager Harold Bester, of the Hagerstown (Md.) Fair Association, who is a daily visitor, states no horses will be allowed to winter at the track. Bill.

First race—Way Out has plenty of speed and is favored by the abbreviated sprint distance. I see no reason for mistakes. Lady Buck was a champion around here last summer and the light assignment makes her dangerous. Adriatic to take care of the others.

Second race—Circus Lights finished close up last out and would have won with better handling. There will be a lot of eyes pinned on this one today and I expect better things. Buddy Al demonstrated speed first out over the course and is a threat. Walli would be a threat if taken off the reserve list.

Third race—Lady's Favor breaks off the rail for this test and has the speed to be prominent going to the first turn. This hard hitting mare looks like the right one. Chilly Ebbie's chances are enhanced by the possibility of an off track. Trout Stream is ready for his best.

Fourth race—Notoriety downed good horses here in rather easy fashion and deserves the call in a field of the caliber of this one. Needs only the right ride. Evergrand won here and carries 118 pounds today. Might find the assignment a trifle too stiff. Man at Arms is as good as that last.

Fifth race—Sea Cadet overcame trouble to win at the first asking here and should improve enough to take care of this company. Palkin has plenty of speed and is a threat. Prince Turley showed a sound effort in that recent outing and will be prominent.

Sixth race—Easter Holiday had a purse tossed off by a bungling ride. Breaks off the rail and should make every post a winning one. Proud King is much better than generally rated and is a possible surprise. Yenoor's saddle slipped last out and may go well.

Seventh race—Scarlet O. is among the reserves for this event, but will be the winner if put into action. Duchess Del won at the meeting and is favored by the No. 1 post position. Gemwick should go well with these.

Eight race (substitute)—If this event is used, I'll take Highland Song, Kirk On, Fred's Warning.

Chatter Wrack Wins, Pays $86.80 at Orleans

Fair Grounds, Dec. 13 (AP).—Apprentice Arnold Sorsen stepped into the limelight this afternoon at the Fair Grounds, winning two of the afternoon's races and making one of his victories count for a lot. That was the successful ride he put up on L. C. Pike's Chatter Wrack to win the Bogalusa Claiming Handicap at a mile and 70 yards, Chatter Wrack paid $86.80 for $2.

Another Krauss Follows Family Bent

Bill Krauss, youthful member of Washington's "first" bowling family, Saturday will start on his own hook toward furthering the popularity of bowling, synonymous with the family name of Krauss in Washington, when he will take charge in the first all-male free bowling school at Chevy Chase Ice Palace. Krauss will devote his class work to proper delivery and form, meanwhile explaining "breaks" and how to hit them. Krauss joins Mrs. Lucille Young at the Ice Palace as bowling instructor.

A. A. U. Boxing Tourney Finals Feature 'Walking Encyclopedia'

Roy Dunn, 160-Pounder, Has Complete Fight Records at Beck and Call; Boxes Tomorrow

If it's a boxing question you're interested in ask Roy Dunn. No information bureau does the National Guard's 160-pounder operate, but within the folds of his fat scrapbook, bulging with newspaper clippings and faded pictures of virtually every fighter in the game is a wealth of information. It's really a miniture encyclopedia fistiana, and Dunn can answer any question you care to propound.

Dunn, a personable youngster, meets Charley Maimone for the District A. A. U. 160-pound championship tomorrow night at Turner's Arena, and on a basis of past performances he's the favorite. Not that Maimone isn't a good fighter, for Charley is acknowledged as one of the best at his weight—had to be to reach the finals, but Dunn shapes up as better.

The ring represents more than sport to Roy, for some day he hopes to earn his living fighting and he doesn't want to box for coffee and cakes but real sugar. He thinks he has the necessary equipment to make the grade, and a lot of veteran observers agree with him. He's tall, well proportioned, packs a knockout punch in the right hand, boxes well and most important of all, loves to fight.

Father Was Fighter

Roy's father was somewhat of a fighter before him, although it wasn't a business with him, merely a sporting sideline. But he must have been pretty good for he fought Kayo Christner when that worthy was being hailed as a heavyweight find, and mixed with a host of other good ones. He instructed the boy in the fundamentals of the manly art and brought him along.

But Dunn is a self-made man, literally speaking, for he left home at the tender age of 11 years to seek his way in the world, and has been on his own since. At the moment he hustles beer kegs on a delivery truck for a living, but until last year he was in the army, served a hitch at Fort Myer, where he won the post 160-pound championship, and was runner-up for the Third Corps Area title. Wrestling kegs helps keep him in condition, and has done much to improve his punch.

Rescued Drowning Boy

Roy is a blushing hero, too, for two summers ago he saved a youngster by the name of Richard Smith from drowning in the Potomac, although he prefers to forget the whole thing. All he did was "pull him out" as he was about to go down for the last time.

Dunn happened upon his ring career almost accidentally. Some friends heard him speak of his father and learned of his scrapbook, and tipped off Sergt. Joseph J. Kappel of Troop F, who coached the Fort Myer boxing team. The sergeant sized up Roy at a distance, decided he looked healthy enough and ordered him out for the team. Young Dunn did all right, although he admits losing seven of his 15 bouts.

Roy hails from Southwest Washington now, lives in Steve Mamakos' neighborhood, and thinks the Golden Greek is a pretty good fighter. Another Southwest boy, Lou Gevinson, hit him with the hardest punch he's ever felt in a workout, but even that didn't knock him down. He's never been off his feet in the ring, and he thinks it kind of late to be starting —in amateur ranks, anyway.

Five Matches for Terp Ring Team

Small Maryland Squad Has Only 3 Lettermen

Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown is a fitting blurb for Coach Harvey L. Miller's University of Maryland Southern Conference boxing championship squad, a look at its schedule for the winter indicated yesterday.

Five matches—one with last season's undefeated Catholic University squad in Washington January 27—are on the program before Miller takes his "neophyte" team to Columbia, S. C., for the Southern Conference tournament February 23-24.

Only three lettermen are returning this year—Newton Cox, 165-pound conference champion; Bob Bradley, 127-pounder, and Nathan Askin, 135-pounder—and each man stands alone in his class. Hard hit in the heavier divisions, Maryland's George Evering, unlimited division, stands out at present as the lone heavyweight, while Johnny Harn, in the 120-pound class, is in the same predicament.

In all, the Maryland squad of 14 men has reserves in only three weight divisions. Miller said that West Virginia University wanted to schedule a match with Maryland but because of a conflict in dates—the match would have to have been a midweek affair — it couldn't be scheduled.

The Terrapins' 1940 card:

Duke at College Park, January 13; Catholic University at Washington, January 27; Virginia at College Park, February 3; North Carolina at College Park, February 10; Western Maryland at College Park, February 17, and the annual Southern Conference tourney at Columbia, S. C., February 23-24.

L. Gulli Rolls 383 Set in D. C. League

'Sweeps Champ Paces Lucky Strike to Odd-Game Decision

Lorraine Gulli, eight-time champion of Sunday's Meyer Davis Sweepstakes, rounded into form for the ten-game event last night at the host alleys by leading the Ladies' District League bowlers with a powerful 383 set, including a 134 game.

Miss Gulli's total aided her Lucky Strike team in counting a 545 game and 1,602 set against Red Circle and taking the odd game, despite Helen Odea's 124-319. Miss Gulli's total also took the Star tourney lead.

The fast-climing Ice Palace quiutet took the odd one from the leading Rosslyn team in another league encounter, with Marie Spates showing the way with a 130 game and Lucille Young posting a 346 set. Evelyn Ellis, also with 130, and Lucy Rose, with a 361 set, were the big guns for Rosslyn. The winners had game and set of 577 and 1,637.

Arcade-Pontiac made the 2-to-1 decisions unanimouss in league action by scoring over Arcadia on the losers' alleys. Annetta Mathew, with a 137 game, and Mabelle Hering were in the limelight, the latter with a 376 set. Evelyn Windsor was best for the losers with 133-329. The winner's team game and set totals were 588 and 1,172.

Miss Gulli has completely dominated the Meyer Davis event through its 11 years, with only Marjorie Smith, Margaret Lynn, and last year, Georgia Hays breaking her string of victories.

The first block starts at 2:30 p. m. with the second five-game block at 8 p. m. The event, restricted to D. C. bowlers, making Ida Simmons ineligible, has a $3 entrance fee, with the alleys donated by Bill Wood, of the Lucky Strike plant. First prize will run around $50.

LUCKY STRIKE

Dave and Julie Singer put on their brother act in the D. G. S. League at Lucky Strike, with the former breaking his brother's season's high game record by two pins, posting a 171 count. Dave topped the set scores with 391, followed by Julie's 389. The leading Wardman Park team posted team high game and set totals of 398 and 1,748 in winning two out of three from Crosse and Blackwell.

Bera Low topped the Eastern Star ladies' rollers with a 120 game and 329 set, while her teammates on the Mizpah squad won all three from Lebanon. Bethany upset the dope by totaling 1,464 and winning three straight from the leading Washington Centennial.

Personnel monopolized the team game and set honors, with respective 492 and 1,395 totals, while Mary Balauger, of General Counsel No. 1, had high game of 113.

Frances Adams counted a big individual game of 141 for the M. I. N. team in the Lucky Strike League, while the best set was a 337 by Agnes Thaxton, of Strikerettes. The teams also figured in the top totals, Strikerettes with a 499 team game and M. I. N. a 1,442 set.

TEMPLE

A new season's record went into the books in the Temple Minor League at Temple Alleys, G. Hancock rolling a 390 set for Brosnahan Tinners. The Tinners led the set totals with 1,642, and won all three from Bright Star.

Tatum's 145 game was best of the night and his team, Eastern Pharmacy, used the total to record high team game of 595. The leading Horman Electric won three from New Deal, Benning's blanked Lord Baltimore Cigars, and other shutout victors included Camden Tavern and Kavakos Grill.

PETWORTH

Fred Seemiller was in the "400" class in the Petworth League at the upper Georgia Avenue Alleys, rolling 402, while Al Leonberger had the best game of 164. Soller's Plumbers came through with both team marks, a 613 game and a 1,785 set.

ICE PALACE

R. Moore topped individual scores and the Hot Shots topped teams. In the Engineers League Moore, with a 148 game and 372 set and the Hotshots with 573 and 1,633.

B. Williams' 163 was the best effort in the C. & P. Telephone League at Chevy Chase Ice Palace, with H. D. Sonneman's 391 set the best. Commercial's 1,790 team set broke the season's mark by 33 pins, while Construction had a 621 team game.

make his first tournament start since the injury, playing with Tommy Wright, National Open sectional qualifying round leader from Knoxville, and Joe Zarhardt, Flemington, N. J.

Lewis Worsham, half of the District pro-amateur championship team, made the trip to the tournament alone from his Burning Tree Club seeking a share of the big purse. The 22-year-old professional will play with Clyde Susina, jr., West Palm Beach, and Bud Williamson, of Fort Wayne, Ind.

The boys who like to wager a shekel or two on the outcome listed both Picard and Nelson at 8 to 1, with Harold (Jug) McSpaden, Ralph Guldahl, Dick Metz and Jimmy Thomson at the same figure.

Both the P. G. A. Harry Vardon Trophy, emblematic of professional supremacy, and the money-winning leadership are at stake in the tournament, with Picard now at the head of the class in each division.

Picard, the Professional Golfers Association chapion, is five points ahead of Nelson, the National Open king, with 459 to 454, in the Vardon competition. To beat out Picard Nelson must either win the tournament or finish several places ahead of his rival.

The money-winning schedule, however, is a four-cornered affair. Picard is at the top with $10,202, trailed by Ralph Guldahl at $9,377, Metz at $8,600 and Nelson at $8,386. Since the top prize in this tournament is $2,500, with $1,250 for the runner up and $1,000 for third, its easy to see that anything might happen among those four.

The pipe-smoking McSpaden, Miami Open winner with a 5 under par 275 last year, scorched the course with a practice 64 the other day. Thomson shot the next two best practice scores, a pair of 65s, and Metz carded a 66 on the par 70 layout.

Arlington Hall Wins Crown

to score was James W. Hechter on his Baltimore-owned Reliance.

Military mounts came up one-two-three again in the green jumpers event, for horses that have never won a ribbon in any show. First place went to Capt. Robert L. Taylor on Mount Carmel, with second going to Lieut. David Wagstaff on Rowdy and third to Capt. Charles McClelland on Friznell. Surprisingly enough, fourth was taken by 13-year-old Elizabeth Marsh on Chateaurock, who appeared earlier in the evening as a member of the Alice Deale student team.

INTERCOLLEGIATE TEAM JUMPING—Won by Arlington Hall College team No. 1, Sally Seward on Red Rebel, Ellie Leh on King Rock, Susan Rinehart on Apple Jack, and Jean Holden on Jolly Duke; second, University of Maryland team, Fred Hughes on Hi-Ho, Sam Pfefferkorn on Black Caddy, Paul Weimert on Ring Master, and Bill Stevens on Cody; third, Landon School team, Tom Mott, jr., on Brumanna, Jack Devereaux on Courageous Beth, Cary Jackson on Angel Gabriel, and Mercer Padekey on Headrock; fourth, Alice Deale Junior High School team, Marra Coffey on Chateaurock, Ann Hughes on Kristi, Elizabeth Marsh on Gold Vein, and Dean Rathbun, jr., on Chit-Chat.

Launderers Win Heurich Clash

A field goal by Schultz in the last 3 seconds of play last night enabled Q. and S. Laundermen to upset Regal Clothiers in a Heurich Amateur Basketball League game at Heurich gymnasium, 37 to 36.

Q. and S. substituted on short notice for Federal Bureau of Investigation, which was forced to postpone its game with Regal due to examinations.

In remaining games Marvin's Credit made an auspicious debut by turning back Bill Strickland's Capitolians, 46 to 28, while Delaware and Hudson outclassed United Clay Products, 50 to 36.

D.C. Appraisers Elect Blanz New President

C. E. Kefauver Is Vice President and T. W. Owen Secretary

Wilfred H. Blanz was selected by members of Washington Chapter, Society of Resident Appraisers, to be president of the organization for the coming year at the annual election held last night. Blanz, who is secretary of the $11,000,000 American Building Association, is also first vice president of the District of Columbia Building and Loan League.

At the same time Clarence E. Kefauver was elevated to the vice presidency and Thornton W. Owen was named secretary-treasurer. The new board of directors is composed of the officers and Adelbert W. Lee, Julian Scott, F. Willson Camp and Robert E. Buckley.

Principal speaker was Maurice R. Massie, jr., chief of the location section, Federal Housing Administration. Mr. Massie's topic was the "Structure and Growth of Residential Neighborhoods in American Cities" with particular emphasis on the development of the Nation's Capital.

Members honored Paul Hathaway of the Home Owners Loan Corporation and retiring president by voting him a life membership in the local chapter as well as a permanent place on the board of directors. It was due to Hathaway's efforts that Washington has a flourishing unit of the national society. Following the business session a buffet supper was served at the Raleigh Hotel.

Charges Grave, Court Declares, In Sperry Case

J. Cheever Cowdin and George N. Armsby Are Accused of Conspiracy

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 13.—After hearing testimony that two voting trustees of the Sperry Corporation had bought back for their own benefit through "dummies" securities sold by the corporation, Federal Judge Edward A. Conger today reserved decision on a motion for settlement of a $2,500,000 stockholders' damage suit for $30,000.

"I'm inclined to think that this case should go on," said Judge Conger. "Accusations of conspiracy against those two men are so grave that I am not willing at this time to approve a settlement of $30,000."

The voting trustees were J. Cheever Cowdin and George N. Armsby.

The damage action, begun in 1937 by Jules E. Piccard, a Sperry Corporation stockholder, names as defendants the Sperry Corporation, members of the former firm of Field, Glore & Co., stock brokers, and the Standard Capital Corporation.

It grew out of the sale in 1935 and 1936 of 82,000 class A and 328 common shares of stock of Curtiss-Wright Corporation owned by the Sperry Corporation. The sale of the securities was handled by Field, Glore & Co. and the Standard Capital Corporation.

In opposing the proposed settlement, attorneys for other stockholders said Cowdin and Armsby, as directors of the Standard Capital Corporation and former members of the executive committee of Curtiss-Wright Corporation, were in a position in 1935 to know the business prospects of Curtiss-Wright.

The aviation corporation's earnings increased from an accumulated deficit of $1,000,000 at the end of 1935 to a profit of $1,017,000 in 1936, $1,987,000 in 1937 and $3,500,000 in 1938.

Louisville Courier Gives Holiday Bonus

Louisville, Ky., Dec. 13 (AP).—Barry Bingham, publisher of the Louisville Courier-Journal and Times, announced today a bonus of 6 per cent of their annual salary for employes of the two papers and their affiliates, radio station WHAS and Standard gravure Corporation.

Approximately 1,000 persons benefited. Bingham, who said it was the largest bonus ever given by the company, did not make public the amount distributed.

Dollar Wheat Returns Again To Chicago Pit

Corn Higher and Rye, Soy Beans and Oats Reach Season's Tops

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Dec. 13.—Dollar wheat returned to the futures market of the Board of Trade today in the sharpest advance of grain prices since war broke out in Europe last September.

December delivery jumped to $1 at the outset, and then extended gains as much as 4¼ cents to $1.02¼. May and July contracts, the latter representing the new crop, advanced to $1 and 97⅞, respectively, both up 5 cents. It was the first time any wheat contract sold for a dollar since October, 1937.

All deliveries of wheat, rye and soy beans and December and May oats were swept into new highs for the season and longer as a broad buying movement developed.

Reports of intensified drought in the United States, especially in the hard winter wheat area, political developments in Europe and an increase of 7⅛ cents during the last two days in the price of wheat to exporters by the Argentine government touched off the buying wave. The advance in other commodities, cotton especially, contributed to the upturn.

Wheat closed 3⅞@4⅞ higher, December 1.02¼@1.02, May 99¾@99⅞; corn 1⅞@2½ up, December 55⅝@55½, May 57¼@57⅝; oats 1¼@1½ up; soy beans 4@4¾ up; rye 5⅞@6 higher; lard 37 to 40 cents a hundredweight higher.

Cotton Climbs $1.75 to $2.30 Per Bale Higher

New York, Dec. 13 (AP).—Demand for cotton futures continued in full swing today as markets at Alexandria, Bombay and Liverpool shot forward. Rising as much as $2.50 a bale at one time, the market plowed through heavy profit-taking and hedging sales to close 37 to 46 points higher and only a shade under the day's best prices.

America's No. 1 agricultural export sold at the highest price since July, 1937, but was still much cheaper in the United States than in foreign markets. This, brokers, said, was the key to today's fresh rise.

Cottonseed Oil

Cottonseed oil futures bounded 29 to 35 points today in the broadest trading since early September.

Heavy early demand was touched off by rumors the Government would buy a substantial amount of fats and oils for relief purposes. Later reports the Finnish government was looking for cottonseed oil cake touched off new demand.

Sales totaled 503 contracts: January, 7.02*; March, 7.19*; May, 7.29*; July, 7.39. *Bid.

Limited quantities of crude oil were reported available in Texas at 6 cents but no offerings were heard from the Southeast and valley.

The Market

Stock Rise Follows Commodity Strength
Trading Volume Passes Million Mark
Bonds Firm Except Foreign Dollar Issues

New York, Dec. 13.—Strength in commodities brought about a sympathetic rally in stocks today, the list advancing 0.67 point on the average in the most active trading since November 10. To the technical students of the market the rise was particularly encouraging, coming as it did so soon after a good rise about a week ago. The market has been in a hesitating phase, but it shows a willingness to rally whenever there is no unusual pressure from foreign investors and whenever any special development, such as today's strength in the commodities, furnishes an excuse for bidding up the junior securities.

The volume of 1,061,150 shares added to the renewed confidence of the bullish forces. All of the constructive elements in the Street realize that foreign selling can break out again as soon as the list gets far away from its present level, but if business continues to hold to its present high level, there will not be much consternation among those who are called upon to buy the shares which Europe wants to sell.

Commodities Jump

The ball in today's football game was carried by the commodities. Cotton jumped forward 34 to 54 points on heavy trading in which foreign buying was an important factor. Demand for cotton goods also was strong. Liverpool prices were up a limit of 25 points for the third consecutive session. Large dealings were particularly noticeable during the early part of trading. The close for December was 11.56 cents.

Wheat was just as sensational, large-scale buying by professionals lifting futures the limit of 5 cents a bushel to the best levels of the season. Reports of intensified drought in the United States and crop damage in Argentina contributed to the buying wave. The close was up 3⅞ to 4⅞ cents a bushel and dollar wheat appeared on the board for the first time since October, 1937. It was the sharpest rise in this staple since the outbreak of the war.

Other commodities also turned in a good performance although their advances were not as sensational as in cotton and wheat. Silk was up 15 cents, the limit allowed. Hide futures added 11 to 19 points, sugar futures were up 3 to 6 points, cocoa 11 to 15 points and cottonseed oil 29 to 35 points. Declines were registered in copper futures, off 1 to 3 points and coffee futures were irregular, closing 5 points higher to 13 points lower. Rye, oats and corn futures followed wheat to sharply higher levels.

Am. Tel. at Year's High

On the big board the trading attention was centered on the recent speculative favorites but some of the old line leaders also came to the fore. American telephone, for instance, went to a new high for the year and closed with a good fractional advance. The two united States gypsum issues were in favor, each adding 3½ points. Farm issues were in favor, moving along with the higher grain prices. International harvester closed up 2¾, oliver farm equipment added about a point and Deere was up a fraction.

Aviation stocks moved along with the general trend but their action has not been as sensational as their reports of earnings and shipments would lead one to believe. The explanation doubtless lies in the uncertainties regarding the war. Virtually all of the first line companies are doing a big business but the street is fearful what might happen to their orders in the event of a short war, Curtiss-Wright was the most active issues on the big board today, followed by United Air Lines. Gains of around 1 to 2 points were made by such leaders as smelting, Bethlehem, D. & H., D. L. & W., Du Pont, Motors, Central, Nickel plate, Pennsylvania, Republic Steel, Sears, Southern Pacific, Union Carbide, Steel and Westinghouse. Chrysler was up 2¾.

News from the field of business remained favorable. The electric power and light industry is operating at its top for all time, output last week gaining 1.4 per cent over the preceding week. The steel industry, according to Iron Age, has backlogs which are still heavy, even though new business is being received in a diminishing volume. Unfavorable was a further accumulation of gasoline stocks.

Bond Market Steady

Listed bonds were quiet today, with the undertone firm in all sections with the exception of foreign dollar obligations. United States Treasury securities showed only smallest fractional variations, as attention still was centered on the available exchange of $1,378,000,000 March notes for new bonds or notes.

C. & O. Appoints C. B. Kincaid D. C. Passenger Agent

Among the changes in the passenger personnel of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway, announced yesterday by T. H. Gurney, passenger traffic manager and effective January 1, is the appointment of C. B. Kincaid to be assistant general passenger agent with headquarters here. He succeeds F. E. Landmeier, district passenger agent.

Mr. Kincaid began service with the C. & O. in Washington as assistant city ticket agent in 1920, and has since held various positions in Philadelphia, New York City and Cincinnati. Other changes are:

George W. Christoffal will become assistant to general passenger agent, with headquarters at Richmond, Va.

J. C. Turner will succed George W. Christoffel as manager, bureau of conventions and tours, with headquarters at Richmond, Va.

C. W. Haynes will become assistant general passenger agent, with headquarters at Cincinnati, Ohio, vice C. B. Kincaid, assistant general passenger agent.

F. E. Landmeier will become district passenger agent, with headquarters at Chicago, Ill., vice C. W. Haynes, district passenger agent.

W. P. Walker will become district passenger agent, with headquarters at New York City, vice J. C. Turner, traveling passenger agent.

Steel Orders Ample to Keep Mills Active

Speculation Factors Are Now Removed Iron Age Says

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 13.—The size of first-quarter backlogs in the steel industry precludes the possibility of a sharp decline in operating rates, Iron Age said today in its weekly survey.

"With speculative factors removed from the market by the virtually unchanged price structure, a closer balance between production and consumption is likely to be arrived at in the coming few months, during which time the trend of operations may be slightly downward," the trade magazine said.

"A 2-point decline in ingot production to 91½ per cent for this week is partly due to furnace repairs and partly to a relaxing of pressure in some steel rolling departments brought about by a moderate falling off in specifications and the cumulative effect of recent heavy production and shipments.

"While evidence is still lacking of burdening inventories in the hands of consumers and distributors, it is apparent that users are less concerned about future supplies than they were a month or two ago.

"Prospects for 1940 will be enhanced to the extent that foreign business alone might not produce a high rate of operations throughout the year. Great Britain reports heavy export demand for steel, while inquiries here are also substantial.

"Scrap prices have declined further in some districts but there are indications, particularly at Pittsburgh and Chicago, that the bottom of the decline or close to it may have been reached."

The Iron Age scrap composite price has declined 17 cents to $18.08.

Boston Wool Market

Boston, Dec. 13 (AP) (U. S. Dept. of Agriculture).—Fine domestic wools were receiving a demand in Boston today at firm to strengthening prices. Good French combing-length fine territory wools in original bags were bringing around $1, scoured basis. Average 12-month Texas wools were moving occasionally at 98 cents to $1.03, scoured basis, while choice lots of bulk staple combing length were bringing around $1.05, scoured basis. Some fine delaine bright fleece wool has been sold at prices within the range 40@43 cents, in the grease, or $1.05 to $1.08, scoured basis.

Week's Power Output Largest on Record

New York, Dec. 13 (AP).—The Nation's generating plants produced 2,585,580,000 kilowatt-hours of energy in the week of December 9, the largest amount on record, the Edison Electric Institute reported today. Moving even higher than seasonally anticipated the latest total was 1.8 per cent ahead of 2,538,777,000 kilowatt-hours in the preceding week and 11.5 per cent more than 2,318,550,000 in the comparable 1938 week.

The Associated Press Power Index, based on 1929-30 as 100, advanced to 129.1 from 128.8 in the previous week. A year ago the index, which is adjusted for seasonal and long-term trend, stood at 117.2.

SUPERMAN — A Break For Lois — By Jerry Siegel and Joe Shuster

SINCE LOIS WILL BE REINSTATED ON THE NEWS STAFF IF SHE TURNS IN THIS SCOOP, I'LL PASS UP THE STORY!
SUPERMAN TRANSFORMS HIMSELF INTO CLARK KENT . . .
HERE COME SERGEANT CRANE AND HIS MEN IN RESPONSE TO LOIS' CALL!
HELLO, SERGEANT! ANYTHING IN THE WIND?
YES—COME ALONG!
SOMEONE PHONED HEADQUARTERS, AND—!
LOIS! ARREST THESE MEN! I HAVE THEIR CONFESSION!

JOE PALOOKA — Must of Been the Wind — BY HAM FISHER

AS KNOBBY AND JOE SLEEP, THE FIGURE OF THEIR TRAVELING COMPANION STEALTHILY ENTERS THEIR CABIN AND AS QUIETLY STEALS OUT AGAIN.
WHAT WAS THAT?
HUH··· W-WHAT·
I THO'T I HEARD YOU WALKIN' AROUND · I'M SORRY I WOKE YOUSE UP.
MUST OF BEEN THE WIND···· I WOKE UP THINKIN' I HEARD A NOISE.
DARN IT. I WAS HAVIN' A SWELL DREAM·· WISH I COULD TAKE UP WHERE IT LEFT OFF.

WINNIE WINKLE — Please Note — BY BRANNER

HEY, BILL WRIGHT! IS THAT YOU?
WELL, FOR — !! STEVE BODEY!! AND DAVEY JONES!! HELLO, YOU BOZOS!
WHAT ARE YOU DOING?
C'MON WITH US! WE'RE RUNNING UP TO CAMPUS CITY TO THE FRAT HOUSE! THE GANG WILL BE GLAD TO SEE YOU!
I CAN'T! I'M WORKING AT THE CALDO CLUB WITH MY WIFE! WE START WORK AT SEVEN AT NIGHT!
DON'T BE AN OAF! WE'LL BE BACK BEFORE THAT!
WE'LL GET YOU BACK IN PLENTY OF TIME!
WELL, ALL RIGHT! BUT I'LL LEAVE WINNIE A NOTE SO SHE WON'T WORRY!
THERE! WHEN SHE RETURNS, SHE'LL KNOW WHERE I'VE GONE!
FINE! NOW LET'S SHOVE OFF!
BOY! WILL THE FELLOWS BE GLAD TO SEE OUR OLD "DUKES" WRIGHT!

MR. AND MRS. — On the Trail of the Dust — BY ARTHUR FOLWELL AND ELLISON HOOVER

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

A demi-slam, as the advocates of a new scoring system would call it, was made on today's hand by H. A. when one of his adversaries showed a strong reluctance to take an ace.

Today's Hand

Neither Side Vulnerable
NORTH DEALER

NORTH: ♠ J 10 8 ♡ A K 10 4 3 ◇ K Q 8 7 ♣ Q
WEST: ♠ A K 6 4 3 2 ♡ J 9 6 ◇ 9 ♣ A 10 9
EAST: ♠ Q 9 7 5 ♡ 8 7 2 ◇ A 6 4 2 ♣ J 2
SOUTH: H. A. ♠ None. ♡ Q 5 ◇ J 10 5 3 ♣ K 8 7 6 5 4 3

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	4 ♣	Pass
5 ♣	Pass	Pass	Dble.
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: K ♠.

This so confused the other opponent that he trumped a trick needlessly and gave declarer the opportunity to make the hand. H. A. was able to throw his remaining losers in the suit on dummy's high cards. Here is the way he describes it:

"When the dummy was spread out, I realized that the contract was doomed, as a diamond and two trump tricks, at least, must be lost. There was nothing left for me to do but pray.

"My prayers were answered as my East-hand opponent became inspired with the idea that top cards must not be played until forced out.

"The opening lead was ruffed in my hand; a small club led to dummy's queen was taken by West's ace. East throwing the deuce.

"West led the singleton nine of diamonds, dummy played low and East, guided by the aforesaid inspiration, held on to the ace and my jack won. I returned a diamond; West trumped with the nine of clubs. A spade return was ruffed by me, and the king of clubs extracted the adverse trumps and my two diamonds were discarded on dummy's hearts. The contract was made, losing only the ace and nine of clubs.

"My East-hand opponent blamed the experts who always preach to hold on to aces. I wonder whether they do?"

YESTERDAY'S ANSWER.

Roosevelt Silent On Appointments

President Roosevelt brushed aside yesterday questions about filling a number of important vacancies in the judiciary and in the executive establishment.

Listen! with Slocum

The busiest spot in these parts is not a department store with only nine shopping days left (count 'em), as you might think. It's the site of WJSV's new 50,000-watt transmitting plant at Wheaton, Md., just north of Kensington.

Workmen from a dozen trades swarm over the swanky, ultra-modern building. Already the three 340-foot antenna towers have altered the complexion of the countryside. When the plant is completed a new sightseeing spot becomes available, an old familiar landmark near Alexandria will pass (the existing 10,000-watt transmitter on Memorial Boulevard) and the name of the Nation's Capital will be pushed out to new and distant sections of the world.

Reaching listeners in all corners of this continent is nothing new, of course, for the WJSV at its present power. Last week, for instance, a contribution to the "They Need Shoes" campaign came in from a West Coast Canadian province. And Art Godfrey has one very devoted fan in Scotland and listeners report in from every State. But this new transmitter will do tricks the present one never thought of.

About February 1 the building will be opened to the public; architecturally arranged to show all the works and how the thing ticks. And if you can stand under one of those 340-foot steel needles and fail to be a little awed by the fact that a little 6 or 8-inch insulator actually supports the tons of weight above and not be impressed you're an extraordinary citizen indeed.

The Columbia Workshop presents "Dogtown Common," an original dramatic poetic legend of Cape Cod, by the Poet Joseph Liss at 10:00 p. m. tonight . . . You remember Jim McWilliams, don't you; his ASK IT BASKET program is on tonight from 8:00 to 8:30 p. m., WJSV . . . and Major Bowes original Amateur Hour salutes Grand Rapids, Mich., tonight at 9.

"The DOCTOR" by MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

Chapter 12

HE WAS BOTH hungry and disgusted, as with the stealth of a burglar he entered the house that night, and he was shivering with cold in the dark front office when at last he heard hesitating steps on the pavement, and a key cautiously inserted in the front door. He waited until the door had opened and closed again. Then he spoke very quietly, "Katie, come in here, please."

She did not move. She stood where she was, a small dark shadow with a whitish blotch above it which was her face. Then she made a quick move toward the door again, and he reached her just in time to prevent her escape. He caught her by the arm and jerked her into the room, closing the door after her and turning on the light switch.

"You silly little fool," he said furiously. "Do you know where you've been? And what I got you out of?" In hi sraw anger he shook her. "What business is it of mine to hunt the dives of this town for you? I've got something better to do."

"You got me out? Oh, God"

He looked at her. Her face was swollen with crying, her eyes terrified, almost desperate. He released her arm and took a turn around the room.

"Get this," he said, "and get it now. I promised your father to look after you, and I've tried to do it. But I've about reached the end, and tonight has finished me."

Katie went a dead white and caught at the table for support. "You're not going to leave, are you?"

He swung on her. "You were drinking last night. That's true, isn't it?"

"I never did before, Chris. I never drank anything."

"Well, you made a good start," he said savagely. He did not even notice her use of his name. "I suppose you know where you've been? Or did you know before you went?"

She shook her head. "I passed out, I guess. There was a woman there, and she said she'd take me home. I didn't know until today when I woke up. I was going to jump out the window."

He saw that she was telling the truth, although perhaps not all of it; and she looked entirely exhausted. He pushed a chair behind her, and she dropped into it as if her knees would no longer hold her.

"Does Mom know?"

"No."

"Are you going to tell her? It would kill her, Chris."

He considered that, his head thrust forward. It was futile to expect anything from Lily but tears and recriminations, and the affair was too grave for either. Katie had escaped once, but another time it might not be so easy. And he did not want the girl driven to the street.

"I'll think about it, Katie," he said more gently. "But you'll have to fix up a story that she'll believe. What on earth made you do it? Take those drinks, I mean."

And then to his utter horror she slid off the chair to the floor at his feet and began to sob.

"I was so wretched, Chris. You never even see me. You look at me as though I wasn't there. And I'm so crazy about you, so crazy about you."

He was almost frozen with consternation.

"You silly little fool! Get up and stop crying. What do you know about love anyhow? Get up and stop this nonsense."

Chris was red with indignation and embarrassment when Katie dragged herself to her feet, but she looked so crushed that for the first time he felt a faint stirring of pity for her. After all, she was hardly more than a child, a foolish, romantic child; and she must have had a pretty thin time that day, to say the least.

"Listen," he said. "When did you eat last?"

"I don't know. Last night, I guess."

"That's what's wrong with you. Suppose you sit here while I make some coffee and find some bread and butter. I missed my dinner, too."

"I'll do it," she said, and got up. "And—just forget what I said, Doctor. I guess I was excited. I kind of lost my head. I didn't mean it, you know."

He was glad to let it go at that, to believe it was true. When the odor of boiling coffee brought Lily Walters down somewhat later, it was to find them companionably cutting bread and butter, and to listen to Katie's carefully invented story of having danced until morning and slept all day at the home of some girl she called Gert.

"You might at least have let me know."

"They haven't any telephone, Mom."

And that was all. Chris, listening to this exchange, could only marvel at the ease with which Katie had covered 24 hours of sheer drama and near tragedy. It was fantastic, incredible. But then the whole situation was fantastic. Sitting there at the kitchen table, eating incredible quantities of bread and drinking vast quantities of hot coffee, he surveyed what now amounted to his family; a helpless woman, a foolish girl, and a mongrel dog. His family!

He did not go to sleep for some time that night. Beyond the partition Katie was tossing restlessly, and he thought that she was crying. The little fool. He rapped on the wall.

"Listen, child," he called. "It's all over, and it's all right. Forget it and get some sleep."

"All right," she called back in a small voice. "Just so you're not angry."

"Who, me? I'm never angry."

He thought he heard her laugh a little, and at that he turned over and went to sleep.

ON THE first of December the Staunton Lewises gave their first dinner of the season—three footmen and Holmes in the hall, a table set with purple-and-white orchids in the dining room, and the driveway filled with the miscellany of the period; sleek horses and carriages, automobiles, and even here and there a taxicab.

Annie Lewis, faced with filling a vacancy at the last moment, suggested Chris Arden, to have it vetoed promptly by Beverly.

"He wouldn't come. Why bother?"

"Wouldn't come? What on earth do you mean?"

"He doesn't like us," said Beverly. "We're the dust under his feet. Ask him if you like, of course."

"Why in heaven's name doesn't he like us?" Annie inquired, bewildered.

"I gathered that we caused the epidemic last summer."

"Dear me," said Annie, still more bewildered. "We've been blamed for many things, but never before because it didn't rain. Are you sure?"

"That's what he told me," said Beverly, and went off to dress, leaving her mother to fill the empty place—which she finally did with Jerry Ames.

o+o

ANNIE dressed carefully, with Martha's help, powdering her face, getting into her handsome evening dress with its train, picking up her enormous feathered fan. But she was thinking hard, and at the last moment she trailed into the dining room and changed the cards, putting Jerry the length of the table from Beverly.

She went back into the drawing room and tried to ease her dress, which was tight over the bosom. Then Staunton came in, immaculate in black and white, and she tried to forget that nagging secret pain in her breast, and that a young doctor blamed them for what she considered an act of God—and prepared to greet her guests. She hated these dinner parties, but she knew that Staunton enjoyed them. It pleased him to see at his table the wealth and power of the city, to offer them the best food, the best wine. Like his house, they were the tangible evidences of his success.

He would sit at the head of the table, watching the service, the people, the flowers. He seemed bigger, somehow, seated there. Certainly he felt large, dominating, important. It was at such times that he tasted to the full the flavor of his success.

But that night he saw that Jerry was seated far from Beverly, and Annie saw him frown.

Never mind. Don't worry about him. Keep them apart, Annie thought.

Jerry, thus reinstated, was tremendously cheerful, however. His eyes were on Beverly as much as possible, and when the men joined the women later, he sought her out.

"Lovelier than ever, darling," he said.

"I'm not your darling, Jerry. I've told you that."

"No?" Well, I'm a persistent sort of devil. Never give up, and that sort of thing. Can't we get away and go somewhere?"

She shook her head. He was young and good to look at, but he meant nothing to her. Nevertheless, she smiled.

"You can't always get away and go somewhere, Jerry."

"Why not? I'd go anywhere with you."

She had a sudden impulse of frankness to tell him that she was in love with a young doctor in a worn suit and a faded shirt, who had a nasty temper and no manners whatever. But she controlled it. Jerry would only laugh again and set to work with more determination. He was like that.

Later on that night she went into her mother's room. Annie, taking off her pearls and putting them into the wall safe, looked tired, and Beverly lingered for a moment or two.

"It went well, Beverly. Don't you think so?"

"Very. But I wish—Mother, are you sure you're all right?"

Annie controlled her voice carefully. "I'm only tired."

"Do we have to have these parties?"

"Your father likes them. And I don't mind. Don't worry about me, Beverly. I'm all right. What is all this about Dr. Arden? I liked him so much."

"I like him, too, rather," Beverly said slowly. "But he doesn't care for any of us. Mother, if Father says anything about Barney making him city physician——"

"What has Barney to do with it?"

"I went to him."

That was the moment. They were closer then than they had been for a long time, the bars down, woman to woman. Then Martha came in to help Annie out of her dress, and Beverly made a small gesture and went out.

JOKE'S ON YOU! I HAVEN'T GOT FIVE DOLLARS!
WALT DISNEY

DON WINSLOW OF THE NAVY — Out of the Fog — BY FRANK MARTINEK

I SEE! TO USE THESE NUMBERS AS THE KEY TO THE CIPHER YOU COUNT FORWARD IN THE ALPHABET AS MANY PLACES AS THE NUMBER FOUND ABOVE EACH LETTER OF THE JUMBLED MESSAGE
THEN R COUNTING FORWARD ONE SPACE- BECOMES S AND THE NEXT LETTER, R - COUNTING FORWARD THREE SPACES BECOMES U
THAT'S RIGHT! WHY, GREAT SCOTT!
THE WHOLE MESSAGE NOW READS, "SUBMERGING TO AVOID COAST GUARD. WILL SIGNAL WHEN ALL IS CLEAR"!
WOW! DIDN'T I TELL YOU-
WE CAN'T LAUGH THE KID OFF NOW, SKIPPER! SOUNDS LIKE HE'S REALLY GOT SOMETHING!

NED BRANT—A Story of College Athletics — BY BOB ZUPPKE

LET GO THAT STICK! YOU BROUGHT HER UP INTO A WHIP-STALL! DO YOU REALIZE WHAT'S GOING TO HAPPEN NOW?
STOPPING DEAD IN THE AIR, THE SHIP'S NOSE DROPS SUDDENLY AND SHE GOES INTO A SCREAMING DIVE TOWARD THE EARTH—
GOOD HEAVENS! THE KID'S FROZEN AT THE CONTROLS— I HATE TO DO THIS, BUT IT MIGHT SAVE OUR LIVES!
IF I PULL HER OUT OF THIS DIVE IN THE DISTANCE I'VE GOT, IT'LL BE A MIRACLE!

APPLE MARY AND DENNIE — Mary Worth's Family — By Dale Allen

WHY.. WHAT'S WRONG, LEONA?
OH, MRS WORTH! I'M SUCH A LITTLE IDIOT!
ARE YOU JUST FINDIN' THAT OUT?
BILL! GO AWAY! NOW, CHILD, TELL ME ALL ABOUT IT!
I-I PROMISED PRINCE FREDERIC LAST NIGHT TO MARRY HIM!
AND YOU'RE SHEDDING TEARS OF JOY?
JOY? I'M MISERABLE! I DON'T WANT TO MARRY THAT OLD STUFFED SHIRT! I WANT TO MARRY TED!
AHEM! MAY I BE SO BOLD AS TO SUGGEST?—YOU'LL FIND MR. TED IN THE CONSERVATORY NOW!
